[Text] Tokyo, April 7 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Wednesday strongly hinted his intention to meet South Korea's request for commodity aid with a positive attitude. Speaking at a meeting of the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee, he also revealed the idea of visiting South Korea to bring the pending problem of Japan-South Korea economic cooperation to a political settlement. He was responding to a question by Takako Doi, Socialist, about whether the foreign minister had any intention of visiting South Korea on other, noneconomic, matters.

The foreign minister replied that he might go to South Korea to sign an agreement after the conclusion of aid negotiations on the administrative level, or to make a final settlement through top-level talks in the event of a breakdown in these negotiations. As for the commodity aid which has been strongly requested by South Korea, the foreign minister stated that administrative authorities concerned are studying whether the request of South Korea is reasonable and perhaps subject to Japanese consideration. He also stated that it was not correct to say that the Japanese side was not paying due attention to South Korea's request.

Doi contended that commodity aid conflicts with Japan's basic principles for economic cooperation. The foreign minister, however, replied that he cannot disapprove commodity aid outright, because the South Korean side coupled its request for this kind of aid with an explanation of its internal circumstances and because the Japanese side, too, has been probing the possibility of granting commodity aid to South Korea.

The South Korean Government recently rejected an interim plan proposed by the Japanese side in reply to South Korea's request for economic cooperation. According to this plan, the Japanese side would finance 11 South Korean projects, to a total amount of dollar 3,500 million, through the advancement of yen loans and Export-Import Bank loans and private bank loans, but would not grant commodity aid requested by South Korea (dollar 2,500 million).

After the South Korean side rejected this plan, the government ordered Ambassador to South Korea Toshikazu Maeda to return home temporarily, to start formulation of its final negotiation plan. The reaction of the South Korean side to Foreign Minister Sakurauchi's plan to visit South Korea in May for the settlement of the economic cooperation issue on the political level is being awaited.

[Text] Nagoya, April 7 (KYODO) -- Visiting Chinese Vice Premier Bo Yibo Wednesday indicated his country hopes to promote technical interchanges with Japanese automakers. Bo dropped the hint when he and his entourage conferred with executives of Toyota Motor Co., including President Eiji Toyoda, at the No. 1 Japanese auto company's head office in nearby Toyoda.

He told Toyota executives that Japanese-built cars are very popular among the Chinese and that China has much to learn from Toyota's advanced automobile production technology. After the conference, Bo toured Toyota's engine and other plants for about two hours.

The Chinese vice premier, visiting Japan at the invitation of the Foreign Ministry, is scheduled to visit Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. in Osaka Thursday.

BANK OF JAPAN TO STEM FURTHER FALL OF YEN VALUE

OW071341 Tokyo KYODO in English 0802 GMT 7 Apr 82

[Text] Tokyo, April 7 (KYODO) -- Haruo Maekawa, governor of the Bank of Japan, said Wednesday that the central bank was resolved to "use every avilable means" to stem a further fall in the yen's exchange value. Maekawa did not elaborate, but his press conference remark was taken to signal that the monetary authorities were ready to invoke emergency powers under law to check an outflow of capital.

The governor said that the territorial dispute between Britain and Argentina had sent the pound sterling downward but that the Japanese yen was now weak compared with other European currencies.

"But I see no domestic factors causing the yen's drop and whenever the yen tends to fall, we will prevent it by using every available means," Maekawa said.

Referring to the latest money supply figures, which showed a sixth consecutive monthly double-digit growth last month, he said the present level was not dangerously high but was nearing an upper permissible limit. "It is not desirable for the money supply to grow faster than now," he added.

U.S. 'PROVOCATIONS' PROTESTED AT MAC MEETING

[Text] Kaesong, April 7 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors are ceaselessly committing provocations against our side, bringing a machinegun and other automatic rifles into the Joint Security Area of Panmunjom in wanton violation of the armistice agreement and order established in this area. In this connection our side called a security officers' meeting at the conference room of the Military Armistice Commission at Panmunjom on April 7. At the meeting our side pointed out that the U.S. imperialists are these days further aggravating the situation in the Joint Security Area.

According to the statement of the security officer of our side at the meeting, at around 8 hours 50 minutes on April 6 the enemy brought a machinegun and cartridge box by truck into a post of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces northwest of the conference room area. This is a very grave criminal act not only heightening tension in the Joint Security Area but also seriously endangering security there.

The U.S. imperialists are also continuously committing outrageous provocations against our side in the Joint Security Area. At around 8 hours on April 4, a U.S. soldier at a post of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces southeast of the conference room shouted at personnel of our side at a post on the opposite side and committed the grave provocative act of threatening with a gesture of stabbing them with a dagger. The U.S. imperialist aggressors are introducing almost everyday armed personnel in excess of the designated number into the Joint Security Area and acting there arbitrarily not wearing a designated specific insignia. Such provocations and violations by the enemy numbered 18 in the period from March 26 to April 6.

The security officer of our side, showing photo materials, exposed these criminal acts of the enemy in the Joint Security Area, protested against them and strongly demanded the enemy side to take responsible steps for the discontinuation of such acts. With no excuse can the enemy side shirk its responsibility for its criminal acts, the security officer of our side declared. He stated that the number of provocations and violations by the enemy side was 34 in January this year, 42 in February and 46 in March. This clearly proves that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are deliberately scheming, acting indiscreetly in the Joint Security Area, to heighten tension there, he said.

In conclusion the security officer of our side sternly warned the enemy side that it had better act with discretion, pondering over the possible consequences of its provocations and violations

TEXT OF COMMENTARY ON REAGAN TONGA-A ILBO REMARKS

SK072304 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1248 GMT 6 Apr 82

[NODONG SINMUN 6 April commentary: "Criminal Act Openly Encouraging Puppets to War and Division"]

[Text] In a special interview with TONG-A ILBO, a South Korean newspaper, U.S. President Reagan made remarks on issues raised by the paper such as South Korean-U.S. relations, North and South Korean relations and the situation on the Korean Peninsula.

In the interview, Reagan said there is no plan to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea, babbling that he would do whatever is necessary to fulfill the U.S. commitments to defend the South Korean puppet clique. He also expressed his support for puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan's proposal for peaceful reunification. The interview with TONG-A ILBO draws the attention of the people since it officially manifests the aggressive Korean policy of the U.S. Government, persisting in a policy of occupation of South Korea and the line of division and war against the Korean people.

It is malrevised version of the South Korea-U.S. joint statement for which puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan was summoned early last year and is a new order more zealously instigating the puppet clique to its execution.

For a year or so since last year, the puppet traitor, as a faithful stooge of the new master, has run amok to execute the U.S. imperialists' policy of war and division. This is how the puppet traitor came to be denounced and rejected at home and abroad. Reagan held the special interview in an effort to give a shot in the arm to traitor Chon Tu-hwan, now in a quandary, and to instigate him more zealously to treachery. This proves that the Reagan administration surpasses preceding U.S. administrations in pursuing a malicious, hostile policy against the Korean people.

In the so-called interview, Reagan said he had no plan to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea and that he would do his best to honor commitments to defend the South Korean puppet clique. This is an aggressive outburst betraying the U.S. imperialists' intention to continue occupying South Korea and their war scheme. This means that the United States would maintain a hold on and dominate South Korea as a permanent colony and an aggressive military bridgehead for world supremacy, evincing the aggressive and bellicose nature of the Reagan administration.

Reagan's claim that the U.S. policy of occupation of South Korea and war is intended to defend peace and freedom from someone's threats is a sheer lie and gangster-like logic to justify the aggressive policy toward Korea. As history and reality show, not even once has the United States given thought to peace in Korea and the freedom of the Korean people. All of its actions have proceeded -- and proceed -- from its ambition for aggression against Korea. Moreover, the Reagan administration acts most shamelessly in carrying out the U.S. policy toward Korea. People remember vividly that Reagan, during his election campaign the year before last, advocated no troop withdrawal from South Korea and that in a meeting with traitor Chon Tu-hwan, a fascist hangman, early last year he reaffirmed implementation and subjugatory agreement, and canceled the plan to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea.

Today leaders of the U.S. imperialists are unhesitatingly babbling that the Korean Peninsula is an important area vital to the interests of the United States and that it is U.S. policy to maintain its military presence and achieve military superiority on the peninsula and to continue its military occupation of South Korea. That is, the U.S. imperialists regard it as their Korean strategy to carry out, with South Korea as a military base, a policy of aggression and war against the northern half of the republic.

The fact that Reagan reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to defend the puppet clique and the continued presence of U.S. troops in South Korea serves the purpose of holding on to South Korea to step up an arms buildup and war preparations. It is obvious that such a policy runs counter to peace on the Korean Peninsula. Reagan plans no troop withdrawal from South Korea. He is frantically engaged in increasing the U.S. and puppet armed forces. At the recent annual South-U.S. Security Consultative Meeting, the U.S. imperialists disclosed a wicked scheme to accelerate preparations for a new aggressive war, a nuclear war, against the Korean people, babbling that the United States will continue to station troops in South Korea and protect the puppets under the U.S. nuclear umbrella.

The United States has devised a plan of war, a nuclear war, against our republic. To carry it out, it has established a system of joint operations and command of U.S. and puppet armed forces. To perfect preparations for a new war, it conducts large-scale military exercises one after another. At this very hour, the U.S. imperialists, together with the puppet armed forces, are staging "Team Spirit 1982," a war exercise for which U.S. Army, Navy and Air Force units have been brought into South Korea from the U.S. mainland and the Pacific area, driving the situation to the brink of war.

The military exercise is a test war and an experimental war against our republic. It shows that the scheme of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges for a new war is reaching a very grave stage. The fact that the U.S. imperialists say that the exercise is conducive to peace and to the defense of freedom in Korea only shows their shamelessness as aggressors.

The U.S. imperialists' strategy in Korea is an aggressive strategy to keep South Korea as a colony and military base and a war strategy pursuing confrontation in Korea and the Far East. The U.S. attempt to perpetuate the division of our country while pursuing a policy of strength is evinced in the fact that Reagan unjustly slandered us on matters regarding North-South dialogue. It has been our party's consistent policy to resolve the country's reunification question through dialogue and negotiations based on democratic principles and by peaceful means.

All of the many proposals we have made to improve North-South relations and precipitate the country's reunification -- ranging from humanitarian ones designed to relieve dispersed families and relatives of their suffering to those related to establishment of a unified government -- assume North-South contacts and negotiations as a premise. Our recent proposal calling for convocation of a 100-man joint conference as a consultative body for the reunification of the fatherland was also put forth based on this stand. The reason that we do not deal with the present rulers of South Korea is that they are murderers who stained their hands with the blood of patriots and an antinational group still promoting the permanent division of the nation by repressing the people in South Korea and staging war rackets against us. Their proposals are deceptive and have nothing to do with improvement of North-South relations or solution of the reunification question.

It is useless to discuss improvement of North-South relations and reunification with those who obstruct a solution to the national reunification question by keeping foreign troops in the country, hamper negotiations by indiscriminately arresting and imprisoning patriots and democratic personages, and promote North-South confrontation through anticommunist commotions. It is all too clear that nothing affirmative will result from such a discussion.

Their proposals are nothing but camouflage to conceal their splittist nature. In actuality, the proposals for North-South dialogue put forth by the Chon Tu-hwan ring were designed by the policy makers of the U.S. State Department to justify the division of Korea. To boost the image of the South Korean puppets, the United States is staging a drama of supporting the proposals which it worked out. By slandering us with the Chon Tu-hwan clique's false proposals for dialogue, the United States will convince no one.

We have repeatedly made it clear that we will not hesitate to discuss the reunification question with the South Korean rulers if they apologize for the crimes committed before the nation, stop seeking a splittist line and take the road of a large-scale negotiations by releasing the patriots and democratic personages who were unjustly arrested and detained. Whether we will hold a dialogue with the South Korean rulers depends on their attitude. In his interview with TONG-A ILBO, Reagan actively encouraged the Chon Tu-hwan fascist military clique to belligerent and splittist maneuvers, openly ranting that to fulfill the commitments he would not withdraw the aggression forces from South Korea but make all necessary efforts. This shows that the U.S. policy of aggression against our people has not changed.

The United States has continued the military occupation of South Korea for 37 years, while continuing to seek a policy of colonial subjugation. It hinders the solution of the question of Korean reunification to perpetuate the division of Korea and create two Koreas and is disturbing peace in Korea, aggravating the situation there. This draws the concern of the world's people desiring peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification. If the United States truly wants peace in Korea and its peaceful refunification, it must stop encouraging the South Korean puppets and leading the situation to a dangerous phase, persisting in an anachronistic policy of strength, and seek a realistic way for a fair solution to the Korean question.

To ease tension and preserve and make lasting peace in our country and promote a peaceful settlement of the reunification question, the armistice agreement must be replaced with a peace agreement. Whether the United States agrees to replace the armistice agreement with a peace agreement and immediately withdraws its troops from South Korea or persists in a policy of aggression and war, adhering to its obstinate position, is a key in determining whether it truly wants peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification.

The United States must abandon its position of pursuing the splittist line, meddling in the domestic affairs of another country, think and act with discretion and take its hands of interference off Korea. This will totally accord with the interests and desires of the U.S. citizens. If the United States continues a policy of occupation in South Korea and the protection of the fascist elements and the encouragement of their military terrorist rule and splittist maneuvers, it will be unable to escape the bitter denunciation which our people and the world's people make against the aggressor and splittist.

O PAEK-YONG REVIEWS LEADERSHIP OF KIM IL-SONG

SK290510 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2219 GMT 28 Mar 82

[NODONG SINMUN 29 March special article: "Respected and Beloved Leader Comrade Kim Il-song Is Great Communist Revolutionary Fighter Who Has Weathered Severe Storm of Revolution" -- KCNA identifies this as a full-page article by Comrade O Paek-yong]

[Text] Our people are tenaciously living and marching forward with greater ambition for and confidence in certain victory in the future. Such optimism by our people about the future of revolution is firm and resolute, formed and solidified in the severe flames of struggle.

The Korean revolution has trodden an unprecedentedly arduous path. However, thanks to the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our Korean communists and people have always been victorious, overcoming all kinds of hardships.

We, who will soon greet the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, recall the arduous path which the Korean revolution has trodden under the leader's leadership. It is our people's firm belief today that because the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song leads the van, our revolution will, as in the past, be ever-victorious and will be able to vigorously march forward toward the brighter future.

1. The history of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary activities is one of heroic struggle during wich he has achieved victories by weathering the severest storms of the revolution.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows: If he wants to gain victory in the revolution, one should not fear difficulties, but should courageously overcome them.

The cause of socialism and communism, which is changing the world in a revolutionary fashion and is realizing mankind's wishes, is accompanied by a fierce struggle for liquidating all kinds of old-fashioned things and for creating new ones. This struggle is glorious work; however, it is not always carried out smoothly. We cannot imagine a struggle without difficulties. Accordingly, we cannot imagine a victorious advance and consummation of the revolution without a heroic struggle for overcoming arduous ordeals.

The whole path of the Korean revolution is a proud one which has established the fact that the revolution, which has overcome ordeals, and the people, who have been tempered by difficulties, have nothing to fear. Only victory and glory await them. The great history of the indomitable struggle was created by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Determinedly braving the severest storm of struggle, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has always led the revolution to victory. The fact that the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has trodden such an arduous path of struggle for a long time is connected to the traits of our revolutionary cause and to the heavy duty assigned to the cause.

The cause pioneered and led by the respected and beloved leader is a sacred national cause for achieving the fatherland's liberation and prosperity under the banner of the chuche ideology and is a great global cause for liquidating all kinds of domination and subordination from the earth and completely achieving the people's independence.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has devoted himself throughout his entire life to achieving such a glorious and great cause. The path of his struggle has been a creative one along which he has had to resolve imaginatively all problems while resolutely divorcing himself from all old-fashioned things; it has been a path of bloody struggle along which he has had to survive life-or-death crises and seek difficult escape-routes; and it has been a path of global changes along which he has pioneered a new era of independence. Viewed in the light of the arduousness and complexity of the struggle and of its copious achievements and its great influence affecting (?the development of the times), we do not know of a more glorious or greater struggle than this.

The path of struggle along which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has trodden is a heroic epic about his keeping numerous crises confronting the revolution at bay and has firmly preserved the revolution. During its whole period, the Korean revolution has trod the most arduous path, unprecedented in the history.

The Korean communists and people had to undergo difficult struggles before and after they seized power. Korea has been an outpost along which class struggle and the struggle against imperialism were most fiercely waged. We had to fight against the most outrageous and cruel aggressors -- the marauders -- who had had the ambition to dominate the world. We also had to wage a serious struggle against the opportunists who had emerged from within the communist movement. Our country had also been afflicted by world-famous backwardness and destitution in the past and had suffered severe destruction through two wars. The division of the country raised a big obstacle to the uniform development of the country and brought boundless misfortune to the entire nation.

The difficulties and hardships confronting our revolution have been severe ones on which the fate of the country and nation hinges and on which the future of the party and revolution depend. However, we have faced many difficulties along the path of our revolution; but we have met with no failure. We have faced difficulties, but there have been none that we could not resolve. That is because the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, leading in the van, has overcome the arduous hardships.

Always in defiance of the danger and pain confronting him, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song prevailed over the crises emerging in the revolution. All kinds of hardships confronting the party, fatherland and the people at every strategically important stage of our revolution have been overcome victoriously by the great leader. During the severe days of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song mercilessly mowed down the Japanese imperialist aggressors, while personally advancing along the roads, attacking them with a machinegun in his hands. During the fierce days of war, he led the way to victory at the foremost front where the ammunition and shells fell.

Without the great leader's devoted struggle, we do not think it would have been possible that in the days of the anti-Japanese struggle, the aftermath of the struggle against the ultra-leftist (?Minsaengdan) disappeared, the unity of the revolutionary ranks and the life of the Korean revolution were preserved and that under difficult circumstances, after the war, revolutionary upsurges took effect and a firm struggle for the establishment of chuche was carried out.

At each time of hardship, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with dexterous organizational skills and extraordinary revolutionary driving force, mounted an all-out offense of all the party and all the people to break through the hardships, resulting in difficulties being transformed into ease and bad luck into good luck. Thus, although the enemies at home and abroad maneuvered in a spiteful way and the situation was not in our favor, our party and revolution were firmly defended. It was really a history full of heroic exploits which can be seen only in the revolution led by a great leader.

The path of revolutionary activities trod by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song was the most glorious path of struggle along which he has most brilliantly accomplished the most difficult and vast historic tasks.

Revolution is a course during which all old-fashioned things are liquidated and new ones gain victories. Therefore, we are always faced with complicated and vast tasks in the fierce class struggle or in a struggle for building a new society. The course, during which the cause of the working class is advancing and is being consummated, is one in which all these tasks rising from every stage of revolution are successfully resolved.

The Korean revolution started from an outdated colonial and semi-feudal society and had to undergo various difficulties. It had to go through many stages of development and carry out particularly vast and arduous historical tasks. No revolution in history carried out so difficult and so great a cause as the Korean revolution did in the breadth, scope and depth of its tasks. This great cause was victoriously carried out only under the leadership of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The revolutionary tasks at various stages for the realization of the independence of the working masses such as the national liberation revolution, democratic revolution, socialist revolution and socialist construction have been fulfilled successfully in succession in our country under the wise guidance of the great leader. This course was a history of exploits creating miracles of attaining in only a few years what had not been achieved in thousands of years. This was a history of victory setting brilliant examples in all domains of revolution and construction.

He has always met numerous difficult and complicated tasks arising in the struggle for the independence and sovereignty of the country, grandeur and prosperity of the fatherland and for the happiness of the people, taking it all upon himself. Thus, the guidance idea of the revolution and all lines and policy of the party and the state were put forward by the respected leader and all works to embody them were organized and led only by the leader.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded, strengthened and developed the KWP, which has ever-victorious might, the government of the republic and invincible revolutionary armed forces. He is victoriously leading all works from the work of remodeling the people to the work of training national cadres, including economic construction, overseas compatriots movement, national reunification and foreign affairs. No works, from important issues concerning the destiny of the party and revolution to questions on the people's livelihood and education of children, fell short of the deep concern, warm care and correct guidance by the respected leader. The great leader brilliantly resolved unimaginably vast and gigantic historic tasks, taking them all upon himself. Thus, a ceaseless upsurge took place in all sectors of the revolution.

The history of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who surmounted all storms of struggle after he embarked on the road of revolution at an early age spans nearly 60 years. He has not taken a good rest, even one day or an hour, in victoriously advancing the revolution through countless trials.

The history of the revolutionary struggle of the working class has not known such a leader as the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who has carried out a gigantic cause, undergoing so great troubles, for the era and revolution, for the fatherland and the people. Thanks to the efforts and devotion of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song to lead victoriously the Korean revolution by overcoming various difficulties, the new era of the great history was opened up and our fatherland and people greeted the golden age as today. Apart from the great leader, we can neither talk about reforms and revolutionary gains in our country nor can we think of the brighter future of the revolution.

2. Respected Comrade Kim Il-song is a great leader who possesses staunch fighting spirit and great practical ability for leading the revolution along the road of victory through rigorous storms of struggle.

The heroic epic shining with miracles and exploits is being created by the outstanding leader. The Korean revolution, which traveled unprecedentedly arduous roads, could be radiant with miracles of the century and exploits only under the guidance of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song. He gave a great practical example for us to surmount difficulties and trials laid before the revolution in the entire course of the long revolutionary struggle. He has fought persistently with an iron will, above all, to accomplish what he pledged and determined when he embarked upon the road of revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Since we resolutely embarked on the road to carry out the revolution, we have constantly solidified and developed our revolutionary outlook in the midst of struggle.

An iron will is a basic requirement for carrying out our revolutionary pledge and resolution under all difficulties. The Korean revolution, carried on amid a series of trials, was a course of the bloody struggle which could not be overcome unless we resolved to sacrifice ourselves. Only a great leader with an iron will could lead brilliantly such a course at the forefront. His revolutionary will is iron-like, without equal in its staunchness and resoluteness.

As the great leader had such a strong will, he could traverse the revolutionary road under any storm by holding fast to his pledge and determination. Achieving to the end the liberation of the fatherland and the sacred cause for the people's freedom and happiness was the pledge made by the respected leader when he embarked on the road of revolution. Indeed, this was a lofty idea and goal of the great struggle which could be cherished and realized only by the great revolutionary.

The nearly 60-year course of revolution of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song is shining as glorious history for preserving and realizing to the end such an idea. The course underwent difficulties and various trials even when the party was founded and consolidated and a new socialist Korea was raised from the ruins, not to mention in the clandestine revolutionary activities and armed struggle period.

However enormous the obstacles and trials might be, he has daringly pushed them aside with the resolution to surmount them at any cost and devoted his all entirely to the revolution, burying his pain and hardships in his heart.

The source of the strength with which our people could bear and overcome all trials each time when the enemy within and without maneuvered overtly and covertly, challenging the party, and when tremendous tasks arose in the revolution and construction is the iron will of the great leader. He made our revolutionary fighters cherish the firm belief that if their will is strong, they can achieve everything and carry out the revolution to the end.

The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song has also led the revolution to victory, cutting through any difficult obstacle with his matchless courage. The difficulties on the advance road of the revolution cannot be automatically overcome. If we are afraid of the difficulties and withdraw from them, the loss will become larger, and we cannot victoriously advance the revolution.

While leading the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has firmly abided by the struggle principle of offensively facing difficulties instead of avoiding them. Having acute insight into the situation, into the assigned revolutionary mission and into the enemy's and our capabilities, the great leader has helped courageously overcome difficulties with revolutionary boldness and flexible strategy and tactics.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's iron will stems from a firm will to encourage people to advance resolutely without the slightest fear, without wavering under adverse circumstances in which millions of vast forces dash toward them. With this iron will, he has helped accomplish the historic task, which took others several centuries to perform, in several years.

At the age of 20 or so the respected and beloved leader established his fame as a young general by defeating with this iron will the million-man force of the Japanese imperialists who ran wild to become the master of Asia, thus victoriously leading the great anti-Japanese struggle. During the grim period when the U.S. imperialist aggressors lighted the fuse of war against our young republic, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song did not waver, but maintained a calm attitude and immediately called the party and the nation to a sacred war to annihilate the enemy. He called on them to counterattack against the enemy, thus destroying many victorious divisions which were reputedly undefeated and making the U.S. imperialists kneel down with a white flag. This was an astounding military miracle which could only be performed by an iron-willed commander who does not waver no matter what thunder or lightening may crash and flash before him.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has helped surely accomplish struggle goals once they are set in military operations and in economic construction no matter how difficult and vast they may be. He has resolutely taken actions to help follow the chuche-type line of the Korean revolution and to protect the basic interest of the revolution no matter how difficult the situation may be.

Without the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's overcoming of difficulties during periods of trials with a matchless iron will, we cannot think of the maintenance of the lifeline of the Korean revolution. The Korean people have proudly demonstrated that they are heroic people who have unflinchingly struggled, going through a sea of blood and fire, thus glorifying the revolution with epochal events. This is the precious fruition of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's bold and flexible leadership.

The more grim the mounting difficulties and trials become, the stronger confidence in victory and the brighter optimism about the future the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song entertained. He has led the revolution to a continuous upsurge. Firm belief in and optimism about victory in the revolution are factors helping overcome all difficulties. It is inevitable that imperialism will meet its downfall and that the cause of socialism and communism will win a final victory.

The situation will continuously change in the course of the advance of the revolution. Although there may be temporary twists and turns, this rule of the development of history will not change. With endless devotion to the revolution and through energetic struggle, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has clearly proved this precious truth.

While developing our revolution and winning victories, we have been in the dark period when we were not certain when we would win victory in our revolution and when the situation was unfavorable in this regard. However, the Korean Communists did not worry about the future path of the revolution. They did not waver when they encountered difficulties. They were not influenced by the trend of the times.

During the grim period of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, there was neither a safe rear area nor government. Encircled by hundreds of thousands of army troops, anti-Japanese guerrillas waged fierce battles at every step. However, they enjoyed an optimistic life, dancing and singing. Even after losing their comrades-in-arms, anti-Japanese guerrillas said they could see victory in the revolution. Facing a heroic death, they pictured before their eyes the future of the liberated fatherland. This optimism about the future stemmed from a belief that, as long as the great leader existed, the revolution would surely become victorious.

Since the first day he embarked on the road of the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has entertained a firm belief in the final victory of the revolutionary cause. He has not stopped his struggle no matter how difficult the circumstances may have been and he has guided our fighters to love always the future and to live and struggle in an optimistic manner. Clearly setting forth struggle goals for overcoming difficulties, he has helped the people entertain greater hope for the future and has led the revolution and construction along an ever victorious road. Because the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has always taken the lead in the cause of victoriously pioneering the future of the revolution with revolutionary energy, our Korean Communists and people have tenaciously lived and struggled, overflowing with a revolutionary spirit.

Without confidence in and optimism about sure victory personally developed and shown by the respected and beloved leader, we would not have overcome difficulties in the Korean march. Nor would we have greeted the great reality we see today. Without the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's strong will and practical struggle to overcome resolutely all difficulties and trials, we cannot imagine the victorious progress of the Korean revolution and all convulsive events in this revolution.

The ironclad will, matchless pluck and revolutionary optimism bestowed to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song stem from his absolute trust in the people. This trust is the starting point of all meditation and activities of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. This is his firm creed. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song firmly believes that the strength of the people is the key to formulating and implementing party and government lines and policies and that, if we promote the awareness of the people and if we rally them, there will be nothing which we cannot do.

Absolutely believing in the strength and wisdom of the people, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has always looked for the working class and the people every time the situation has become complicated and every time difficult tasks have loomed ahead of the party and the revolution. He has overcome all difficulties by mobilizing them.

Today after an interval of decades, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, recalling 10 party members of Nagwon and an elderly woman of Taesong, says he cherished a stronger confidence in victory during difficult periods by listening to their simple and artless remarks. This shows how great is the leader's trust in the people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song absolutely trusts the people. Firmly trusting the leader alone, our people are totally entrusting the leader with their destiny. This absolute trust between the leader and the people and the rock-firm unity based on this trust are the source of the might with which the Korean revolution has been victorious, overcoming all difficulties, and which will enable it to be ever victorious in the future, too.

The history of the victory of our revolution is the history of great unity with which the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has always stayed with the people, has shared weal and woe with them and has overcome many difficulties and trials. His act of brilliantly glorifying the whole course of the protracted revolutionary struggle strewn with immeasurable trials with such a glorious heroic epic constitutes the greatness of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song as the revolutionary fighter of Kangson.

3. The Korean revolution has traversed the road of great victory, overcoming difficulties. Today, its future path is brighter.

It is the firm will of our people that the brighter the future path of the revolution becomes and the greater victory becomes, the more firmly they are determined to struggle continuously and tenaciously without the slightest stalemate or stagnation.

To accomplish the chuche revolutionary cause developed in the forest of Mt Paektu based on already attained achievements, we should more vigorously advance. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: To build socialism and communism, we should overcome many difficulties and trials and continue the revolution to the end generation after generation.

To accomplish the revolution, we should not forget the history of the grim past struggle and brilliantly inherit the precious tradition developed in this struggle.

The Korean communists and people have learned the valuable truth of the revolution, though they have experienced many grim trials while carrying out the revolution. Believing in this truth, they have struggled and achieved victories. We value the history of our past struggle because, by learning from this history, we believe that, just as we did in the past, we will accomplish the revolution, courageously overcoming all difficulties we may encounter in the future.

Recalling the history of the Korean revolution, we are proud that we have developed our indomitable revolutionary spirit to struggle tenaciously on a single revolutionary road without fearing difficulties or trials. The indomitable revolutionary spirit displayed by the Korean revolutionaries is the attitude of resolutely protecting, safeguarding and molding in high esteem the leader of the revolution. This revolutionary spirit is very noble because it stems from flawlessly pure loyalty to the leader and from a noble revolutionary fidelity. This spirit is very ardent because it has been hardened in the bloody struggle going through a bloody deadline.

The indomitable revolutionary spirit was developed by young communists, including Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su. It has been consistently inherited over the long period of more than half a century. That is why our revolution has gloriously developed and made progress, undergoing difficulties. We should inherit this valuable tradition in the future so that we can glorify the Korean revolution forever, adding a new chapter to the history of our indomitable struggle.

Contrary to the 1920's and the 1930's, we are now carrying out the revolution in very favorable circumstances. To reunify the fatherland and complete the cause of socialism and communism under the banner of the chuche idea, however, we still have to traverse a distant and rough revolutionary road. This road is by no means smooth. Therefore, we should bear deep in our hearts the unflinching revolutionary spirit which has glorified the Korean communist movement and should continue to struggle resolutely to win the final victory of the revolution.

The true character of men is reflected when they encounter difficulties. Revolutionaries should always assume an ideological attitude of boldly overcoming difficulties. For true communist-type revolutionary fighters never to change no matter how far the revolution may advance and no matter how greatly the situation may change is the stand and attitude of holding the leader in high esteem.

Today, our cadres, party members and workers, bearing this attitude deep in their hearts, are firmly determined to become the Kim Hyok's of the 1980's and to accomplish the revolution. Such a noble revolutionary spirit of our people is above all displayed when the stand and attitude of resolutely protecting the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea and of forever holding in high esteem the leader has become firmer with each passing day.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a great ideological theorist and activist who, after inventing the immortal chuche idea, has led the Korean revolution along a single road of victory and glory under the banner of this idea. He is an outstanding strategist of the revolution. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is now energetically leading our overall revolution with the profound wisdom and tested leadership with which he has defeated the atrocious two imperialists and has led the difficult twofold social revolution and the struggle to achieve industrialization.

By holding the great leader in high esteem, we can achieve the endless prosperity of our people and the final victory of the Korean revolution. Always regarding protecting safeguarding and holding in high esteem the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as a basic question concerning the destiny of the people and the future path of the revolution, the Korean communists have created the brilliant history of loyalty to the leader. Firmly united around the leader were revolutionary fighters who had always loyally assisted him when the Korean revolution faced grim trials. They placed the great leader at the center of unity and held him in high esteem as the supreme head of the party and the government and the revolutionary armed force. To protect the leader's idea and line and to keep him safe, they unhesitatingly went through water and fire and faced enemy bullets with their breasts.

Thanks to the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the immortal warriors who cherished loyalty to the leader as their first life, we were able to defeat two strong imperialists with a small force, to found the party, government and the revolutionary armed forces in a timely manner under difficult conditions and safeguard the unity and cohesion of the revolutionary ranks.

All of our cadres and party members, with deep understanding of the history of this persistent struggle and true stand and attitude of the revolutionary warriors, will keep struggling and sacrificing everything to carry out the plan and intentions of the leaders, upholding the respected and beloved leader.

The firm and unwavering will of our people who are determined to carry out the revolution with a persistent revolutionary spirit is also strongly displayed in their sharing of weal and woe with the party, rallying around the party. The KWP is a great guidance force which, assuming the revolutionary ideology of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song as its leading guidance, brilliantly enacts the revolutionary cause of the leader.

Our party, born out of the deep roots of the anti-Japanese revolution and tested in the arduous flame of struggle, has been consolidated and developed into an invincible revolutionary party capable of reunifying the nation and consummating the cause of anti-imperialism and independence.

Today in our party there is no united front as in the early days of the party, and the party has been firmly united on the basis of a monolithic system of the chuche idea, moving as directed with steel-like revolutionary discipline. This is one of the major achievements of our party center and a brilliant fruition of the long-standing historic aspiration of the Korean communists. Our party has been developed and consolidated into an invincible party with a firm organizational and ideological basis, and the future of our revolution and nation is more promising.

Our people look at the future of the revolution with a firm conviction through the accomplishments and might of the party and are advancing with confidence in the party. The old warriors, who began their first step of learning under the care of the great leader from the day of the founding of the anti-Japanese guerrillas and have been struggling with the guns given by the leader for half a century, are the cornerstones and ramparts that safeguard and uphold our party center. Even the new generations born in the era of the Workers Party are growing as the Kim Hyok's of the 1980's who are breathing only with the party center.

Brimming over in this revolutionary rank united strongly around our party are the persistent revolutionary spirits of the young communists who rallied around the great marshal at a time when the party was striking root. This shows that our party's basis is being safeguarded from generation to generation and that our revolution's life is being succeeded. Cherishing in our hearts greater pride and honor in carrying out the revolution under this great party's leadership, we will enact the revolution to the end, sharing weal and woe with the party, no matter what tribulations or ordeals we may face.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who, starting the revolution at an early age, has achieved immortal accomplishments before history and mankind, breaking through grave storms during the revolution, is a great sun who is endlessly respected and absolutely trusted by the nation and the revolutionary peoples of the world.

The bosom of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a revolutionary bosom, a source of prosperity and happiness for our people and generations to come. The leader's noble name is the symbol of victory and glory which always gives the people courage and belief and summons them to the struggle and to exploits. To lighten the burden of and uphold with loyalty the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has been devoting himself to the fatherland, people, the times and the revolution, people, the times and the revolution, is a paramount mission and the most glorious duty facing our Korean communists and people.

From the day we upheld the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song as a great leader, our Korean communists and people have been vigorously living and struggling on the single road of loyalty, cherishing the noble revolutionary spirit of upholding the revolutionary leader.

In the future we will carry out this glorious tradition and will be the loyal guards safeguarding the party and the leader politically and ideologically and with our lives.

Thanks to these loyal revolutionary warriors, the ultimate victory of the revolutionary cause pioneered in the Paektu forest is guaranteed.

PRIEST, OTHER SUSPECTS ARRESTED IN ARSON CASES

SK081128 Seoul YONHAP in English 0800 GMT 8 Apr 82

[Text] Seoul, April 8 (YONHAP) -- A Catholic priest, whose alleged role in hiding arson suspects has created a stir, was put under arrest early Thursday on charges of providing shelter to arson suspects, for which he could be given a maximum three-year prison sentence or a 600,000-won (about 845 U.S. dollars) fine if convicted.

The arrest of Father Choe Ki-shik, 39, of the Wonju Catholic Diocese, took place in Pusan, the country's second largest city some 450 km south of Seoul, where the arson attack occurred on March 18 at a U.S. Cultural Center. A police announcement said that, in addition to Father Choe, Kim Hyon-chang, 32, suspected mastermind of the arson, and three others were placed under arrest on charges of violating the national security law and harboring suspected arsonists. The new arrests brings to 14 the number of suspects picked up in connection with the U.S. Cultural Center arsons in Pusan and Kwangju.

According to the announcement, Rev. Choe initially provided shelter to Kim at the Wonju Catholic Education Center in late May 1980. Kim was sought by police at that time as a suspect in the uprisings in Kwangju, south of Seoul. Rev. Choe also gave money to Kim after he heard Kim confess to masterminding the Pusan arson, police said. Father Choe also provided shelter to Mun Pu-sik, 23, and his female companion Kim Un-suk, 23, the two principal suspects of the Pusan arson who turned themselves in last Thursday to authorities in Wonju, east of Seoul, police said.

Meanwhile, the government has informed the Holy See's ambassador to Korea, the Most Rev. Luciano Angeloni, of its position in the investigation of Catholic priests in connection with the arson cases. The government reportedly pledged the continued guarantee of religious freedom, stressing that recent events have nothing to do with restricting religious activities.

CHOSON ILBO VIEWS SUCCESSION ISSUE IN NORTH

[Text] To everyone's surprise, the first session of the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly [SPA] of the North Korean puppets did not elect Kim Chong-il, son of Kim Il-song, a vice president which would have made him virtually second in command. This shows internal split and resistance.

According to Japanese newspapers and North Korea watchers, Kim Il-song could not make Kim Chong-il a vice president at the recent session not only because of the opposition of old-time party members and working-level economic officials to Kim Chong-il's leadership succession, but also because of the North Korean leadership's awareness of the rejection shown by communist countries of the establishment of the anachronistic hereditary dynasty. In this connection, the Japanese newspapers and the North Korea watchers note that those who are said to be well-versed in economic affairs, such as Premier Yi Chong-ok, Vice Premier Kye Ung-tae and Vice Premier and Trade Committee Chairman Kong Chin-tae, are retained.

Observers say: This clearly shows that the North Korean puppets feel it necessary to stress economic development and that they fear that a radical reshuffle of the hierarchy might further aggravate the economic pinch. The observers predict: By the way, Kim Chong-il will continue to hold his posts such as member of the Presidium of the party Political Bureau, secretary of the Secretariat and member of the Military Affairs Committee. Though he was not made vice president, there will be no change in establishing the Kim Il-song-Kim Chong-il hereditary system.

The observers analyze that Kim Chong-il will continue to give on-the-spot guidance to the youths on behalf of Kim Il-song, thus continuously maintaining his position as ideological leader.

The observers say: In view of the announcement of the new Cabinet list of the North Korean puppets by the North KOREAN CENTRAL NEWS AGENCY, which omitted the minister of People's Armed Forces and minister of public security, there is a possibility that Kim Chong-il may assume one of these two important posts.

It seems that Defense Minister O Chin-u, who failed to be reelected at the session, has lost his post as minister of People's Armed Forces, even though he was included in the list of members of the Central Committee People's Committee. It had been predicted that O Chin-u would be promoted to vice president along with Kim Chong-il. It has been strongly thought that Kim Chong-il would become a vice president since he was elected deputy to the SPA for the first time on 28 February.

KAMPUCHEA HAILS VCP PARTY CONGRESS SUCCESS

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Wholeheartedly Welcome the Brilliant Outcome of the Fifth Congress of the Fraternal VCP"]

[Text] In the spring of this year, the famous Ho Chi Minh fatherland marked a most profoundly significant historic event -- that is, the Fifth Congress of the glorious VCP.

At the Ba Dinh palace in Hanoi, the party congress proceeded solemnly. Those 5 days were filled with an atmosphere of general enthusiasm imbued with revolutionary zeal that reflected the unanimity of the entire party, people and army who are always determined to struggle resolutely in order to advance the revolutionary cause in Vietnam in all aspects.

Elation and pride for all the great revolutionary achievements scored by the Vietnamese people of all nationalities under the wise leadership of the VCP could be felt everywhere in the SRV -- from the mountainous and coastal areas to the outlying remote countryside. The party congress received messages of support and congratulations from fraternal parties, friendly countries, revolutionary organizations and the working people from five continents. For their part, our entire Kampuchean party and people warmly and enthusiastically praised and welcomed the brilliant outcome of the Fifth Congress of the fraternal VCP.

During the past 5 years from the fourth congress to this fifth congress, under the consistent leadership of the VCP -- a party which has been tempered in the flames of revolutionary war and has always been loyal to Marxism, Leninism and proletarian internationalism -- the heroic Vietnamese people crushed all aggressive acts and frustrated all the perfidious maneuvers of the enemy of all categories, surmounted countless difficulties, pushed the Vietnamese revolution to advance and develop firmly and inscribed in the pages of its national history every brilliantly victorious step on the path of socialist construction.

In his address to welcome the Fifth Congress of the fraternal VCP, Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee, clearly noted: Vietnam's victory is the victory of Marxism-Leninism, the line of holding aloft the two banners -- the banner of national and democratic revolution and the banner of socialism -- the strategic alliance of the three Indochinese peoples, the fraternal socialist countries, the communist, workers and national liberation movements and the peace and progressive forces throughout the world. The VCP is worthy of being the vanguard of the working class, revolution and working people of Vietnam. It is worthy of being one of the most valiant vanguards of the international communist movement. The Kampuchean party and people are elated over and genuinely proud of these achievements.

This party congress reviewed valuable experiences in order to improve and increase the party leadership and the state administration, to strengthen revolutionary will, to raise the level of the political and theoretical awareness and to heighten combat readiness and the capability for the successful implementation of all the revolutionary tasks of all the Vietnamese communists, working class and people in order to build socialism successfully and defend the socialist fatherland firmly.

Under the party slogan that everything is for the socialist fatherland and the well-being of the people, the congress unanimously approved the political report, the report on economic and social development plans for 1981-1985 and for the 1980's and the report on party building which defines the clear-sighted and resolute strategic line for the new stage of the country in order to enable the entire party, people and army to fulfill successfully the noble and sacred historic tasks for the nation and fatherland.

The Fifth VCP Congress defined the future strategic tasks of the revolution, noted the great progress of the party's noble tasks responding to the vital interests of the country and solved various urgent, major problems facing the advancing Vietnamese revolution.

In this advance the Vietnamese revolution will encounter many more difficulties, tests and trials. It has to confront the subversive war waged in all forms by the Beijing expansionist-hegemonists in collusion with U.S. imperialism. At the same time, it has to be ready to cope with a situation in which the enemy might launch a large-scale invasion against Vietnam. For this reason, all of the people and the entire army are always united as a single body under the leadership of the party and are determined to fight to carry out the two strategic tasks of successfully building socialism while always remaining combat ready to firmly defend the Socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

The experience of more than half a century of the Vietnamese revolution's victorious history has been reflected in the clear-sighted and just foreign policy of the Vietnamese party and state which always hold aloft the international banner of socialism and struggle tirelessly for the independence, peace and social progress of the nations.

In this sense, the Fifth VCP Congress emphasized the continuing efforts to develop further the militant solidarity and all-round cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union as the strategic principle and revolutionary sentiment of every Vietnamese generation. This is a guarantee for the victory of the Vietnamese people's national defense and socialist construction as well as for the consolidation of national independence and the socialist identity in the Indochinese Peninsula. It also constitutes an active contribution to the strengthening and expanding of the socialist system and the promotion of the struggle for peace and socialism in the world.

At the same time, the congress stressed the duty to foster and strengthen the fraternal Vietnam-Kampuchea-Laos militant solidarity and cooperation which are the law of development of the three countries' revolutions and a vital factor for the destiny of the three Indochinese nations.

The brilliant success of the Fifth VCP Congress has generated new energy, new determination and a strong and firm confidence of the whole party, people and army, who are resolute to fight and accelerate the emulation drive to turn all resolutions into actual actions so as to realize successfully the glorious slogan of the party -- everything for the socialist fatherland and the happiness of the people -- pushing the revolutionary cause of Vietnam towards final victory.

Regarding all of the victories of the Vietnamese revolution as their own, the Kampuchean revolutionaries and people as a whole most warmly welcome the glorious success of the Fifth VCP Congress and wish the Vietnamese Communists and people more and more important successes in their glorious revolutionary cause.

TRAWLER REPORTEDLY SUNK BY SRV GUNBOAT 6 APR

[Text] A Thai trawler valued at 6 million baht was sunk and two crewmen shot dead after being fired on by Vietnamese gunboats on Tuesday [6 April] in the second attack of the kind within 24 hours. Four men were injured and another four are missing believed drowned as a result of the attack which came only hours after six Thai trawlers were attacked by Heng Samrin regime forces off Trat Province.

A fishing industry source in Samut Sakhon said yesterday morning that the attack, on a fleet of four Thai trawlers, occurred about 30 nautical miles off the Vietnamese coast early on Tuesday morning. The source said that as the four boats were trawling off Vietnam's Obi Island, two armed Vietnamese fishing boats appeared and gave chase.

The Vietnamese opened fire, hitting the 6 million baht "Naowarat 9," which later sank. Its 35 crewmen jumped overboard and spent about 20 hours in the sea before 31 of them were rescued by the trawlers. The other four men are believed to have drowned.

The source said the Vietnamese gunfire killed two men on board the "Chok Nawi 8" and injured another four aboard "Chanphen Mahachai 9." The fourth boat, "Rung Samutchai 2," was captured by the Vietnamese and towed away towards the coast.

All the four trawlers were from Samut Sakhon and Samut Songkhram Provinces and Bangkok metropolis.

In the other incident Tuesday, armed fishing boats of the Heng Samrin regime attacked a flotilla of Thai trawlers in disputed waters off the Trat Province. Six boats were seized and forced at gunpoint into Kampuchean waters.

A fishery source said the six boats were freed by the Heng Samrin naval officials about noon yesterday.

Navy Commander-in-Chief Adm Sombun Chuaphibun said that in order to solve the fishing dispute, a joint venture should be arranged with neighbouring countries. He added that the navy could not protect all Thai fishing boats because some of the attacks had occurred outside Thai territorial waters.

VOFA CONDEMNS SRV ON CHEMICAL WARFARE REPORTS

[Text] There have been frequent reports on chemical warfare recently and the public has given great attention to these reports. Such an inhuman way of killing is against morality and humanity and in violation of several international laws. The reports on chemical warfare shows that the use of chemical weapons really takes place. On 22 March, U.S. Secretary of State Gen Alexander Haig added more evidence of the use of chemical weapons, citing Afghanistan, Laos and Kampuchea where more than 10,000 people have been killed and another large number injured by chemical attacks over the past 7 years. The large number of people killed or injured indicated the huge amount of chemical weapons used in the above-mentioned areas. It also reflects the inhuman brutality of those using chemical weapons. According to the reports, the use of chemical weapons in Afghanistan, Laos and Kampuchea was, similarly, an act committed by aggressors against the victims of aggression in those countries.

In Laos, Vietnamese troops used chemical weapons against the Hmong hilltribesmen resisting foreign forces. In Afghanistan, Soviet troops used chemical weapons against the Afghan native people. In Kampuchea, Vietnamese troops used chemical weapons against the Kampuchean people and resistance forces fighting against Vietnamese occupation. It is clear that foreign aggressor forces have no mercy for the native people but are ready to persecute them for the sake of expansionism and for the exploitation of natural resources which are brought back to the aggressor's country.

Such persecution will end only when all foreign forces have withdrawn from the occupied land and the native people are allowed once again to lead a normal and peaceful life. However, it is hard to expect any foreign aggressor force to repent and decide on withdrawal themselves. This needs cooperation from all countries in order to pressure the aggressor forces to stop all brutal acts and to pull out of the occupied land. This step will pave the way for an eventual solution to the problem. In this connection, it is a vital responsibility of all peace-loving countries to cooperate in building pressure against the aggressors -- by opposing the act of aggression, by ending economic aid given to the aggressors and by taking other political measures based on wisdom in order to solve the problem.

As for Thailand, which has a common border with Kampuchea, in addition to the burden of refugees and the threat of frequent border violations by foreign aggressor forces, Thailand itself has also suffered from the danger of the use of chemical weapons by Vietnamese troops in the border areas. Thai authorities have found evidence of chemical toxins in streams used by the Tahi border villagers. On 19 February, a Vietnamese plane intruded as deep as 6 km into Thai airspace from Kampuchea and dropped a yellow substance on people's crops and houses in Ban Khlong Chaeng, Ban Sap Tamao and Ban Saton, in Pong Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province.

Vietnam's act constitutes a border violation as well as a threat to the lives and property of the Thai people, but Vietnam has never recognized its crime. On the contrary, it has been mounting a propaganda campaign slandering Thailand in a bid to mislead public opinion and cover up its own crime. For example, it has been accusing Thailand of systematic chemical weapon attacks inside Kampuchea. Such propaganda cannot mislead anyone into believing it since Thai soldiers have never had chemical weapons in their possession and since Thailand has never supported any country's stockpiling of chemical weapons whether for offensive nor counteroffensive use. Besides, Thailand has given full cooperation to the United Nations' effort to control and probe the use of chemical weapons.

Thailand's attitude is clear and straightforward in this regard, unlike Vietnam whose attitude is obscure and secretive. Vietnam refused entry to newsmen or UN specialists desiring to conduct investigations into the reports on the use of chemical weapons in the areas of operation by Vietnamese troops.

Thailand wants to emphasize here again that it strongly opposes and condemns any form of chemical warfare and that it resolutely believes that the withdrawal of foreign forces from occupied lands will be the final solution to the war of aggression and will eventually stop the use of chemical weapons entirely.

LABOR DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL DISCUSSES CHILD LABOR

BK081204 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 7 Apr 82

[Press statement by Director General of the Labor Department Wichit Saengthong -- date not given; recorded]

[Text] According to a report, it was said that Mr John Pilger came to Thailand and claimed that he spent about 1,500 baht to buy a girl from a broker office near Hua Lamphong railway station. The girl was an 8-year old girl whose name is Suni Nanthaphan. He said the girl was later returned to her parents in Phitsanulok Province.

Regarding this report, the Labor Department will check into the story the same we did with the case last year. We will check in order to see how the transaction was carried out. Also, a private organization called "The Children's Protection Center" will help the Labor Department check into the matter. The center will send its representatives to meet with the girl and her parents in order to check on how the transaction was made. The buyer claimed that he was even issued a receipt for the purchase of the girl.

I would like to state here that if this whole story is true, it constitutes only one of a small number of cases. It is therefore unfair to jump to conclusions based on this particular case and say that in Thailand children are sold at 3,000-4,000 baht per head. I am not speaking out of anger toward that person but it is a matter of principle. You cannot say all are criminals if it happens that only one or two out of a hundred persons committed crimes. This is the point I would like to make and which we will pursue in the case.

I would like to comment here on the state of child labor in our country. From a survey by the National Statistics Office in 1978, Thailand had about 120,000 children aged between 11 and 14 working in various industrial factories, mainly in the production, trade, service, construction, repair work, transport and communications sectors. This corresponds to our law on compulsory education. Most of our children go to school at the age of 6. Compulsory education lasts 4 years. That means they finish school at the age of 10 or 11. They then join the workforce if they do not continue their studies.

THACH, GROMYKO SHARE 'IDENTICAL VIEWS' IN MOSCOW

OW080737 Hanoi VNA in English 0710 GMT 8 Apr 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, 8 Apr -- A.A. Gromyko, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party and foreign minister of the Soviet Union, received and held talks in Moscow yesterday with his Vietnamese counterpart, Nguyen Co Thach, during his current visit to the Soviet Union. The two sides shared identical views on the issues concerning the Vietnamese-Soviet relations and on international matters of mutual concern brought up at the talks.

They noted with satisfaction that the Vietnamese-Soviet relations have constantly developed in all fields on the firm basis of the Vietnamese-Soviet treaty of friendship and cooperation and on the agreements concluded between Vietnamese party General Secretary Le Duan and his Soviet counterpart, Leonid Brezhnev.

On the success of the recent Vietnamese party congress, the Soviet foreign minister said that the congress was an important event in the international communist movement. He said he believed that it would open up a new stage of development in the Vietnamese revolution and exert a strong and an active influence on the consolidation and promotion of the relations between the two countries.

The Soviet Union highly valued Vietnam's efforts toward further tightening its fraternal ties with Laos and Kampuchea, and reaffirmed its full support for the consistent policy of the three Indochinese states aimed at normalizing their relations with the A.S.E.A.N. countries, thus turning Southeast Asia into a region of peace and stability.

[Part One of report on party building work read by Le Duc Tho, member of VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, at the 27 March session of the Fifth VCP Congress held at the Ba Dinh Conference Hall in Hanoi -- read by announcer]

[Text] Dear comrade delegates: In the process of the incessant development of the revolution in our country since the fourth national party congress, in light of the correct line set forth by that congress, our entire party, people and army have brought into play their revolutionary heroism, have actively striven to overcome all difficulties and to surmount all trials, and have recorded very great victories in the cause of national defense and initial achievements in the cause of national reconstruction.

The party Central Committee political report, read by Comrade General Secretary Le Duan, has comprehensively reviewed the situation of the revolution in our country since the great 1975 spring victory and the activities of the Central Committee in the past term, and has proposed to the congress targets, tasks and measures for future steady advancement of the revolutionary cause of our party and people.

This report on party building by the Central Committee reviews the situation of the party and party-building work since the fourth party congress, and proposes to the congress major tasks and measures concerning the building of our party so as to bring about new changes in improving the quality of the party's leadership and fighting capacity and to meet the requirements of the revolutionary tasks in the new stage, as expounded in the political report.

Part One

The Situation of Our Party Since the Fourth National Party Congress and the Task of Party Building

I. The Strengths and Weaknesses of the Party and of Party Building Work

Comrades, in December 1976 the fourth national party congress set forth the general line of socialist revolution and the line of socialist economic building in our country. Over the past 5 years, implementing the various resolutions of the congress, our party has carried out comprehensive and very pressing tasks nationwide, in a situation marked by many new favorable conditions, but also replete with new difficulties and complexities.

No sooner had we entered the fight on the socioeconomic front than we had to cope with a very barbarous and cunning enemy -- the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists -- who, in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces, launched a very fierce attack against our country in the military, economic, political and diplomatic fields.

In view of the new situation, our party continued to bring into play its tradition of staunch struggle, held fast to the revolutionary and scientific character of Marxism-Leninism, held high the banners of national independence and socialism, and continuously led our people to record very glorious victories in the cause of building and defending the socialist fatherland and fulfilling their international obligations.

1. In the process of carrying out its political tasks, our party has shown very basic strengths; at the same time, it has betrayed major weaknesses and shortcomings which it should make every effort to overcome.

The great victories affirmed in the Central Committee political report have attested to the heroic quality and the great fighting strength of our people and the basic strengths of our party and our contingent of party cadres and members. The shortcomings and weaknesses in carrying out various socioeconomic tasks have also posed to the party and its ranks many new requirements which must be fulfilled to improve the quality of the party's leadership and to increase its fighting strength.

Revolutionary realities over the past 5 years have continued to prove the following:

a. Our party is a stalwart Marxist-Leninist party with a firm line that has organized and led our people to overcome all serious challenges facing the country and has always developed the spirit of revolutionary offensive to advance the revolution constantly. The party's general line for the socialist revolution, its line for building the socialist economic and its line for foreign relations are correct. In all difficult and complicated situations, the party has persistently followed these correct lines.

When the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists clearly revealed their dark designs, the party resolutely charged our nation with a new historic mission and asserted: In this struggle, our people must win total victory, thus making socialism in our country advance continuously, our party and state stronger, our organizational and managerial work more scientific, and our society more beautiful. In the fact of aggression by the nation's enemy, the entire party closed its ranks around the Central Committee and mobilized and organized all the armed forces and people to defeat two wars of aggression, recording great victories of historic significance in the cause of defending the fatherland.

Our party is very proud of its ranks whose members are absolutely loyal to the nation, the party and the system. They have been trained in combat for the defense of the fatherland as well as in socialist construction; and their abilities have been gradually enhanced in all respects.

Our party is very proud of its members who are operating selflessly in the various sectors, localities, establishments and combat units. Countless party cadres and members have spent decades performing combat duty but they are still present on the frontline now, standing face to face with the enemy in defiance of all difficulties and hardships and ready to accept all challenges, including the highest sacrifice.

Countless party cadres and members have worked hard day and night to organize and promote the revolutionary movement in order to develop the economy and culture, stabilize the people's life and maintain political security, public order and social safety, thus making their worthy contributions to the great successes of the party in its glorious revolutionary cause.

The party's unchanging stand on countering all the schemes and acts of aggression by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, coupled with its determination to push the revolution forward by carrying out socialist transformation and socialist construction, testifies to the fact that our party is a genuine Marxist-Leninist party that has never wavered or retreated in the face of challenges. This is a strength and also an important lesson of experience of our party.

b. Our party has firmly upheld the banner of national independence and socialism, harmoniously combined genuine patriotism with pure proletarian internationalism, and has striven hard to fulfill its international obligations.

With ardent socialist patriotism and a profound spirit of proletarian internationalism, we did our best to support and assist the fraternal people of Kampuchea in smashing the genocidal regime. With this success of the Kampuchean people, all the three Indochinese countries became totally independent and free and advanced together toward socialism. This great success has strengthened the militant alliance and created an unprecedentedly firm mutually supportive position for the revolutions of the three Indochinese countries in the struggle against the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists to defend the independence and freedom of each country and contribute to the consolidation of peace in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

Imbued with ardent socialist patriotism and a profound spirit of proletarian internationalism, our party and people have vigorously developed their militant solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union -- the bastion of revolution and world peace -- and have actively strengthened their militant solidarity and fraternal cooperation with other countries of the socialist community. This combination of patriotism with proletarian internationalism has testified to our party's boundless loyalty to Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism in the uncompromising struggle against the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists who, in collusion with U.S imperialism and other reactionary forces, are directing their attacks at the Soviet Union and other countries of the socialist community.

In a situation wherein we are to deal with a perfidious and dangerous enemy and wherein our revolution has reached a new turning point, the consistency of the party's international line and the adoption of resolute and clear-sighted policies and strategies and accurate and prompt decisions for winning victories in the struggle against the expansionist aggressors reflect the firmness, the Leninist character and the pure proletarian internationalist spirit of our party. This is an advantage as well as a major experience for our party.

c. Besides the successes achieved in the socialist revolution, our party has also experienced shortcomings and committed mistakes in economic and social leadership and management. After having achieved successes and committed blunders, the party has further understood the realities of the country, drawn upon experience and matured a step further in economic and social management.

Since the fourth party congress, party organizations have made progress in the struggle to implement the party's lines and policies, and the party ranks have further matured. In the socialist revolution, our party had led our people in scoring many achievements. It has promptly unified the country, overcome the serious consequences of the war of aggression and of repeated natural calamities, basically restored economic establishments destroyed by the aggressors, gradually established and strengthened the system of socialist collective mastery, embarked on the socialist transformation of the south, consolidated a step further the socialist production relations in the north, created a number of material-technical bases of socialism and scored many achievements in education, culture, public health and social welfare.

As a result of implementing the [fourth party] congress' resolution, the party Central Committee and all party committee echelons, state managerial organs and production and trade organizations have seen even more clearly their own shortcomings and weaknesses and are seeking ways to overcome them. Many party organizations and party members and cadres have developed innovations, overcome difficulties, supported new ideas and led the mass movement in its advance. Recognizing weaknesses and thinking about and finding ways to overcome difficulties are manifestations of our maturity. We welcome all efforts of party members and cadres, party organizations, mass groups, state agencies and grassroots-level units in heightening their activities and developing innovations in order to correct shortcomings and overcome difficulties.

We have restored and developed the economy and stabilized the people's life at a time when the revolution has undergone rapid changes. For this reason, many aspects of our tasks -- including ideological and organizational tasks -- have not been properly prepared. Hardly had we embarked on managing the country, suffering from wounds caused by more than 30 years of war, when a new war of aggression occurred. We have had to build the country while, at the same time, defending it. The enemy was defeated but their perfidious schemes continue, and our struggle has not yet come to an end. We are simultaneously stabilizing and developing the economy and building strong national defense and security forces in order to cope with a multifaceted war of sabotage being waged by the enemy. We are ready to annihilate the enemy if he recklessly provokes a new war of aggression.

It is noteworthy that, although being a ruling party for more than 35 years, our party has not had much time to concentrate on economic leadership and has lacked adequate reviews of past economic activities. Therefore, our experience in economic leadership is very limited. Actually, there are objective causes for the present difficulties; but we must candidly acknowledge our subjective shortcomings and mistakes, especially in economic and social leadership and management.

The political and economic lines adopted by the fourth party congress for the period of transition to socialism are correct. But we have been slow to make them concrete and have experienced shortcomings and committed mistakes in specifying and implementing them. In laying down tasks and guidelines for the 5-year 1976-80 plan, we did not assess the situation in strict accordance with the prevailing conditions, and we were not aware of all difficulties. Subjective and impatient, we set forth tasks and norms for the state plans far beyond our actual capabilities. There have been serious shortcomings in the arrangement of general investments and investments in each sector. Moreover, we must admit that we have been conservative and sluggish in devising and implementing specific guidelines and policies to carry out the party's lines, and in evaluating and using our multifaceted capabilities.

We have had grave shortcomings and made grave mistakes in organizing the implementation of tasks and have displayed weaknesses in many aspects of economic management. Bureaucratism, conservatism, stagnation, lack of responsibility and of concentration in organizing the implementation of tasks are reaching serious proportions.

We have allowed the prolongation of bureaucratic methods of economic management based on subsidization; have been slow to change planning methods, to adopt suitable economic policies aimed at stimulating economic development, and to switch to profit-and-loss accounting; and have been ignorant about business practices.

In various fields we have, in many places and on many occasions, been lax in economic, cultural and social management, in ideological work and in security maintenance; and have failed to strengthen the socialist legal system to maintain social discipline firmly, thus prolonging the development of negative aspects and making it difficult to overcome them.

The recent resolutions of the party Central Committee, especially those of the sixth and ninth plenums, the Political Bureau resolutions on distribution and circulation, on political security, on the policy for science and technology and on organizational work, and the Secretariat resolution on ideological work have laid the initial groundwork for a change in direction which is aimed at overcoming these shortcomings and weaknesses. A number of policies on distribution and circulation and on the improvement of economic management have been introduced into life and they are creating the initial positive factors for economic activities.

An important lesson from the experience of our successes and failures over past years is that once a correct line has been established it is crucial that we make sure it is thoroughly understood and that we apply it with timely, accurate steps, plans and a managerial system suitable to the actual conditions of the country, so that proceeding from this we can uniformly change economic, administrative, ideological and organizational methods, to ensure thorough understanding and successful implementation of this established line.

At present shortcomings are being corrected slowly and stagnation remains critical. We are convinced that the resolution of the fifth party congress, which embodies the lessons of experience drawn over the past 5 years, will create a vigorous and profound upturn within the party, upgrade the party's leading and organizational capabilities to a new level, and open up new prospects for advancing the economy and our people's livelihood.

2. The strongpoints and shortcomings in the party's political leadership are closely linked to strongpoints and shortcomings in the effort to build the party ideologically and organizationally.

a. Over the past 5 years we have made new efforts to build the party ideologically and organizationally. The fourth national party congress reviewed party building work, set forth the tasks, guidelines and correct policies for party building in the period of socialist construction, and approved the new, amended party statutes. In implementation of the congress resolution, we have striven to enhance constantly the working class and vanguard character of the party and to make concrete and apply the guidelines for party building established by the congress. The various resolutions adopted by the party Central Committee have clearly reflected a stronger link between the political tasks and ideological and organizational work. The Political Bureau and the Secretariat have issued many specific directives on this work.

With these correct policies, we have built and gradually consolidated the organizational system of the party, the state and mass organizations throughout the country; and we have employed this machinery to lead and organize the people to carry out major tasks of strategic significance in order to transform and develop the economy and culture, boost production, organize the people's life, consolidate national defense, maintain public order and security, defeat the war of aggression by the expansionists and fulfill our international obligations.

The resolution of the party Central Committee's fourth plenum on consolidating the organization and improving the work system and resolution No 32-NQ/TU of the Political Bureau on effecting a profound organizational change to strengthen leadership and management, especially in the economic field, have reflected even more clearly the guidelines for building our party and have made concrete the party's viewpoints on forming an organizational structure to meet the specific conditions of the revolution in our country. The new SRV Constitution has institutionalized the party's domestic and foreign lines and laid the groundwork for building and consolidating the system of socialist collective mastery and building the system of leadership by the party, collective mastery by the laboring people and management by the state.

We have also made efforts to enhance the party's leading capacity and fighting strength. Over the past 5 years, implementing the party statutes, party organizations at all levels have held two rounds of congresses. The holding of these congresses -- which received more concentrated guidance than before -- in accordance with directive No 55/CTTU of the party Central Committee Secretariat was an opportunity to comprehensively build the party politically, ideologically and organizationally. This was an opportunity to broaden democracy in the internal ranks and to carry out profound criticism and self-criticism from top to bottom and from botton to top. This was also an opportunity to motivate the masses to participate in building the party comprehensively.

In each election of new party committee echelons during these congresses, around one-third of the members of the party committee echelons concerned were replaced, with the number of party committee members who are experienced in leadership and management, who had been in various party schools and who come from the working class increasing. In many provincial and city party committees, the number of members having a college education now accounts for 27.7 percent. In the north, the figure is 42 percent with Hai Hung Province putting its figure at 81 percent. In many district party committees, the number of members having a college or vocational high school education is 24.6 percent. The figure in the north stands at 32 percent. This is a new development in the general knowledge of the contingent of leadership cadres, considering the situation before the Fourth VCP Congress.

The first-ever drive to issue party membership cards has become a far-reaching and widespread political move. It has improved the party members' awareness of the party and their sense of responsibility.

We welcome these initial results of the task to issue party membership cards.

Over the past 5 years the party has rid itself of many unqualified members. Improved activities by the party control committees at various levels have produced certain results, have contributed to developing positivism, overcoming negativism, and have helped detect and remove from the party those bad elements who are no longer qualified as party members.

From various mass movements in production and combat, the party has admitted into its ranks more than 375,000 people, more than 85 percent outstanding members of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union. The granting of new party memberships has contributed to improving the party quantitatively and setting up more party chapters. Of the nearly 150,000 party chapters belonging to 35,146 grassroots-level party organizations, 39,766 party chapters have been formed since the fourth party congress.

The perfection of grassroots-level party organizations and the campaign to make party bases healthy and strong according to the five requirements are linked closely to the perfection of primary production establishments and the development of districts which are being carried out.

Through the campaign, the number of weak party bases in many localities has decreased gradually. All party committees and organizations at the provincial, city and grassroots-level in the south have developed uniformly. Some party organizations have quickly improved their leadership over the economy and culture.

Our state and party have also managed to form cadres to meet the economic and national defense requirements, and have assigned nearly 100,000 cadres to the southern provinces and cities, the border districts, and the various posts outside the country to fulfill their international obligations. Training courses have been conducted recently for the high- and medium-ranking leading cadres of the party and state to acquire new knowledge of economic management.

In 5 years we have had 340,000 additional cadres graduate from various middle vocational schools and colleges. The network of party schools at all levels has expanded. The task of theoretical and political education has been intensified. More than 1 million party members have received political and theoretical training through different programs.

The press, radio and television, and the cultural, artistic and propaganda activities of the party and state have contributed to strengthening the party's ideological front further. Efforts to develop the party ideologically and organizationally have helped enhance the standards and quality of knowledge of cadres and party members, guaranteeing the fulfillment of the party's political mission.

b. Despite these efforts and results, the party's ideological and organizational tasks in all domains, especially in socialist construction, are still sluggish in several respects. On the ideological front, we still lack incisiveness, timeliness and militancy. In some aspects, our ideological task is rightist, simplistic and one-sided, and lacks flexibility. We have not grasped firmly the pressing problems arising from life and have therefore obtained low results in our ideological task.

The primary weak point in our ideological task is that we have succeeded neither in making all the party and the people thoroughly understand the socialist construction line nor in creating a high degree of agreement on the basis of adequate theoretical and factual evidence of the party's correct line. The class character of ideological education has not been emphasized.

To us, the advance of an economy from small to large-scale production is an attack on a difficult and complicated area which has never been explored. Not fully aware of this particular point and failing to take positive action to conduct basic and advanced training in socialism and economic management for cadres and to derive experiences from reality, we have not therefore been able to understand the party line profoundly and to materialize it in keeping with each stage, each sector and each locality.

Following our victory over the United States, we failed to conduct extensive and intensive education on the development of various stages, to evaluate the situation correctly and to estimate all the difficulties and the changes in thinking of cadres, party members and the masses so as to prevent negativism actively. We have not educated ourselves on the struggle between socialism and capitalism regularly and profoundly.

The political and ideological education to heighten awareness of the socialist revolution and the communist ideal among the party members, the people and especially youths has been belittled. The education of cadres, party members and the people on collective mastery has been neither specific nor practical.

In all fields of activity, the struggle to overcome nonsocialist thinking, such as petty bourgeois and bourgeois thinking, vestiges of neocolonialist culture and feudalist thinking and so forth, has been neglected.

In the struggle against the enemies, our party cadres and members and workers have not profoundly understood the reactionary nature and thinking of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists and the U.S. imperialists. Revolutionary vigilance has been seriously lacking.

We have not promptly made our party cadres and members and people understand clearly all the enemies' sinister schemes and tactics aimed at undermining our party, especially the solidarity and single-mindedness of its members, weakening the proletarian state, degenerating the contingent of party cadres and members and state personnel, and damaging our party's public establishments and our economy.

Within the party and state organs, apart from the prevailing hasty thinking, insensitivity, bureaucracy and heavy conservatism are the main cause for the present sluggishness. This situation has limited profound understanding and scrupulous implementation of the party's lines and policies and obstructed the creativity of the people, party cadres and members. It has also obstructed new changes in the managerial apparatus and the amendment of backward politics and systems.

Over the past several years, the principle of democratic centralism in many places was not scrupulously carried out. Such phenomena as disorganization, lack of discipline, departmentalism and localism were prevalent in varying degrees. On the other hand, an undemocratic situation prevails in which self-criticism from the top to low levels and vice versa is lacking; information for the grassroots-level is slow and insufficient; and attention is not paid to analyzing public opinion. Such phenomena as bossism, arbitrariness, prejudices against and oppression of party cadres and members and people who dare to criticize shortcomings are also serious.

The diminishing quality and decreasing militant will in a segment of responsbile cadres at various echelons and sectors from top to bottom and in a number of party members is creating a great adverse effect on our party. Many persons, proceeding from errors in their activities and bureaucratic behavior, have changed their way of life and degenerated politically. These elements have not been completely screened.

Our party has a tradition of solidarity and unanimity regarding its lines. In the recent past, however, there was delay in making the party's lines concrete and their application was not profound. A number of matters concerning guidelines for carrying out the party's lines were not thoroughly understood or there was a lack of high identity of views among various echelons and sectors.

Along with this situation, there was a lack of unity and poor cooperation among party cadres and members to the extent of enlisting partisans among a number of cadres in many localities, organizations and units. This was caused either by incorrect methods and thinking such as subjectivism, superficiality, simplism and so forth or by nuclear motives stemming from individualism and other nonproletarian thinking such as bossism, feudalism, privileges, prerogatives, opportunism, jealousy and position-seeking.

It is necessary to stress here that our party is the organ holding power. These weaknesses in its standards and the shortcomings of its cadres and members in quality and ethics have obstructed the organization and implementation of the party's lines, thereby creating a great adverse effect on the economic and political domains. The enemies are taking advantage of this situation to incite the masses and diminish the people's confidence in the party.

We have talked about this situation many times, analyzed its causes and devised measures for resolving it. However, the measures set forth have not been enforced uniformly; they have not received intensive guidance; and in many places, they have not been carried out scrupulously due to key cadres affected by favoritism, deference or a lack of internal struggle spirit. As a result, corrective actions have been generally ineffective.

On the organizational front, organizational work is also very stagnant and too slow to adjust to meet the requirements of the situation and tasks. We have not yet been able to build a strong integrated organizational structure from central to grassroots level. The system of leadership by the party, collective mastery by the laboring people and management by the state, as pointed out in the political report, is not yet reflected in the daily activities of party committee echelons, state organs and mass organizations at all levels in the various sectors.

In some localities, party organizations are not clean. Many grassroots party organizations have been weak and lagging for a prolonged period of time. The quality of party chapter activities remains low. The subjective dynamism of many grassroots party organizations is weak. Production and business establishments -- the cells of the national economy -- where potentials are directly developed in all aspects and where all the material wealth of society is directly created, do not yet have a uniform system for operating in accordance with socialist business methods. Districts have been built slowly as compared with the requirements set forth by the fourth party congress. Many production combines are still heavily burdened with the operational character of administrative organs. This situation has had a negative impact on the quality of leadership and the fighting strength of grassroots party organizations.

The current weakness of the organizational structure of the party and the state from the central to grassroots level generally lies in the fact that the organizational apparatus is cumbersome and heavy, whereas its efficiency remains poor; the system of responsibility is not clearcut; and there is no really definite allocation of functions, responsibilities and authority among party organs, state services and mass organizations, between higher and lower echelons, between managerial organs and production, business and service units, and between the inviduals and the collectives; and the splitting or merging of organizations and the establishment of new ones has, in many cases, been unwarranted.

The bureaucratic and subsidy-based system of economic management is spreading its harmful effects in many fields. It has given rise to a feeling of dependency and created the habit of shunning responsibility, thus depriving the apparatus of its dynamism, suppressing the masses' innovations, creating conditions for bureaucratism to flourish and making the administrative table of organization all too cumbersome. There has emerged a situation in which bureaucratic centralism and fragmentation exist together, thus making it impossible to develop the dynamism of the sectors, localities and grassroots units, and to ensure centralized and unified leadership and management at the central level and smooth management sectorwide.

The work related to cadres still displays conservatism and sluggishness in many respects concerning training, fostering, assignment, employment, promotion and benefit policies and systems. This is a very important cause of the sluggishness in organizational and many other works. The training and fostering of economic management cadres have been slighted. The training of scientific and technological cadres has been stepped up, but it is still imbalanced in many respects; and this contingent of cadres has not been employed satisfactorily.

The training of workers to be cadres for the southern and mountain localities and the training and fostering of women cadres and managerial cadres for cooperatives, enterprises and other types of establishments have been carried out without appropriate programs, plans, measures and curricula.

Despite some progress, the assignment of key cadres to the various sectors and echelons in the past years has been done in a conservative and patched-up manner. This is due first of all to the lack of a training and fostering plan suitable to the development of the political task. The promotion of cadres is still influenced in a fairly heavy manner by old-fashioned methods for evaluating and selecting personnel, which lay too heavy a stress on past services, conduct, attitude, rank and position or academic records without truly considering work efficiency as the main yardstick to measure quality and ability.

The renovation of the task of managing cadres is slow. Many policies and regulations on remuneration for cadres are backward and conservative, thereby failing to encourage the development of talent and creating an unhealthy psychology among cadres and in society.

We have yet to establish a revolutionary and scientific work ethic and system. Such bad practices as administrativism, excessive emphasis on manual labor, lack of concentration, holding too many meetings and red tape from top to bottom are still prevalent and are important causes of shortcomings in the issuance of inaccurate and unspecific decisions.

The task of controlling the implementation of the party's lines, policies and resolutions, the application of the principle of democratic centralism and the enforcement of party discipline is still very weak. The shortcomings in building the party ideologically and organizationally are making our apparatus less effective and to a great extent reducing it to inactive. Our enemies have taken advantage of and exacerbated these shortcomings to cause more difficulties to the economic and social life and to minimize the people's confidence in our party and state's economic and social leadership and management.

The fourth party Central Committee plenum and later the party Central Committee Political Bureau conference on the organizational task and the party Central Committee Secretariat conference on the ideological task pointed out the far-reaching causes of the weaknesses and shortcomings in building the party politically, ideologically and organizationally. The party-building task, the party Central Committee and various party committee echelons have not linked the ideological and organizational tasks to the political task. They have lacked the determination to correct shortcomings and have not organized reviews of major problems arising from each stage of work. They have not even made concrete the necessary guidelines concerning party thinking so as to be consistent with each region, locality and establishment.

Staff organs in charge of ideological and organizational work of all-level party executive committees, especially the party Central Committee, and organizational organs of all sectors have not been strengthened. These weak organs are still unable to meet the requirements of the assigned tasks. It is necessary to strive to overcome these weaknesses and shortcomings of the party-building task.

The lesson of experiences in leading the party-building task in the ideological and organizational domains in the recent past is that we must take great interest in making everyone understand more thoroughly the character of the working class, the vanguard character of the party and the party-building principles and guidelines laid down by the fourth party congress. We must be specific about these principles and guidelines, so as to make them suitable to the ever-changing conditions of the situation. Meanwhile, we must ensure that they are implemented uniformly.

It is necessary to emphasize the exemplary role and discipline in implementing the party's resolutions and directives, especially on the ideological and organization tasks, by the central to lower levels and particularly by leading organs and cadres at all echelons and in all sectors. In this connection, the central level and the higher party committee echelons must set good examples for the lower echelons to follow.

The task of building the party ideologically and organizationally must be associated with and aimed at accelerating political and economic tasks, the most important part of which is to renovate economic management work, especially the economic managerial system. This is a task which we have neglected thus far.

Comrade delegates, generally speaking, the shortcomings in economic and social leadership and management as well as in the ideological and organizational tasks in the recent past are very serious. The party Central Committee, in its political report to the congress, severely criticized itself and admitted before the congress that it was responsible for this situation. There have been ideological and organizational causes of the shortcomings and mistakes in making the party's lines concrete and in organizing implementation of the various resolutions.

In making the line concrete, we have developed the shortcomings of failing to attach importance to teaching its basic viewpoint; being slow in imparting economic knowledge to party cadres and members; making inaccurate assessments of the situation; neglecting to concentrate the intellect of many echelons and sectors; exerting little effort to review the practical experiences of various localities and basic units; doing little experimental work to study and guide the resolution of major and new problems; and failing to attach importance to stregnthening the party Central Committee's staff organs, the state's general organs, and the staff and research components of the various ministries, institutes and schools, so as to make good use of them as befitting their importance.

There have been some irrationalities in organizational structures, the division of labor and working methods, especially in the Political Bureau, the party Central Committee Secretariat and the Council of Ministers. This has also been a definite cause of this state of affairs.

The weakness and sluggishness in organizing the implementation of tasks have been caused not only by working methods and work style, they have also been the combined results of the shortcomings in ideological and organizational work, especially of the evils of bureaucratism and conservatism, of irresponsibility in the apparatus with its lingering bureaucratic and subsidization systems, of the deficiencies in the revolutionary quality and abilities of a number of leading cadres and party members on various levels and in various sectors, as well as the rightist laxity in organizing and leading numerous tasks.

To overcome the shortcomings in leading and organizing the implementation of tasks, we must not only resolve any of these problems separately but must eliminate all these causes simultaneously. We must especially and scrupulously implement the principle of democratic centralism in party activities and in economic and state management, and must oppose bureaucratism and conservatism so as to formulate promptly plans, policies, systems and management methods consistent with economic laws and with the characteristics of our national economy. A new spirit must be created in the mass movement to promote the development of production and to stabilize and improve gradually the people's living standards. On this basis and on the basis of training, deploying and educating cadres and promoting the exemplary role of cadres, especially key cadres from the top to the bottom level, we must resolve satisfactorily other ideological and organizational problems and overcome the negative aspects.

We are striving to overcome these shortcomings and mistakes. However, inertia remains serious and there has not been enough time for effecting necessary changes. Really bringing about a far-reaching and revolutionary change in organizing and building the party and in improving managerial work is the decisive factor in, first of all, successfully implementing the resolutions of the fifth national party congress.

II. The General Tasks of Party Building

Comrades, we are building the party under the circumstances of our party being a ruling party and leading the building of socialism throughout the country in the new favorable conditions of the unified country and of the extraordinarily strong world revolutionary movement.

At the same time, however, we have to face very great difficulties such as advancing small-scale production to large-scale socialist production, coping with a protracted multifaceted war of destruction, and carrying out two strategic tasks simultaneously while the struggle between the two roads in the country as well as in the rest of the world is unfolding bitterly and the party's international obligations are considerable.

On the basis of the situation of the party and the actual situation in the country and of the new tasks specified in the political report, the key task in building the party consists of continuing to improve the working class, character and the party's vanguard character and build a politically, ideologically and organizationally firm and strong party in order to ensure the successful implementation of the party's lines and improve its leadership capabilities and effectiveness vis-a-vis the socialist construction and national defense cause. This will also help our party to maintain constantly its revolutionary and scientific character as a pure party that has a high combativity and which is closely attached to the masses.

The above key task must be carried out in coordination with the renovation of the state's managerial system, especially in the economic and social domains, and with the development of the effectiveness of the state management and the working people's collective mastery, in order to accelerate the overall development of society and ensure satisfactory party leadership over the two immediate, strategic tasks -- successfully achieving the objectives set forth by the party for the 5-year 1981-85 period and the 1980's as a whole; and winning victory in the struggle against the Chinese hegemonist expansionists' multifaceted war of sabotage, standing ready to cope with any eventuality caused by them and fulfilling the party's international obligations.

Our party must truly be a party with able, knowledgeable and capable leadership of the socialist construction cause. It must, in particular, possess the knowledge and capability for economic leadership and management. It must be able to build a state that knows how to effectively manage the economy, the people's life and society.

Our party must be a very stalwart party in the struggle against Chinese hegemonistic expansionism which is in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces. It must be in a good position to frustrate all of their acts of sabotage and aggression.

Our party must truly be a party which possesses high combativity and achieves solidarity and single-mindedness and which is politically clean and organizationally strong and firm and is closely attached to the masses.

With these tasks in mind, in the 5-year period to come there must be profound and basic changes in the party's ideological and organizational tasks according to the following requirements:

1. Ensure the profound understanding of the party's lines and improve its leadership and organizational ability in the economic, social, national defense and security domains, with stress laid on the economic domain.

2. Improve the party's leadership in conjunction with the renovation of the economic managerial system and the streamlining of the party's apparatus and overcome conservatism and bureaucratism in the party and state apparatuses.

3. Consolidate at all cost basic party organizations in coordination with the fulfillment of the political task of building districts, precincts, cities, villages and city wards; of building production and trade organizations and combat units; and of promoting mass movements. Improve the combativeness of basic party organizations, develop and consolidate the party ranks, and be resolute in dismissing opportunist, decadent and degenerate elements and unqualified members from the party.

4. According to plan, renovate the training and improvement of cadres, make arrangements for correct assignments, ensure continuity in the building of a contingent of core cadres, strive to improve the qualities and abilities of the body of cadres and ensure the firmness of the party under all circumstances. This is an extremely important requirement for our party's protracted revolutionary cause.

5. Maintain and develop the party's tradition of solidarity and single-mindedness, implement fully the principle of democratic centralism and carry out criticism and self-criticism constantly within the party.

[Address by Truong Chinh, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, at 31 March Hanoi mass rally to welcome the success of the Fifth VCP Congress -- read by announcer]

[Text] Dear compatriots in the capital city; dear compatriots nationwide; dear honorable guests; dear comrades and friends:

Over the past few days our compatriots in the capital as well as throughout the country have attentively followed the work of the Fifth VCP National Congress. The achievements of the party congress are the culmination of a process of serious work bringing together the collective intelligence of the entire party and reflecting the will and aspirations of the whole people. The work of the congress is a vivid manifestation of the leading party's sense of responsibility, of its close relations with the people and of the relations between the people and their party.

Over the past year or more our compatriots and combatants throughout the country have actively participated in the socialist emulation drive to overcome difficulties, step up production and score achievements in honor of the congress. In the past months the emulation movement has become even more active; many new factors have emerged; many innovations have developed; a number of construction projects have been completed and our people at home and abroad have submitted many accurate suggestions on national affairs to the party.

On behalf of the party Central Committee I warmly welcome our entire people's participation in and practical contributions to making preparations for the congress. May I report to you, comrades and compatriots, that the fifth party congress has completed its work and ended with success. The congress analyzed the national situation over the past years and at the present time; laid down the strategic tasks of the Vietnamese revolution in the new stage; charted the main orientations, tasks and targets in the economic and social fields for the 5 years 1981-85 and for the 1980's as a whole; made decisions on policies and measures with regard to party building and to amendments to the party's rules; and elected the new party Central Committee with Comrade Le Duan as general secretary.

Dear comrades and compatriots, assessing the situation over the recent period, the congress affirmed that the past 5 years will go down in the nation's history as a stage of very glorious victories of the Vietnamese revolution. As a matter of fact, despite the ravages caused to our country by a fierce, protracted war started by imperialism, our people have overcome countless difficulties; speedily achieving national reunification on the state level; promulgating the Constitution of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam; establishing a proletarian dictatorship system in the whole country; defeating two wars of aggression initiated by Chinese expansionism and hegemonism; rehabilitating, transforming and building the economy; transforming and developing culture; maintaining political security; strengthening the militant alliance and forming a solid position of mutual support for revolutions of the three Indochinese countries; strengthening militant solidarity, and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries. The impact of the Vietnamese revolution on the world peoples' struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism has been increased. Our country's position has been enhanced in the international arena.

These victories have taken the Vietnamese revolution forward to a new, firmer strategic position and have created greater possibilities for the defense of the fatherland and the successful building of socialism. These glorious victories have been recorded through the sacrifices of countless comrades and compatriots, through the self-denying labor of our entire people and army, with the great assistance of the Soviet Union, Laos, Kampuchea and other fraternal socialist countries and with the strong support of the revolutionary and peace forces in the world.

The congress affirmed the heroism of our nation and our people's armed forces and the staunch will of our workers, peasants, intellectual workers and our people's armed forces in the daily struggle to overcome hardships and trials in the postwar period and in the first stage of socialist construction.

The congress also pointed out that these victories had been due to the steadfast leadership of our party, which was founded and steeled by President Ho Chi Minh and which has remained boundlessly loyal to Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, to the destiny of the nation and the cause of the people and to the leadership of the Central Committee headed by its general secretary, Comrade Le Duan. These victories have proved the correctness of the line traced in the resolutions of the fourth party congress and in the subsequent resolutions of the party Central Committee.

In the extremely serious situation of our country and in the face of the new enemy's aggressive schemes and acts, our party has laid down resolute and clear-sighted strategic guidelines, made accurate and timely decisions and led our revolution to pass an important turning point and continue to develop in the right direction.

With a high sense of responsibility and serious self-criticism and criticism, the congress assessed the shortcomings and mistakes of our party and state in economic and social leadership and management, took responsibility upon itself, made a self-criticism before the people and drew useful lessons, thus strengthening the unity and singlemindedness of the party and people and enhancing the will and determination to strive for a steadier advance in the stage ahead.

Dear comrades and compatriots, at present, the Chinese reactionaries, aided and abetted by the United States, are waging a kind of war of sabotage against our country on the military, political, economic and cultural fronts and are using various forces and resorting to very wicked tricks. Our country is now in a situation in which it enjoys peace while having to cope with this kind of many-sided war of sabotage waged by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists acting hand in glove with the U.S. imperialists.

Therefore, the congress pointed out that in the new stage of the revolution our entire party, people and army must carry out two strategic tasks: The successful building of socialism and the maintenance of combat readiness in order to effectively defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland. That is the sacred mission that today's Vietnamese generation must assume in the nation's history. The congress laid down socialist construction as a primary task and affirmed the continued implementation of the general line of socialist revolution and the line of building a socialist economy set forth by the fourth congress.

The congress set the following as the orientation and tasks for the eighties: Continuing socialist construction along with socialist transformation; concentrating forces on the development of agriculture, regarded as the primary front; taking agriculture a step further toward socialist large-scale production; striving hard to boost consumer goods production and to quickly increase exports; reorganizing and developing communications and transportation services; and continuing efforts to build a number of heavy industries.

The 5 years 1981-1985 are years of further development for the national economy, rearrangement of the economic structure and stepped-up socialist transformation. These three aspects are closely interrelated and aimed at primarily stabilizing the economic and social situation, meeting the most pressing and vital requirements of the people's material and cultural lines, reducing the most serious imbalances in the economy, overcoming to some extent the abnormal aspects of distribution and circulation and creating more conditions for a more vigorous and steadier advance in subsequent years.

The congress stressed the need to renovate economic management and put our valuable assets -- namely manpower, land, trade and the existing and latent potential of our country -- to the best use. At the same time we should bring into play the great effect of the all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and the Council of Mutual Economic Assistance and of the mutual assistance and cooperation with Laos and Kampuchea to build and develop the economies of the three Indochinese countries.

The number one objective of the party's economic program is to effectively solve the food problem for our whole society and to properly meet clothing needs and other essential needs of the people.

The congress stressed that the immediate task in national defense is to resolutely defeat the Chinese reactionaries' many-sided sabotage war and maintain political security, public order and social safety while ensuring that the country always stands strong enough and ready to defeat the enemy under any circumstances.

Thus, the resolutions of the congress have shed light on the present stage of our cause of building socialism and defending the fatherland. The coming stage will be one of arduous and fierce struggle in all fields. We must undergo hardships, work with self-abnegation and mature quickly. It will not be easy for us to reach the achievements we desire because the enemy across the border is feverishly pursuing his scheme of weakening and annexing our country and because the direct advance from small-scale production to socialism and the creation of a modern socialist economy and a prosperous, civilized life are entirely new and extremely difficult tasks. The struggle to overcome the difficulties ahead and to advance our economy and country needs the hands, brains and hearts of all patriotic Vietnamese.

Our people have been steeled in hardships and trials and have overcome all obstacles in their advance. Through the fifth party congress, with its new decisions, our people will grasp even more firmly the situation in our country and grow more confident in their own strength. Our people will surely gloriously overcome all ordeals ahead, writing more brilliant pages in the revolutionary epic of the nation.

Dear comrades and compatriots, at the congress we voiced our party's and state's views on burning international problems. The party's foreign policy reflects the nature of our system, the deep aspirations of our people and the basic interests of our state. We should secure a favorable international context and great international assistance to heal the wounds of war and build a prosperous and happy life for the people. We will consistently and unceasingly consolidate and strengthen militant solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. We will tighten the alliance and special relationship with Laos and Kampuchea in a spirit of sharing weal and woe and mutual assistance. We will tirelessly work for a Southeast Asia of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation. We advocate a peaceful Asia and a struggle against Chinese expansionism and hegemonism in collusion with U.S. imperialism -- the cause of tension on this continent. We strongly support the resolute struggle of other peoples against the warlike imperialist and reactionary forces and for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

Our correct stand has received wide sympathy and support in the world. At this fifth congress, voices filled with ardent feelings that manifest this sympathy and support from our friends in the world have resounded far and wide across our country and in the hearts of all our citizens.

During the first years of this decade, the world situation has become obviously tense due to the warlike and interventionist policy of the Reagan administration. However, the warmongers are encountering insurmountable obstacles: The national defense strength of the Soviet Union and of the socialist community as a whole; the increasing strength of the three revolutionary currents which are on the offensive; the awareness of hundreds of millions of people who are rising up to shatter the shackles of enslavement on this planet; and the will and aspiration for peace of all nations.

In view of the present world situation, coordinating all efforts of socialist countries, nonaligned countries, all nations and democratic and peace forces is of extreme importance in repelling the danger of nuclear war and checking the adventurous policy of the warlike imperialists. In this noble struggle, the solidarity and unity among the socialist community nations is of decisive importance.

Our party, state and people fully support the Soviet Union's peace program for the 1980's. We welcome the proposals and initiatives set forth by Comrade Leonid Ilich Brezhnev at the 17th Soviet Trade Unions Congress and the statement he recently made in Tashkent. We support the constructive peace initiative of Comrade Tsedenbal and the Mongolian Government regarding Asia. Once again, we express the resolute support and full solidarity of our party and people with the Polish brothers who are doing all that is necessary to restore public order and security and to protect socialist gains.

Regarding China, we have on many occasions stated that our people bear no grudge against the Chinese people, that our friendship with the Chinese people remains intact. This is a longstanding friendship that the Chinese authorities themselves have trampled underfoot. We hold that any disputes between the two neighboring countries left behind by history can be resolved through negotiations if the Chinese authorities renounce their aggressive and hostile policy toward our people.

Dear comrades and compatriots, the fifth party congress has concerned itself with the question of enhancing the party's combat strength and promoting its leadership ability. The congress has decided that the key present party building tasks are to continue to promote the party's working class nature; to develop the party and make it strong and stable politically, ideologically and organizationally in order to ensure success in implementing the party's line; to raise the party's leadership ability in socialist construction and national defense; to enable the party to constantly and firmly maintain its revolutionary and scientific nature; and to make the party a truly upright party which has great combat strength and is closely united with the masses. The congress has particularly stressed that we must strive to raise the quality of party members. A party member's quality and capability at present are primarily reflected in his spirit of revolutionary offensive, in his firm belief in the victory of socialist revolution and in the successful defense of the fatherland. His quality and capability are also manifested in his calmness in the face of difficulties and his hourly and daily struggle to perform realistic activities in contributing to socialist construction and socialist transformation, developing production and stabilizing and improving, step by step, the people's living conditions.

On the national defense front, a party member not only must uphold the spirit of valiant fighting on the frontline but must heighten his vigilance in countering the acts of sabotage by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in the political, economic and ideological fields. He must not adopt an evasive attitude or the attitude of an outsider. He must not make demands or complain about negative manifestations in society. On the contrary, he must intensively participate in the struggle between the socialist and capitalist paths and combat negative manifestations and spontaneous capitalist tendencies in order to protect the people's right to collective mastership and to consolidate and strengthen the battleground of socialism.

To maintain its purity, the party will resolutely expel all members who are opportunist and corrupt; who have a paralyzed revolutionary will; who exploit and oppress the people; who smuggle and hoard goods; and who take bribes. Meanwhile, the party will continue to enlarge its ranks by admitting many new members -- that is, those outstanding people who are conscious of the party's ideals; who have been morally strengthened through real ordeal; who have a certain political, cultural, scientific and technical knowledge; and who are well experienced in economic and social management.

The congress stressed the need for the entire party -- that is every party organization, cadre and member -- to try its best to maintain and develop the party's tradition of solidarity and unity and to correctly implement President Ho Chi Minh's teaching: Solidarity is a valuable tradition of our party and our people. You comrades, from the central level to the party chapter, must preserve the party's solidarity and unity of mind like the pupil of one's eye. This is also Lenin's teaching.

The congress attached great importance to building and developing the laboring people's collective mastery in accordance with the system: The party leads, the people are masters and the state manages. Our party's leadership must ensure the building of a steady, strong state; the strengthening of the state's role and efficiency; the consolidation of the socialist legal system and the prevention of a number of party organizations from performing many tasks at one time and from infringing on administrative organs' functions. The party's leadership must ensure the building of mass organizations into solid parts of the proletarian dictatorship system, into schools of socialism for all strata of people and into the links between the party and the popular masses.

The VCP is the offspring of the working class and people of Vietnam. The sacred relationship between the party and the people has become a valuable tradition. This is the source of strength for the party and the nation. In any position or work, each party member must reexamine his work behavior, stay close to the masses, penetrate the mass movement, listen to the masses' opinions and accept and uphold the masses' creative experiences.

The party will not tolerate any party member's violation of the people's interests. The party urges the people to more actively participate in building the party, to sincerely contribute their views on the party's leadership and their observations and criticism of cadres, party members and those persons who are recommended for party membership. Party members must always struggle to protect the party and must not tolerate those who attempt to separate the people from the party.

The fifth party congress was a landmark along the path of a protracted struggle full of hardships and victories of our party and people, for national independence and socialism. The struggle objectives and program of action of the party are also those of the working class and laboring people in our country.

The fifth party congress was held under the slogan: All for the socialist fatherland and for the people's happiness. The resolutions of the congress meet the vital interests of the nation, the urgent demands of the economy and the imperative everyday needs of the people. They constitute a solid basis for our party members, compatriots and combatants nationwide to whip up a seething widespread socialist emulation movement to overcome all difficulties and ordeals and score ever greater achievements in the noble revolutionary undertaking of the nation.

Dear comrades and compatriots, the party Central Committee calls on all comrades and compatriots in the capital city and all over the country to unite closely, to remain confident and enthusiastic and to strive to fully implement the important resolutions of the fifth party congress and the great President Ho Chi Minh's sacred testament. We will certainly successfully complete the socialist construction and effectively defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland. Our country will surely worthily contribute to strengthening the three revolutionary currents and promoting the world people's struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. Let us enthusiastically acclaim the success of the fifth party congress.

Long live the glorious VCP! President Ho Chi Minh will live forever in our enterprise!

NHAN DAN URGES ASCERTAINING STRATEGIC TASKS

[NHAN DAN 6 April editorial: "Guiding Thoughts for the Second Phase of Congress Preparations: Ascertain the Two Strategic Tasks"]

"It is a universal law of the socialist revolution to carry out national construction along with national defense. The fifth party congress has noted that our country is now in a quasi-peaceful state as we still have to cope with a multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, as well as to stand ready to deal with the situation in which the enemy could launch a large-scale war of aggression.

"From the international background and situation in our country and thoroughly aware that national construction must be carried out along with national defense, the party congress has determined two strategic tasks -- to build socialism successfully and to remain combat-ready to defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland firmly."

Our people's struggle against Chinese expansionism and hegemonism is a protracted, hard and extremely complex struggle. As long as the Beijing ruling circles still pursue a scheme to weaken and annex our country or carry out a policy of hostility against our people, we must remain vigilant and ready to defeat them in all types of wars. The two strategic tasks -- building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland -- are closely related.

"By successfully building socialism, we will be able to make our country stronger in all aspects, constantly improve our people's livelihood, strengthen our regime and national defense capacity, and maintain political security and social order and safety. Meanwhile, by strengthening our national defense forces and making our armed forces powerful, we will always be able to defend our country firmly and defeat the enemy in its multifaceted war of sabotage, thereby contributing significantly to the struggle to successfully build socialism."

Our country must remain strong, our people's livelihood must be further improved, and the political and spiritual unanimity in our society must be consolidated. These are the material and moral conditions necessary for repelling the danger of a war of aggression and preserving peace.

"The party congress has pointed out the need to fully implement these two strategic tasks so as to achieve new progress in the struggle for socialist construction and to create a combined and growing strength for the struggle to defend the country and maintain political security and social order and safety. These two strategic tasks must also be implemented fully and specifically by all localities, grassroots units, enterprises, villages, hamlets, organs, districts, precincts, and provinces and cities, as well as by all sectors operating throughout the country. These are the guiding thoughts for the second phase of the congress and for all party organizations.

"The party congress has affirmed that our people are fully capable of carrying out these two heavy tasks simultaneously. As pointed out by the congress, all is for the socialist fatherland and the people's happiness. That is the slogan of action for our entire party, people and armed forces. That is also the noble and sacred duty which our people, from this generation on, will have to shoulder in the face of the nation's history."

ARMY PAPER URGES CONGRESS RESOLUTIONS STUDY

[Undated QUAN DOI NHAN DAN editorial: "Thoroughly Study the Resolutions of the Party Congress"]

[Summary] The Fifth VCP Congress has unanimously adopted the party Central Committee political report, the report on orientations, tasks and main targets in the economic and social fields for the 1981-85 and the 1980's, and the report on party building and the amendment of the party statutes.

The party congress resolutions are the mian lines of action and the focal point expressing our people's uniform views and actions on striving to push our revolution forward further in the new stage.

"From now on, organizing a comprehensive revolutionary movement and the implementing the congress resolutions in order to turn them into lively reality are very great and important tasks for our entire party, people and armed forces."

To carry out the congress resolutions triumphantly, first of all we must thoroughly understand them, then carefully and scrupulously implement them in order to obtain best and concrete results. All party members, people and the armed forces must understand their duties clearly and firmly grasp the revolutionary line and various strategic positions in order to fulfill the targets set forth by the party congress.

"To implement the congress resolutions satisfactorily we must create an identity of views among the people on the nation's situation, the revolutionary line and task in order to form a uniform view which will lead to a uniform action."

Every locality, establishment and individual must have a program of action in order to carry out the congress resolutions triumphantly.

"Regarding our army, along with efforts to study general problems, the army must enable all officers and combatants to understand the duty of the army in the new revolutionary stage. To understand the congress resolutions we must not only discuss related documents, but must study the realities of the revolution and the armed forces so that we may correctly evaluate the situation, realize favorable and unfavorable conditions and understand our duties and tasks clearly in order to fulfill the set targets satisfactorily."

Each unit and each person must combine study with self-criticism and criticism in order to review his thinking and evaluate his performance; realize his strong and weak points in order to improve his ability to fulfill his duties more effectively. The implementation of the congress resolutions must be carried out consistently and continuously in accordance with party principle and in harmony with reality in order to fulfill the set targets creatively and effectively.

Various leader echelons, party members, officers and combatants of our army are determined to organize the study of the congress resolutions satisfactorily in order to create an identity of views in the entire army on the strategic line and basic viewpoints of the congress. This will enable all officers and combatants to understand clearly their duties and responsibilities, encourage them to unite and strive to implement the congress resolutions triumphantly, thereby contributing to fulfilling the two strategic revolutionary tasks of building and defending the socialist fatherland.

Addressing the fourth session of the U.N. Security Council's ad hoc meeting on Israeli-occupied Arab territories, she pointed out that these acts were part of the Israeli policy of annexation and were aimed at destroying the Palestinian resistance movement.

Nguyen Ngoc Dung reiterated Vietnam's solidarity with the Arab people whose cause, she stressed, was Vietnam's own. She demanded that Israel put an immediate end to its crimes against the Arab people and respect the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

PHAM VAN DONG SENDS NOTE SUPPORTING SARHAWIS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, 6 Apr -- Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers, has sent a message to Mohamed 'Abd al-Aziz, secretary general of the Polisario and chairman of the Revolutionary Command Council of the Revolution of the Saharan Democratic Arab Republic, thanking him for his telegram informing him of the situation of Sarhawi people's struggle.

"I consider this," Chairman Pham Van Dong wrote, "as a token of confidence in and a high appreciation of the Vietnamese people's support for and militant solidarity with the Sarhawi people now struggling perseveringly against imperialism and reaction in northwest Africa." The message continues: "The admission of the Saharan Democratic Arab Republic as a full member of the O.A.U. is eloquent proof of the justness and legitimacy of the struggle waged by the Sarhawi people as well as the growing international prestige of the Saharan Democratic Arab Republic. The Vietnamese people greatly rejoice at this great success of the Sarhawi people led by the Polisario Front.

"Panicked by the victories and the might of the Sarhawi revolution, the U.S. imperialists in collusion with the reactionary forces have intensified their interference and sent more modern military equipment to Western Sahara. That has created a new and extremely serious situation threatening peace and security in the region. The Vietnamese people severely condemn these acts of the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen.

"Now as in the past, the people and Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam strongly support the just struggle of the Sarhawi people, led by the Polisario front for self-determination and national independence. I have the firm conviction that though they still have to surmount many difficulties and hardships, the Sarhawi people will finally win glorious victory for their just struggle."

FOREST DESTRUCTION IN DAMAGED AREAS VIEWED

[Text] Before the liberation of the South, about 50 to 60 percent of the mangrove area in Ca Mau was destroyed by U.S.-puppet toxic chemicals. At present, these trees occupy only 56,280 hectares. Hundreds of thousands of hectares of the mangroves in U Minh were also devastated. Wanton destruction of other forests in the Mekong River Delta has continued in recent years. At present, only over 250,000 hectares in this region are covered with forests while another 8,500 hectares need reforestation. To prevent a situation in which forests are wantonly burned or destroyed and to quickly satisfy the need for ecological protection and the supply of timber and firewood to the people in the region, the Ministry of Forestry has delineated and determined the crop allocation for each type of soil, and introduced four methods of combining agriculture with forestry in various localities.

These involve shrimp breeding and fish farming in the area of the Sat forests; combining the cultivation of rice with the planting of mangrove; making the soil less alkaline by continuously planting mangrove, white eucalyptus and beefwood or other plants such as sugarcane, manioc and pineapple; and raising bees in the mangrove forests.

By planting new forests and restoring and preserving old forests in accordance with the combined methods mentioned above, the provinces in the Mekong River Delta have been able to produce practical and comprehensive economic results. Some provinces such as Tien Giang, Hau Giang and Kien Giang have even set up test areas for combining agriculture with forestry in different forms, with the intention of gaining experience for the development of production under various forms during 1982.

By actively developing the Sat forests (including the planting of mangrove and mushrooms), localities with saline soil in the coastal area can play an effective role in retaining alluviun to form landfills along the coastline in order to improve the soil and preserve fresh water.

Minh Hai, Hau Giang and Kien Riang Provinces are adopting many effective measures to put an immediate end to the situation in which forests are wantonly burned and destroyed while guiding the peasants, state farms and army units in carrying out production in accordance with the plan formulated for each region. Meanwhile, other provinces with large forests are intensively delineating their forested land and agricultural land and, on that basis, providing close guidance for combined agro-forestry production, and resolutely preventing any attempt to destroy the forests and then leave the land uncultivated.

NEW WAGE, BONUS SYSTEMS IMPLEMENTED 1 APR

[Text] The chairman of the Council of Ministers recently issued decision No 51-CT concerning a number of wage and bonus systems applied to workers and civil servants of some material production sectors. Pending the basic revision of the wage system of various material production sectors, all units assigned to heavy work duties in the sectors responsible for mining exploitation, geological work, metallurgy, machinery, electricity, chemical production, construction, transportation, forestry, fishery and agriculture -- including rubber production -- under the management of certain ministries and general departments are authorized by the Council of Ministers to apply a number of wage and bonus systems as follows:

-- Include the temporary monetary allowance given under decision No 219-CT in the current basic pay and use this as a basis for calculating monetary allowances.

-- The incentive pay rate for contract-based and product-based wages can be from 10 to 30 percent of the pay for the corresponding position as specified above, while the bonuses paid from the wage fund can be from 10 to 40 percent of the entire wage fund.

If a unit overfulfills its production plan, its wages will be increased in accordance with the principle that an increase of 1.3 percent of its wage fund will be given for every 1-percent increase in its production plan. Meanwhile, if a unit fails to fulfill its production plan, its wage fund will be cut by the corresponding rate.

These wage and bonus systems will be effective from 1 April 1982.

BK080706 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0500 GMT 8 Apr 82

[Text] Australian Prime Minister Mr Fraser has survived a challenge to his leadership of the Liberal Party. At a special meeting of the party's parliamentary members, Mr Fraser defeated the former foreign affairs minister, Mr Peacock, by 54 votes to 27. A Radio Australia correspondent in Canberra says this is considered the minimum figure required by Mr Peacock to keep open his options of a further challenge to Mr Fraser.

In a four-way ballot the deputy leadership of the parliamentary Liberal Party went to the treasurer, Mr Howard. The position had become vacant with the decision of the deputy leader, Sir Phillip Lynch, to step down.

ARGENTINE IMPORTS BOYCOTTED OVER FALKLANDS ISSUE

BK080921 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 8 Apr 82

[Text] Australia is to ban all imports from Argentina in retaliation for the Falklands invasion. The minister for foreign affairs, Mr Street, says the boycott will apply to all goods from Argentina except those already on the way or covered by existing contracts. However, the government will not ban exports of Australian goods to Argentina.

The prime minister, Mr Fraser, has said earlier he supports the use of armed force by Britain to retake the Falklands if diplomatic initiatives fail.

Radio Australia's office in Canberra says trade between the two countries runs heavily in Australia's favor. Australia exported A$55 million worth of goods, most of it alumina, to Argentina last year, which is about U.S. $58 million. In return, Australia took almost A$6 million worth of leather, computer parts and bottling machinery from Argentinian manufactureres.

ADAM MALIK COMMENTS ON FALKLANDS DISPUTE

BK081105 Jakarta OANA in English 1048 GMT 8 Apr 82

[Text] Jakarta, 8 Apr (OANA/ANTARA) -- Indonesian Vice President Adam Malik Thursday [8 April] suggested that Argentina and Britain settle the question of Argentina's forceful occupation of the British-ruled Falkland Islands by "compromise."

Adam Malik made this statement upon reporters' question after he had called President Suharto Thursday morning. He suggested that sovereignty over Falkland Islands be granted to Argentina and Argentina should cooperate with Britain if the controversy sprang from the existence of large oil deposits found on the island.

Asked about Indonesia's attitude toward the issue, Vice President Adam Malik replied that two things should be taken into account in the question of this British colony. He elaborated that the Indonesia constitution disapproved of colonialism which should be eliminated from the face of the earth.

"We must remember that we are dealing with a problem that involves Britain," he said.

The question now is, according to Malik, whether or not the Falkland Islands were an independent state or whether the islands were inhabited by people of Argentinian descent.

The Indonesian vice president further commented, "If the issue is a strategic one, Falkland Islands might belong to Britain because it was from these islands that Britain dispatched retaliatory attacks against Japan and Germany during World War II.

"However at present is worth pondering what actually caused the conflict over the islands to arise, and the best solution is by compromise."

Adam Malik however added that the Argentinian-British conflict over Falkland Islands was "no business of ours, but still we base our attitude on the 1945 constitution which rejects any leftovers of colonialism."

TELEVISION REPORTS ON TAIWAN 'MILITARY MIGHT'

BK051335 Hong Kong AFP in English 1235 GMT 5 Apr 82

[Text] Jakarta, 5 Apr (AFP) -- Indonesia, which severed diplomatic relations with China 12 years ago following an alleged communist coup attempt here, displayed Taiwan's military might through the state-run television here last night.

Television reporter Hendro Subroto, who interviewed a Taiwanese officer on military training, had praise for Taiwan's armed forces. The report featured an exercise by Taiwanese marines and showed a number of airforce jets and other military hardward.

The television show gave rise to speculation that Indonesia might be moving closer to Taiwan, though they have not established diplomatic relations. Trade links between the two states have been growing rapidly.

The show, the first on Indonesian television, coincided with the seventh anniversary of the death of Taiwanese President Chiang Kai-shek.

AGRICULTURE 'WHITE PAPER' EXAMINES FARM IMPORTS

[Text] Tokyo, April 9 (KYODO) -- Early liberalization of imports of farm produce is difficult in the light of the present situation faced by Japan's agriculture and in view of many problems still remaining to be solved. This was stressed by the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries in its annual white paper on agriculture announced on Friday.

On the problem of liberalization of farm produce imports, the white paper said it was important to take appropriate measures on the matter while maintaining harmony with sound development of domestic agriculture. It said problems exist in taking hasty action on the matter.

The white paper said the country's agricultural and farming villages were fulfilling their role of forming a healthy regional society and maintaining the natural environment besides working for a stable supply of foodstuffs.

It said labor productivity in Japan's agriculture rose at an annual rate of 5.6 percent between fiscal 1965 and 1980. This, it said, was due chiefly to technological innovations and efforts to overcome such adverse conditions as a drop in farm acreage. It stressed that it was necessary for the agriculture industry to work for structural improvement in the future.

Faced with the increasing severity of Japan-U.S. trade friction and criticism raised by the second ad hoc Administrative Reform Council that the government is taking an overprotective policy toward agriculture, this year's white paper cited further improvement of agricultural productivity based on structural improvements as the biggest task faced by Japan's agricultural industry. It strongly appealed for raising productivity through technological innovation and expanding the scope of agriculture.

The white paper also said:

-- Since Japan's rate of reliance on imports of farm produce is high, even a minimal shortage in basic foodstuffs will pose dangers of big social confusion and uneasiness. Therefore, a stabilized supply of foodstuffs has become increasingly important.

-- Japan's imports of farm products already have reached a high level and a sharp increase as in the past cannot be anticipated in the future when viewed from movements of foodstuffs in the future based on international cooperation. It noted that various advanced countries were taking protective measures on farm products in accordance with their domestic situation.

-- Amid increases in the food supply-demand situation since the middle part of the 1960's, the nation's food supply structure has shifted to a dual structure composition with the self-sufficiency rate for some items being high and that of others drastically low. The overall self-sufficiency rate for food, excluding feed, stands at 72 with that of grain registering 33 percent.

-- Prices in Japan of such products as wheat, rice and beef are sharply higher than international levels while those of chicken, eggs and pork are lower.

-- The per capita consumption of rice in fiscal 1980 declined 1.1 percent due to the effects of a drop in real income and the abnormally cool summer. Rice consumption is still showing a declining trend.

-- The number of farming households declined at a slow annual rate of 1.3 percent between 1979 and 1981. There were a total of 1.04 million households having males exclusively engaged in farming in 1981, accounting for 23 percent of the total farming households.

NODONG SINMUN ASSAILS ROK-U.S. SECURITY MEETING

[NODONG SINMUN 8 April commentator's article: "Criminal Confab Rendering the Situation Strained on the Korean Peninsula"]

[Text] A very unusual event took place in South Korea. In the midst of the large-scale military exercise called "Team Spirit 1982," stated against our republic for 2 months, which is reaching its climax, turning the land of South Korea into a war zone closely resembling a real war, the so-called 14th annual South Korea-U.S. Security Consultative Meeting was held recently in Seoul. U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger; Jones, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff; and Long, commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific, those who plan and execute U.S. war policy, came to South Korea and supervised this meeting.

This shows that the U.S. imperialists regarded the Security Consultative Meeting as very important in implementing the policy for invading Korea. At the end of the meeting, a joint communique was issued. Babbling about a military buildup in the North and its aggressive posture and saying that the security of the South Korean puppets is a key to the peace of Northeast Asia and vital to the security of the United States, the joint communique emphasized beefing up the U.S. troops occupying South Korea and the puppet army. According to the joint communique, the United States checked the plan to step up the military strength of the puppets and the conditions of the war industry in South Korea, pledged to increase its military aid to the puppet clique and signed an agreement to speedily transfer war materiel to the puppet clique in the event of an emergency.

In the joint communique, Weinberger babbled that the United States will remain a Pacific power, that the United States' nuclear umbrella would continue to provide additional security to the puppet clique and that the functioning of the U.S. command, labeled the UN Command, would continue.

The joint communique issued at the end of the 14th annual South Korea-U.S. Security Consultative Meeting is a criminal document on which a new bargain for aggression and nation-selling was signed between the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets and an aggressive document to trigger a new war against our republic. Through this ignominious communique, the U.S. imperialists not only exposed their attempt to perpetually occupy South Korea and permanently rule it but displayed a vicious nature as bellicose elements and nuclear war maniacs eager to trigger a new war of aggression against the Korean people, in particular a nuclear war. At the same time, the South Korean puppets, a shock brigade to implement the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers to provoke a new war in Korea, exposed their nature as a treacherous clique running wild against their fellow countrymen, with swords in their mouths.

Simply speaking, the annual South Korea-U.S. Security Consultative Meeting between U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger and the South Korean puppets was a criminal parley for executing the U.S. imperialists' military strategy and war provocation scheme against Korea. What is more, at a time when an extremely provocative war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982" is being staged wildly against our republic, Weinberger flew into the bullet-flying operations and hatched a war plot with the puppets, commanding the operation at the front. This revealed the U.S. imperialists' attempt to provoke a new war on the Korean Peninsula.

Saying that the security of South Korea is vital to the security and in the interest of the United States, Weinberger babbled that he reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to speedily and effectively aid the South Korean puppets in the event of an armed clash on the Korean Peninsula. These are aggressive and outrageous remarks. To say that South Korea, which is located in a distant place thousands of miles away from the U.S. continent across the ocean, is vital to the security of the United States is a doctrine of aggression which can be uttered only by the U.S. imperialists who have a vicious ambition for aggression against Korea.

It is no longer a secret that the U.S. imperialists, who regard South Korea as a vital place for executing their aggressive world strategy, are trying to keep South Korea as a beachhead and a military strategic foothold for world domination and are viciously advancing their war policy against the northern half of the republic.

The U.S. imperialists' policy of occupying South Korea is a military ploy to realize this ambition. Their gibberish about quick and efficient support is a pledge that they will not hesitate to ignite a war to realize this aggressive ambition. In actuality, the U.S. imperialists used the Security Consultative Meeting as a chance to strengthen the U.S. and puppet forces and step up war preparations in South Korea.

At the meeting, the U.S. imperialists pledged to offer a tremendous amount of foreign military sales credit to the South Korean puppets and to transfer F-16 fighter-bombers and other lethal weapons of various kinds. They also promised that in accordance with the wartime resupply requirement, they would augment stockpiles of war reserve materiel such as ammunition and fuel and transfer $2 billion of munitions in case of an emergency. In addition, they pledged to continue to improve early warning capabilities, to broaden the exchange of strategic information, to develop joint military exercises and to upgrade the capabilities of the U.S. imperialists' aggressive forces command.

Weinberger said the UN Command should be maintained. This means the United States will continue to seize the prerogative of supreme command and operational command over the puppet army. This war scheme of the U.S. imperialists is a development which cannot be overlooked. This is convincing proof that they are hastening to provoke another war in Korea.

The Security Consultative Meeting showed that the present U.S. administration surpasses its predecessors in advancing along the road of vicious military adventure against the Korean people. Nevertheless, Weinberger shamelessly described the U.S. policy of aggression and war as one to protect something from the threat of the North and to preserve peace on the Korean Peninsula. This is a fraud which can fool no one.

The U.S. imperialists have continued the illegal occupation of half of the land of another country tens of thousands of miles from their mainland for several decades and they continue to disturb peace by committing ceaseless provocations. Still, they describe their war adventure as one for peace and defense. This is, indeed, a sophism of the outradeous aggressors and brigandish logic similar to that of a thief crying: "Stop thief!"

People clearly see the U.S. imperialists' wicked intention to conceal and justify their criminal attempts and schemes. The adventurous moves of the U.S. imperialists to unleash another war of aggression in Korea have reached a [illegible] serious phase as they are trying to inveigle the Japanese militarist forces into th[illegible].

This time Weinberger visited Japan prior to his visit to South Korea and discussed military affairs with high-ranking Japanese authorities. On the occasion, babbling about the continuation and consolidation of the U.S.-Japan security system and Japan's military role in Asia, he openly called for Japan to increase military expenditures, drastically strengthen the air and naval forces, submarines and fighter-bombers in particular, blockade the Korean Strait and engage in operations in the surrounding waters of our country in case of a contingency. At the same time, he ranted that the military collusion between Japan and the South Korean puppets should be tightened and joint military exercises of the United States, Japan and the puppets be held frequently. Such outbursts by Weinberger betray beyond all doubt a wicked design not only to use Japan as an operational and supply base for the United States but to send Japan's Self-Defense Forces to the Korean front in case of a new war of aggression in Korea.

The Security Consultative Meeting held this time also brought to light the fact that the Chon Tu-hwan clique of South Korea is a squalid hireling for the execution of the U.S. imperialists' Korean strategy and war policy.

The puppets begged their masters for reaffirmation of the pledge to fight together in the war against us and for a supply of lethal weapons and war materiel. By so doing, they disclosed their nature as national traitors running amok in scheming to realize the wicked ambition for long-term office under the protection of the aggressors and to attack their compatriots with the support of foreign forces.

The U.S. imperialists' pledge of modern lethal weapons and war materiel to the puppets and augmentation of their war capabilities is aimed at testing the ability of traitor Chon Tu-hwan as a fascist murderer and war maniac and using him as a shock brigade in the war against us. The so-called new partnership which the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique clamor about at the Security Consultative Meeting means only that the aggressive and nation-selling collusion between the masters and stooges has reached a new phase and that the military domination and subjugation has been further intensified.

It is clear that the war parley between masters and stooges only aggravates the situation in the Korean Peninsula and creates new obstacles for the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea. Indeed, in Korea today, because of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, a dangerous situation in which a war may break out at any time is being created. This draws the deep concern of the progressive world people calling for peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification.

Our people [illegible] the world's people are closely watching the U.S. imperialists' and puppets' belligerent [illegible]berish and saber rattling with lethal weapons. Our era is one in which people oppose war and demand peace, oppose all forms of domination and subjugation and take the road of independence. The days when a policy of strength won laurels for the aggressors have gone for good. The imperialists' policy of strength and nuclear blackmail is anachronistic.

The U.S. imperialists cannot frighten us with the roar of planes, tanks and gunfire, nor can they quench the South Korean people's growing spirit against fascism and for democracy and reunification. They must realize this. If the South Korean puppet clique continues to follow its masters and run counter to the nation, it will achieve nothing but self-destruction.

If the U.S. imperialists truly desire peace in Korea and in Northeast Asia, they must not commit such reckless things as augmentation of forces and play with fire, but remove the cap of the UN Forces from the heads of U.S. forces in South Korea and immediately withdraw in accordance with the demand of our people and the world's people. At the same time, they must respond to our proposal to replace the armistice agreement with a peace agreement.

If they persist in aggravating the situation in the Korean Peninsula and doggedly follow the road of the war despite our people's repeated warnings, they will be held wholly responsible for the consequences arising therefrom.

VRPR REPORTS ANTI-U.S. LEAFLETS AT U.S. EMBASSY

SK081321 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 2 Apr 82

[Text] According to a report from the Seoul municipal chapter of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification, recently anti-U.S. leaflets were scattered around the U.S. Embassy in Seoul, which frightened embassy employees. The leaflets, which were titled "The United States Should Learn a Due Lesson From the Arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan," carried a message as follows:

We warn -- and urge -- the U.S. Embassy: The arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan was an eruption of our people's pent-up anti-U.S. sentiment. The mere sight of the Yankees and the mere mention of the United States give us shivers up our spine. The United States is not a liberator and aid-giver, but an aggressor and plunderer. It is the barbarian of the 20th century with whom we cannot live under the same sky.

Yesterday it was the American Cultural Center in Pusan and Walker Hill [hotel in Seoul] that were gutted. The U.S. Embassy will be gutted in the near future. The United States should learn a due lesson from the arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan and promptly withdraw. Death to the Yankees! Yankees, go home!

NODONG SINMUN HITS CHON'S 'CONFRONTATION POLICY'

[Text] Pyongyang, April 9 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan clique again struck up the old theme of "southward invasion" at the recent graduation ceremonies of the puppet military academy and puppet air force academy to shift onto others the responsibility for the heightened tension in the Korean Peninsula and incited "confrontation" with us by "strength." In this connection NODONG SINMUN today prints a signed commentary titled "True Colour of Warmaniac."

Noting that the traitor Chon Tu-hwan called for the "superiority of strength," ranting that only the "building up of strength" based on "huge military power" will make it possible to preserve "peace" and create a climate for "dialogue," the commentary says: This is a false propaganda reversing black and white and brazenfaced argument. It goes on: It is because of the policy of aggression and war pursued by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets that peace is endangered and tension heightened in the Korean Peninsula.

Large-scale war exercises are going on against us in South Korea which has turned into a military base, a nuclear base, of several U.S. Army divisions and huge puppet army, and gun and rifle firing against our side is frequent in the Demilitarized Zone. At the recent "South Korea-U.S. annual Security Consultative Meeting" it was agreed to expand exchanges of strategic information, develop joint exercises, improve military sales loan conditions and develop the system for cooperation with the munitions industry of South Korea, and an "agreement" was signed on delivering war supplies needed for wartime emergency to the puppets.

According to the logic of the puppets, the deployment of nuclear weapons and holding of war exercises in South Korea are intended to preserve "peace" in Korea and gun and rifle firing against our side is aimed at holding a "dialogue." To talk about "peace" and "dialogue" while stepping up arms buildup and kicking up war rackets to disturb peace and inciting North-South confrontation to aggravate the situation is a foolish trick to flout public opinion and justify their treacherous acts.

In raising a hue and cry over "southward invasion" and stepping up arms buildup, the Chon Tu-hwan clique tries to prop up with the bayonet the puppet regime facing a crisis, isolated from the people, freeze the division and realise its ambition for long-term office through North-South confrontation and find a way out in the military adventurous policy. This is a dangerous scheme to wreck peace and aggravate the situation in Korea.

Our people are closely watching the reckless war manoeuvres of the South Korean puppets under the manipulation of U.S. imperialism. Only when the U.S. troops withdraw from South Korea and arms buildup and anti-communist confrontation rows there are brought to an end can peace in the Korean Peninsula be preserved. Dialogue, too, will be realised only when hostile acts against us are terminated in South Korea. The Chon Tu-hwan clique must act with discretion.

Government organs should discharge their duties in such a way as to conform to the will of the party and establish the revolutionary discipline of unanimously respecting the decisions and instructions of the party. If so, the revolutionary government of our workers and farmers can be strengthened into the most revolutionary government which creditably realizes the cause of the party.

ROK-BUILT COMBAT AIRCRAFT TO DEBUT IN 1982

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan Wednesday said that the Republic of Korea's first locally manufactured combat aircraft will make its debut this year.

"The air force will mark an epoch this year by flying the first combat aircraft manufactured by our own hands," the chief executive said.

Addressing a commencement ceremony of the Air Force Academy, Chon said that the nation has endeavored to develop the heavy and chemical industries, particularly for the self-supply of modern combat fighters.

"The only way to prevent another war (on the Korean Peninsula) is to possess a military strength which is far superior to that of the enemy which tries to trigger a war," President Chon said. "When we possess strong power," Chon went on, "those who attempt to invade us will have to abandon their (aggressive) scheme."

The president highly evaluated the role of the air force in the initial stage of modern war. "This is why all the countries of the world exert all-out efforts to develop highly sophisticated war planes," he said.

Touching on the world situations, the president warned of the aggressive scheme of the North Korean communists and uneasiness and uncertainty in the development of the international situations.

"Uncertainty and uneasiness in the world have increased in the wake of military and political confrontations based on ideologies as well as economic conflicts," the president said.

In addition, Chon said, the North Korean regime has conducted various provocative acts, threatening the republic's survival and the peace of the Korean Peninsula, while ignoring the nation's desire, as well as the world's, to see the peaceful reunification of the country. In this situation, the best way for the nation to keep its survival is to foster and preserve its own strength, the president said.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON VISIT BY HUNGARY'S PUJA

Hun Sen Meeting

[Text] On the second day of its visit to the PRK -- 6 April -- the delegation of the Hungarian People's Republic [HPR] Foreign Ministry led by Comrade Frigyes Puja, member of the Hungarian Socialist Workers Party Central Committee and minister of foreign affairs of the HPR, held talks at the Chamka Mon presidential palace at 1500 with the delegation of the PRK Foreign Ministry led by Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs of the PRK.

Attending the talks on the Kampuchean side were Comrade Kong Korm, deputy minister of foreign affairs; Comrade Sieng Saran, assistant to the minister of foreign affairs; and Comrade (Trok Saroeum), deputy chief of the USSR and East Europe department.

On the Hungarian side were Comrade Ferenc Szabo, director of the general department; Comrade Alfred Almasi, HPR ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the PRK; and Comrade (Tibor Zavey), secretary to the minister.

The talks mainly centered on the bilateral cooperation and a number of international issues of common interests. The two sides expressed complete unanimity of views on all questions raised.

The Hungarian delegation expressed elation at and satisfaction with the brilliant successes achieved by the Kampuchean people under the leadership of the KPRP during the past 3 years and regarded them as proof of a most stinging defeat of the Beijing expansionist-hegemonists, U.S. imperialists and their reactionary stooges. It noted that despite the latter's all-out efforts, the present stable situation in the PRK remains irreversible.

Evaluating the brilliant outcome of the Kampuchea-Hungary fraternal friendly relations, the two sides expressed satisfaction at the fruitful cooperation between the two countries, cooperation which grows steadily stronger in the interests of the two peoples and of peace and socialism in Southeast Asia and the world.

Regarding the situation prevailing in Southeast Asia at present, the two sides were unanimous that the Beijing expansionist-hegemonists and U.S. imperialists who have brought pressure to bear on the ASEAN countries to conduct hostile activities against the Indochinese countries are the ones responsible for the present tension in the region.

The Hungarian side stressed that the initiatives put forward by the fifth Indochinese foreign ministers conference in Vientiane are an effective step toward establishing peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Examining the worsening situation in various regions of the world, the two sides vehemently condemned the militarist policy of the Reagan administration and its allies who are doing their utmost to intensify nuclear and chemical arms race, to increase tension and to put pressure on as well as launch wanton aggressive acts against national liberation movements and countries pursuing the line of independence, peace and social progress in Asia, Africa, Latin America, the Middle East and the Persian Gulf region.

Regarding this question, the two sides held that mobilizing the forces of socialist countries and peace- and justice-loving peoples in the world constitutes an effective weapon against the aggressive and hegemonistic policy of the international reactionaries with the United States as the ringleader.

The talks proceeded in an atomosphere of brotherhood and complete mutual understanding.

KEO CHANDA AT PHNOM PENH TRADE UNION MEETING

BK021229 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0424 GMT 2 Apr 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 2 Apr (SPK) -- The committee of trade unions in Phnom Penh recently held a recapitulatory meeting in the presence of Keo Chanda, secretary of the party's committee and chairman of the people's committee of the capital. Mok Mareth, vice chairman of the people's committee of the town and Duong Savang, permanent member of the KFTU Central Committee, also attended this meeting.

Last year workers in Phnom Penh put into action 57 factories and plants, most of them for the production of agricultural instruments. Food industry can partly satisfy the needs of the population, and the town's light industry produces 11 different types of articles, from envelopes to shoes. Some 94 percent of the workers are union members.

In order to overcome food difficulties, workers of 20 factories mobilized by the trade union grew 11,650 hectares of rainy-season rice and 63 hectares of subsidiary crops.

The trade union plays also an important role in education of the masses. Due to its actions, 9 kindergartens were built for 427 children of workers, and 508 persons among 640 illiterate adults could read and write.

On this occasion Chairman Keo Chanda congratulated the trade unions of the town for their successes. He encouraged them to use their initiative to contribute to the improvement of workers' living standards and the quality of the productions.

[Text] Aid from the Free German Trade Union League [FDGB] was handed over through the GDR Embassy in Kampuchea to the Kampuchean Federation of Trade Unions in a ceremony held at the federation's office on the morning of 3 April. This aid consisted of cloth, clothing, sewing machines, typewriters, bicycles and various other consumer goods.

Attending the ceremony on the Kampuchean side were Comrade Heng Teav, member of the Council of State, vice chairman of the Kampuchean Federation of Trade Unions; Comrade Lim Tri, chief of cabinet of the Kampuchean Federation of Trade Unions; and a number of cadres in the federation's office. The German trade unions have aided the Kampuchean people and trade unions since the liberation of Kampuchea from the bloodstained claws of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan in 1979. For this reason the Kampuchean working class has always been grateful to the German working class and pledged to strengthen the bond of solidarity with the German working class and all other working classes throughout the world in order to safeguard peace, build socialism and resolutely oppose the imperialists and the Chinese expansionists.

In his reply Comrade Rolf Dach stressed: The German people will always stand by the side of the Kampuchean people. The presentation of this aid clearly reflects the spirit of fraternal solidarity and mutual care.

The comrade noted: It is necessary for the FDGB to aid the Kampuchean trade union because it is growing with every passing day in the service of the working class.

He said: The health service has developed vigorously from the provincial to the local levels. This development still does not meet the demand of our people. Therefore, all of us must heighten our revolutionary spirit and strive to surmount all obstacles in order to seize more and greater victories in the defense and construction of our country.

Concerning the enemy, the comrade said: Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann -- cheap lackeys of Beijing -- have been severely defeated. They have, however, stubbornly carried on their subversive activities against our revolution. No matter how hard they try, however, they will definitely suffer defeat in the end.

For this reaosn, in order to defend our revolutionary gains and maintain public order, cadres, personnel and people are dutybound to heighten revolutionary vigilance, strive to crush all maneuvers of the enemy and hold aloft the two banners -- that is, patriotism and international solidarity, particularly solidarity with the Vietnamese friends.

[Text] Beginning in October 1981, the Vietnamese enemies gathered 10,000 troops to wage operations in Siem Reap, Oddar Meanchey and Western Kompong Thom battlefields and took over many villages and communes which were controlled by our Democratic Kampuchea during the rainy season.

After waging guerrilla activities for 5 months, we have impaired the Vietnamese enemy forces and have cut their supply lines. They have been disabled and have experienced great losses and difficulties. At the end of February 1982 we succeeded in taking back villages and communes in these regions.

Since the beginning of March 1982 we have increased our military activites on the portion of Route 6 between Siem Reap and Kompong Thom. We have expanded our operations against the Vietnamese enemies in Kompong Leng District [Kompong Chhnang Province] and in the Tonle Sap Lake region. We have enlarged a number of our controlled areas along the shores of Tonle Sap Lake in Chikreng District [Siem Reap Province] and in Stoung District [Kompong Thom Province].

Long live our valiant army, guerrillas and people on the Siem Reap, Oddar Meanchey, Preah Vihear and Kompong Thom battlefields!

ALLEGED U.S. CHEMICAL WARFARE IN INDOCHINA HIT

BK081144 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 5 Apr 82

[Unattributed article: "Expose U.S. Chemical Warfare in Indochina"]

[Text] The Reagan administration has repeatedly fabricated reports that poisonous gas and chemical weapons have been used in Laos and Kampuchea. Recently, officials of the U.S. State Department have also said that they have a number of documents to use as evidence of the use of toxic chemicals by Vietnamese troops in these two countries.

This fabrication is all in line with their subtle schemes aimed at stepping up large-scale production of poisonous gases to be used as war weapons. The amount budgeted in the 1983 fiscal year for this purpose is more than $800 million. They have attached importance to speeding up the implementation of the plan to manufacture chemical weapons, a plan which needs billions of dollars in total expenditures.

The Washington ruling circles have long tried to conceal from world public opinion the facts about the tragic results of their criminal, large-scale testing of toxic chemicals during their war of aggression in Indochina. But the facts will certainly be exposed to the world sooner or later. According to documents of the SRV Disarmament Committee as well as of other organizations responsible for this matter in particular, U.S. aircraft dropped more than 100,000 tons of toxic chemicals on Vietnamese territory, as a result of which various crops and forests on nearly half of the total acreage in Vietnam were destroyed. According to a report by the U.S. secretary of health and human services, Schweiker, 43 percent of farmland and 44 percent of forestry land were used on several occasions by the U.S. as testing sites for chemical products. In addition, 70 percent of the coconut trees and tropical plants on 150,000 hectares were destroyed. During the U.S. chemical war of aggression, more than 2 million people suffered disaster while thousands of others were killed.

U.S. chemical weapons were also used in Laos and Kampuchea. But Washington has tried to pretend that the aforesaid tragic incidents were not caused by this. Schweiker himself has always tried to conceal this fact. In a press conference, he admitted that U.S. pilots were compelled to drop chemical weapons due to technical failures of the aircraft. At the same time, various American press organizations themselves have learned about a report on the U.S. use of poisonous gas for military purposes in Indochina, a report which is regarded by Washington as a top secret in the interests of national security. The New York TIMES openly disclosed that the report on the U.S. use of poisonous gas in Vietnam has been discovered. This fact was revealed following discussions on this matter by high-level circles of the U.S. Government. The report undeniably proves that the chemical war against civilians in the Indochinese countries was premeditated and was carried out with the direct participation of various central U.S. Government organizations.

In Laos the use of toxic chemicals began in December 1965 at the order of the U.S. Army commander in Vietnam, General Westmoreland. At present, this American general, as well as former U.S. Defense Secretary McNamara, says he does not recall whether he issued such an order or not. This is a childish excuse in light of the fact that he himself took part in causing this disaster to the Lao people as well as peoples of other countries in Indochina.

In Kampuchea the U.S. war of aggression resulted in the deaths of 800,000 civilians. As many as 240,000 Kampuchean people were disabled, while 80 to 85 percent of the forests were destroyed by U.S. toxic chemicals. The consequences of the U.S. imperialists' criminal acts are seen even now in Indochina where ailing, disabled people, forests with destroyed trees, drought and infertile soil can still be seen. As for those who were genuinely responsible for the consequences, they claim that they have lost their memories, yet they have taken an active role in denouncing and blaming other people.

In the West, large-scale propaganda has been made from 1 book -- which was quickly compiled -- on the so-called yellow rain and consequences arising from chemical war. The book was written by an American named Seagraves who cooked up various stories based on information collected from those who claim to be eyewitnesses in order to accuse Vietnam of using Soviet-made poisonous gas and toxic chemicals in Kampuchea. The aforesaid book, together with various news reports saying that the Vietnamese have sold poisonous fruits and that Vietnamese soldiers have distributed poisonous biscuits and various materials received by American experts in Southeast Asia, has been used as a tool of deception by U.S. propaganda circles.

With regard to this matter, British academics have doubted if it is true since they have found no evidence to prove U.S. claims that the Soviet Union has instigated the use of chemical weapons. The British paper, the TIMES, reported that it is the yellow rain, as claimed by the United States itself, which has resulted in the deaths of the people in Laos, Kampuchea and Afghanistan.

At present, the United States has tried to scare its allies so that it can produce a large number of chemical weapons. The New York TIMES indicated that to succeed with its allies and to convince world public opinion, the United States explained the so-called necessity to obstruct the Soviet production and use of chemical weapons by citing as a pretext the so-called danger of Soviet chemical war. It has explained that it has been compelled to prepare for chemical war in self-defense.

All these deceptions of the U.S. ruling circles have been made in order to cover up their past crimes and to implement their plan to prepare for another chemical war to destroy various nations.

Part Two

[Text]

Strengthen the Ideological Front To Consolidate the Party and To Improve the Quality of Its Political Leadership

Comrades, on the basis of imbuing party cadres and members with the party's line, enhancing their consciousness of socialist revolution and developing their quality, in doing ideological work we must carry out the basic task of inculcating in our entire party, people and army a staunch will, an iron determination and an essential level of knowledge to perform both strategic tasks of building socialism and defending the fatherland.

I. Fully Understand the Line of Socialist Revolution and Enhance the Working Class Stand in the Struggle Between the Two Roads

Realities over the past 5 years have shown that acquiring a thorough understanding of lines, especially the economic line, as well as gaining a firm grasp of economic practices and laws, is no simple matter. In this effort, we cannot merely stop at arming ourselves with theoretical knowledge or a general viewpoint on lines; on the contrary, we must closely combine theory with actual situations and experiences in the process of making lines concrete by translating them into the steps, targets, tasks, politics and norms of our short-term and long-term socioeconomic development plans as well as in the process of organizing the implementation of lines.

To make lines concrete by translating them into plans with correct targets, tasks and norms, we must have a firm grasp of our lines and of reality so as to make scientific decisions and to overcome the tendencies for subjectivism, precipitancy, divorcing oneself from reality and flouting laws, or conservatism, sluggishness, mistrust of the masses, and lacking the will to strive for progress. Only in this way can the lines be profoundly understood, voluntariness in implementing the lines and applying laws be enhanced, and more conditions be created for ideological work to be carried out in depth and to acquire a high militant character.

The recent shortcomings in economic work have clearly shown that after defining the general line and the economic line, the party should have adopted a socioeconomic strategy to serve as the guideline for determining economic structures and building socioeconomic plans satisfactorily. It should also have adopted a correct management system to ensure that the lines are reflected in real life and, on this basis, are implemented ever more profoundly.

A close combination of theory and practice is necessary to avoid being subjective in understanding and making lines concrete. To carry out this task satisfactorily, we must exploit fully and creatively the treasure of Marxist-Leninist theories and the diversified experiences of the CPSU and other fraternal parties, and must refer discriminatingly to the experiences of many countries in the world. At the same time, we must attach great importance to reviewing our actual situation, especially in the economic field, we must review our economic activities and draw lessons therefrom to serve as a basis for making the party's line concrete and for developing and clarifying it even further so as to adhere correctly and creatively to the laws which govern the advance from small-scale production to large-scale socialist production in our country.

We must overcome empiricism, which scorns theory, as well as dogmatism, which advocates applying the experiences of foreign countries mechanically. Leading and managing cadres as well as cadres doing ideological and theoretical work must be promptly and accurately informed of essential matters. They must look more deeply into reality, listen more carefully to the voices of party cadres and members of the masses, and be more sensitive to the problems that crop up in life so as to point out theoretical and political questions which need to be solved.

Theoretical work and scientific research must be aimed directly at socioeconomic targets and must actively contribute to promoting a thorough understanding of the lines, to developing them and making them concrete and to organizing their implementation successfully.

Proper conditions must be created for the contingent of cadres doing theoretical work and scientific research to carry out these tasks in a satisfactory, organized and principled manner, thereby preventing these cadres from being cut off from the process of preparing for party and state decisions on the economic, cultural and social fields.

Along with and for the purpose of strengthening theoretical work, we must attach importance to reviewing the implementation of the party's lines and policies. Each party committee echelon must adopt an annual program to review a number of frontrank models and some important activities necessary for promoting the mass movement. In the coming days, on the basis of fully understanding the resolutions of the fifth national party congress and reviewing the implementation of the resolutions of the fourth national party congress, each echelon, sector and unity must review its own experiences over the past 5 years. This is aimed at achieving an even greater unity of views on the party's lines, finding out the causes of shortcomings so as to rectify them, and advancing our work to even greater successes.

To ensure that the party's line of socialist construction is fully understood, made concrete and successfully implemented, we must widely improve party cadres' and members' knowledge of social sciences, natural sciences and technology, especially their knowlegde of economic laws and economic management. It is necessary to establish a system under which leading and managing cadres are compelled to acquire economic knowledge, thereby stirring up a movement for economic study among the party and the people.

To carry out these tasks satisfactorily, we must build and strengthen the institutes and schools directly subordinate to the party Central Committee, the Institutes of the Academy of Sciences [vieenj hanf laam khoa hocj], and other learning institutes. Utmost importance must be attached to strengthening the organs engaged in theoretical work, reorganizing the systems of party schools and schools of management, especially economic management, and various colleges and vocational middle schools; and improving the contents of the curricula as well as the teaching and learning methods of various schools so as to improve the quality of study and to create the basis for a thorough understanding of the lines along with an improvement in party cadres' and members' knowledge in all fields.

We must raise even further the status of the study of politics, Marxism-Leninism and the party's lines in schools and among teaching cadres, youths and students. The contingent of political lecturers of various schools must be reexamined so as to promote their training. This is an extremely important problem where building of new generations is concerned, and a key factor in enabling the party's ideological and political system to assume a real position of absolute supremacy in the spiritual life of our people and to become the ideological system of the entire people.

In promoting a thorough understanding of the party's line and organizing its implementation, we must enhance incessantly the concept of socialist collective mastery, promote the staunch revolutionary stand of the working class in the struggle between the two roads, and overcome both rightist and leftist tendencies.

The socialist revolution is, by nature, the most far-reaching and thoroughgoing revolution. Realities over the past 5 years have clearly shown that, in the process of implementing the party's lines to advance the revolution, the ideological struggle to settle the question of which of the two roads will prevail in the conditions of an economy still largely characterized by small-scale production is extremely difficult and complex.

This struggle requires that party cadres and members be endowed with a profound consciousness of the party's lines and ideals, be firm in their stand and viewpoints, show intelligence and creativity, and make an effort to improve their knowledge.

Subjectivism, impatience, haste or conservatism, and attitudes of small producers and nonproductive people — such as a reluctance to undergo socialist transformation, a desire to enrich themselves by violating policies and manipulating laws and various state regulations -- and illusions prevent us from realizing the fierceness of the class struggle to eliminate exploitation, which have been manifested here and there at one time or another among some cadres and party members, should be criticized sternly.

Taking these facts into consideration, these manifestations and the subjective and inffective method of working have delayed socialist transformation. While it is very necessary and correct to launch an offensive to smash the mechanism of restrictive bureacratic subsidization management -- despite some major achievements we have scored so far — there have been people who are slightly inclined to fail in firmly grasping the principle of democratic centralization and the other fundamental principles of socialist economic management.

While we are emphasizing the unification of the three interests to overcome the inclination to belittle the working people's interests -- a completely correct emphasis — there have been cases in which the interests of the entire society are neglected or even encroached upon seriously. The shortcomings of some party committees and grassroots-level party organizations lie in the fact that they have not struggled to overcome these shortcomings promptly.

In the struggle to strengthen the material and technical bases of socialism, tendencies toward conservatism, impatience and haste have taken root, incorrectly reflecting the party line. There have been erroneous views which fail to realize clearly the key role of the scientific and technological revolution or simply stress the role of technology and fail to see the active factor of ideology and the strength of the masses exercising their collective mastery. The same situation has been observed in the cultural, social, military, security, ideological and organizational fields.

In the course of advancing the revolution, it is clear that along with some noted positive points, cases of rightist leaning, loss of vigilance and relaxation on the ideological battlefield, which lead the the mollification of dictatorship, have appeared and have caused no small a number of cadres, party members and Youth Union members to succumb to a bourgeois and neocolonialist lifestyle. They have displayed mediocre, degenerate and deviant tastes.

The duty of the ideological task is to actively educate cadres and party members on the lines, viewpoints and policies of the party and state concerning all areas of social activity, and to build a sense of exemplariness in implementing the policies of socialist life models. Through educational, economic, administrative and organizational measures we must positively overcome all negative aspects and determine a steady stand from which cadres, party members and the people can profoundly criticize the petty bourgeois manifestations and resolutely oppose the bourgeois concept and the vestiges of neocolonialist culture and feudalism.

We should fully realize that this is a persevering, uncompromising and relentless struggle. We should make party cadres and members and the people clearly realize that the struggle to resolve the question of who will defeat whom between socialism and capitalism in our country is a long and complicated struggle. We must struggle hard to bring about glorious victory.

There are still many difficulties ahead. Communists must adopt a correct attitude toward difficulties without any illusions, impatience or haste. They must see clearly the limit between the two paths in order to strive to surge forward together with the people to overcome difficulties, to win by all means a victory and to oppose dependence, indifference, irresponsibility and vacillation or faltering when faced with difficulties.

Through implementing the three revolutions, we should build a new economic structure and implement the new system of management to enhance the collective mastery sense of cadres, party members and the people; overcome the deviant inclinations to misunderstand or understand superficially the regime of socialist collective mastery, which only stress political democracy and fail to see the need to reflect collective mastery both in building the economic structure and the systems of management and organization, and in everyday life.

We often understand collective mastery erroneously as a sublime cause and fail to see it as a realistic policy that can and must be implemented immediately. We do not see that collective mastery is a process going from lower to higher echelons which is connected closely with the implementation of all other tasks and practical care for the laboring people's everyday life. We understand collective mastery disparately without perceiving the link between benefits and duties, by stressing either benefits or duties, and without realizing the close coordination among various echelons in exercising mastery which leads to sectarianism and departmentalism, or without realizing the relationship between collective mastery and proletarian dictatorship by underutilizing these two aspects.

We should also overcome the inclination to vaguely understand the class stand by speaking generally of collective mastery without seeing that this is only the laboring people's collective mastery.

II. Develop a Firm Stand Against Chinese Expansionism and Hegemonism, and Against U.S. Imperialism and Other Reactionary Forces; Always Uphold Revolutionary Vigilance; and Stand Ready To Defend the Party and the Socialist Fatherland

Maoism, the essence of which is expansionism and hegemonism, has transformed the Chinese leaders into betrayers of Marxism-Leninism and the Chinese people, and into extremely cruel and perfidious aggressors and saboteurs against our country. They have not hesitated, nor will they ever hesitate to use any cruel maneuvers to achieve their political aims.

The task of ideological work is to expose the vile character, perfidy and roots of reactionary Maoist thoughts, as well as the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists' sabotage activity in all fields against the revolution in our country and their collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces against national independence and socialism in all three Indochinese countries, for the purpose of eventually annexing our country and the entire region.

We must develop in our entire party the spirit of revolutionary vigilance, the sense of combat readiness, and an iron will as well as determination and perseverence in the struggle against acts of sabotage and aggression against our country by Chinese expansionism and hegemonism in collusion with U.S. imperialism.

We must make it clear that this struggle is difficult, complex, protracted and uncompromising. History has entrusted our party and people with this struggle for the independence and freedom of the fatherland, for the happiness of the people, and for the fulfillment of our noble international duty.

At present, along with their military activities in the border areas of the three Indochinese countries, the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists are waging a psychological and espionage war aimed at undermining our people's economy, living conditions, ideolgoy and culture. It is also aimed at injecting the poison of reactionary political thoughts into our party to subvert discontented persons or those who still nurture a vague perception of the class struggle. More dangerous still, by carrying out activities designed to foment political unrest among our people, the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists have attempted to combine espionage and subversive activities with military actions in preparation for the launching of a large-scale war of aggression when conditions permit.

The task of ideological work is to uphold continuously the spirit of national independence and socialism, to bring into play the tradition of patriotism and the spirit of proletarian internationalism, and to continuously make clear the uncompromising nature of the struggle against U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces who are working hand in glove with them. Ideological work also has the task of overcoming all manifestations of laxity in revolutionary vigilance, guarding against all manifestations of the thought of compromising, weariness and relaxation among party cadres and members and the people.

Each party chapter must be a fighting fortress and stay highly alert to all enemy schemes and actions. The working-class character of the army and security forces must be improved so as to ensure that our armed forces and security forces can bring into play their traditional resourcefulness and gallantry and remain absolutely loyal to the fatherland and socialism, to the party's objectives and ideals, to the glorious revolutionary cause of the fatherland and people, and to proletarian internationalism.

The tools of dictatorship of the party and state, especially the national defense and security organs and units, must work in close coordination, sharpen vigilance, stand ready to fight, resolutely implement dictatorship in dealing with the enemy and see to it that hostile and bad elements cannot carry out covert or overt activities easily.

The struggle against the Chinese expansionist and hegemonist aggressors and U.S. imperialism is closely linked with the struggle between the two roads in the country and with the common struggle of fraternal Laos and Kampuchea, which face the same enemies as we do. This struggle is also unseparable from the struggle between socialism and capitalism worldwide.

Chinese expansionism and hegemonism in collusion with U.S. imperialism are doing everything they can to broaden their offensive against the Soviet Union, Vietnam, Laos, Kampuchea and the countries of the socialist community, so as to achieve hegemony, first in Southeast Asia and eventually throughout the world.

The struggle against the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, therefore, is not only the most pressing political task of our party and people, but one of the urgent political tasks of all Marxists and Leninists in the world. We must be fully aware of our party's important responsibility to the class and the nation in this struggle.

III. Hold Fast to the Principle of Maintaining Close Relations With the Masses; Oppose Bureaucratism, Subjectivism and Conservatism; Scrupulously Implement the Principle of Democratic Centralism; and Oppose Liberalism, the Lack of Discipline, the Lack of Democracy and Irresponsibility.

A. We must keep close contact with reality; be sensitive to life; oppose bureaucratism and conservatism; and overcome subjectivism and precipitance.

Keeping contact with reality and the masses, listening to the suggestions of the masses and lower echelons and opposing bureaucratism are matters of basic principle for the ruling party.

The present sluggishness in many important fields, especially the economic field, is deeply rooted in subjectivism, conservatism and bureaucratism, which is a manifestation of one's alientation from the masses in the conditions of the party holding power.

Conservatism usually stems from many factors, including poor understanding of the party's lines, lack of responsiveness to new ideas, failure to stay in touch with reality, alienation from the masses, and failure to listen to the suggestions of party cadres and members and the masses. Conservatism may occasionally spring from subjectivism and complacency, which may cause one to become insensitive, noncreative and reluctant to be receptive to the creativity of the lower echelons. In those cases where these shortcomings are developed unconsciously, they are normally due to lack of knowledge coupled with little effort in study.

In the economic field, conservatism and bureaucratism are clearly reflected in the maintenance of the apparatus of bureaucratic administration and subsidization and of policies and systems no longer suitable for the new demands of production and life. This apparatus, in its turn, has created more bureaucratism and worsened that already existing in the apparatus itself. It has also created a generation of conservatist, anachronistic, dependent and undynamic cadres. Moreover, it has curbed the capabilities of cadres and has even stifled the initiative and revolutionary dynamism of the masses with its restrictive regulations and irrational policies and systems which do not correctly reflect the party's lines and working-class viewpoint.

Conservatism usually goes hand in glove with bureaucratism, and bureaucratism is often the predominant cause of conservatism. The evil of bureaucratism causes serious bottlenecks in the apparatus; it prevents cadres from getting in touch with the problems of reality, maintaining close relations with the basic units and listening to the views of party members and the masses at the grassroots level, thereby causing the organs on the upper echelons to become unresponsive to reality. This is also a fertile ground for the development of the maladies of subjectivism and precipitance, tendencies which should also be criticized and overcome.

We must oppose bureaucratism among party cadres and members, especially at the upper echelons, among those cadres who often remain indifferent to the boiling demands of production, life and struggle. The evil of bureaucratism manifests itself in many fields, but mainly in the formulation of policies and systems and in organizations and apparatuses and in the work style of cadres.

It is necessary to put an end to bureaucratism and commandism and to the failure to recognize fully the harmful effects of using administrative measures solely instead of economic and educational measures, and of managing the economy with bureaucratic and subsidy-based methods. The funding of all activities with state money has caused the failure of their administrators to calculate the economic results of their operations; instead they wait for complaints from higher echelons. This has resulted in a mechanical application of obsolete and restrictive regulations and the failure to apply set policies and measures and new conditions creatively.

With regard to the ideology and conduct of cadres, it is the practice of bureaucratism and the attitude of officialism that have impeded production, inconvenienced the masses and smothered creative ideas of the lower echelons. We must clearly understand that bureaucratism, as President Ho Chi Minh said, is a sort of internal enemy; or, as Vladimir Ilich Lenin said, it is the very cause of our failure. We must devise hundreds and thousands of measures to combat bureaucratism and conservatism. First of all, we must point out and seek ways to overcome the detrimental effects of the bureaucratic and subsidy-based administrative system -- the cause of bureaucratism in the economic field -- together with its influence and impact that have been deeply ingrained in all fields of work and all aspects of social life. Every organ and every sector must find out what those harmful and negative effects are so that measures can be devised to overcome them.

Every party cadre and member must deeply improve his understanding of the party viewpoints on the masses, renounce feudal and conservative viewpoints to increase his confidence in the creative capability of the masses, and clearly recognize the role of the masses, the grassroots units and the great majority of party cadres and members who are strenuously joining the fight in all fields of activities. We must develop a work style that is closely associated with the grassroots level and the masses and enforce the various systems designed to help achieve a close understanding of the lower echelons, grassroots units and reality. Leading cadres of central organs -- from the Political Bureau, the Secretariat and the Council of Ministers to the various departments and ministries -- must maintain a close watch over localities experiencing difficulties and over major problems concerning production and life that have yet to be resolved at the grassroots level; and further tighten their grasp of the situation in different regions, especially in the south and the mountainous regions, so as to be able to give guidance, study polities and systems, quickly resolve problems arising at the grassroots level and promptly clear away the existing major restrictions and bottlenecks.

It is necessary to encourage innovations and research efforts; review and popularize progressive models in all fields of activities; give encouragement to cadres who are devoted to their duty and possess great revolutionary ardor; and encourage and assist sectors, localities, units and cadres in developing new innovations so that they will boldly try new things or correct backward things within the scope of their authority. While developing innovations, it is very likely that mistakes and shortcomings will occur. A positive approach is to help cadres of the lower echelons clearly note the shortcomings and inappropriate points with a view to fostering and developing the growth of all the young shoots of innovations, no matter now small they may be.

All organs at the central level must review the actual situation to supplement and revise policies and systems promptly so as to create conditions for the masses' innovations to flourish and for positive factors to multiply as soon as possible.

B. We must scrupulously adhere to the principle of democratic centralism, strengthen discipline and uphold responsibility.

Democratic centralism is the fundamental principle for party building adopted by Lenin. Violating this principle means to weaken the party's organization; and for a ruling party, this leads to the relaxation of dictatorship or to bureaucratic practices and the violation of the laboring people's right to collective master.

Combatting conservatism, bureaucratism and subjectivism, supporting the innovations proposed by the lower echelons and grassroots units, and reviewing the actual situation to renew the managerial system and revise policies and systems are positive manifestations of the enforcement of the principle of democratic centralism as professed by our party and state.

This principle calls for ensuring strict discipline and broad democracy at the same time -- with democracy being geared to creating strength and discipline for the organization. Realizing this principle under the condition in which the party holds administrative power means to ensure that the lines, policies and resolutions of the party, the rules concerning party activities, state plans and the laws of the state are formulated appropriately and correctly and carried out scrupulously.

On the basis of clearly defining the system of responsibility of the organization and every individual and clearly dividing responsibility for mangement between the central and local levels and between higher and lower echelons, we must firmly uphold centralization and broaden democracy.

In our party there are many good examples in the enforcement of the principle of democratic centralism, in the maintenance of party discipline and in the observance of the laws of the state. However, beside good examples and positive aspects there exist negative aspects of liberalism, lack of discipline and absence of democracy. Manifestations of limited democracy or of democracy for form's sake are still prevalent. We must admit that liberalism and lack of discipline have in the past tended to develop due to the difficulties facing the country and the onslaught of the enemy's psychological warfare. A number of party cadres and members have made unwarranted statements about party lines and policies; they have either failed to implement party resolutions or carried out only those points with which they agree, without seeking advice from the higher echelons.

We encourage the holding of discussions, seminars and scientific meetings to enhance the quality of research; but all these activities must be closely directed. We encourage cadres to make their opinions known to the leadership but this must be done in an organized way and for constructive purposes.

The manifestations of liberalism and lack of discipline by a number of cadres are serious, and they are weakening the organizational integrity of the party. This looseness stems from the lack of a principled character and inadequacy in the sense of observing party discipline and state laws. Maintaining party discipline and abiding by the laws of the state are compulsory to all party members; and this is an issue pertaining to party character without exception. To our party, strengthening discipline is all the more a regular problem that must not be considered lightly.

The economy of small-scale production and the protracted guerrilla war have left in many party cadres and members negative impressions concerning ways of thinking, backward habits and customs, an irresponsible work method, egoism, departmentalism, parochialism and the lack of socialist cooperation. Many of our comrades have shortcomings arising from liberalism and the lack of discipline of a big-industry production system and also because they live among a population characterized by small-scale production but fail to pay attention to forging themselves in accordance with the lines and viewpoints of the party.

We realize clearly that genuine democracy must be extended in order to be able to maintain strict discipline, and that good centralization calls for a correct classification of management. Only through a correct managerial mechanism can we secure good discipline. Nevertheless, all party members must always act within the scope of discipline and organization by submitting timely reports to higher authorities for proper comments and by implementing resolutions and directives correctly and creatively.

The Political Bureau resolution on the organizational task has stressed: The discipline of implementing resolutions, making statements and reports for instructions, and preserving the secrets of the party and state must be maintained through various measures to be adopted by each agency and each unit. The party discipline must always be based on the promotion of internal democracy.

In the machinery of our party and state, arbitrariness, despotism and feudalistic paternalism still prevail. In those agencies and units where cadres in charge are affected by the above ills, the initiative, creativity and ability of cadres, party members and the people is usually restrained. They are usually afraid of criticizing the men in charge or, out of fear of losing face, they overlook the shortcomings of agencies and units, especially those of the men in charge. In these agencies and units, collective mastery is merely a matter of formality and the voices of outspoken people who dare struggle openly are often negated. In those agencies and units, cases of opportunism, flattery, sycophancy, playing it by ear and factionalism have normally occurred, damaging solidarity. Subtle revenge against those cadres who dare struggle openly normally cannot be avoided in those agencies and units.

We must admit erroneous phenomena of undisciplined liberty have at times stemmed from the issuance of inaccurate decisions and the failure to carry out decisions on the basis of democracy. We must remedy this undemocratic situation, primarily in the preparation and issuance of decisions by various leading party organs from the central down to the grass-roots level, while at the same time maintaining firm discipline in the implementation of decisions.

The formulation of work regulations, the perfection of organization and changes in preparing and issuing decisions by the leading and advisory staff agencies of the party and state are of momentous significance in this connection.

It is necessary to build a pattern by establishing a system for collecting the suggestions of subordinates before making an important decision broadly related to economic and life activities. Strong criticism and strict control should be conducted in order to be able to arrive at conclusions promptly and to take preventive measures in cases of prejudice and revenge against cadres, and severe disciplinary action must be taken against those who have committed these kinds of misconduct.

All party committees and control organs must be extremely resolute, fair and just. All party chapter and committee members must firmly preserve the purity of the party, defend truth, struggle against vindictive schemes and unjust manifestations which suppress initiative and find fault with and be prejudiced against cadres.

Within the party, while promoting genuine democracy, we must uphold an iron discipline and scrupulously implement the system of criticism and self-criticism from the party Central Committee, the Political Bureau, the Secretariat and the party committees down to the party chapters.

The education of party members on the principle of democratic centralization must be linked closely to the establishment and implementation of work systems on the basis of changing anew the mechanism of management, especially in the economy.

Within the party there should be indoctrination sessions on party regulations. In these sessions we should concern ourselves with the self-criticism and criticism of upper-level personnel in implementing party regulations concerning the duties and rights of party members, the principle of democratic centralization, the reporting system going from lower up to higher levels and vice versa, and self-criticism and criticism, and so forth.

Strengthening discipline and extending democracy result inevitable from upholding responsibility. We should enhance individual and collective responsibility. It is impossible to prolong the current situation of irresponsibility.

The establishment and improvement of regulations, functions and statutes of organization, determining clearly the responsibility of each echelon, each sector, each organization and each individual constitute essential conditions for the party and state apparatus and every cadre and party member to enhance their responsibility. This task must be done intensively.

In 2 years, 1982 and 1983, we must by all means formulate the organizational statutes of various organs and units from the party Central Committee, the Political Bureau, the Secretariat and the Council of Ministers to the primary establishments, and we must complete the establishment of professional standards for the main positions in each organization.

Along with the organizational measures taken on the ideological front, the promotion of morality to enhance responsibility should be emphasized and not be neglected. Ideological awareness, a sense of collective mastery, revolutionary zeal, a sense of responsibility and a high sense of socialist cooperation always constitute motive forces for vigorously developing the system of responsibility which has already been determined by various organizational measures and has been conditioned by material factors.

To really uphold responsibility, we should assess and evaluate good points by citing, commending and rewarding those organizations and people who have fulfilled their responsibilities well, and should detect shortcomings and determine clearly the responsibility for these shortcomings in order to carry out promptly educational and disciplinary action against those culpable and irresponsible organizations and individuals.

Discipline must be applied equally without exception to all members within the party and the state machinery. Commendations and rewards must be made promptly and justly. The higher the position held by a member and the longer the period he has been trained by the party, the more sternly disciplinary action must be taken if he violates discipline.

If state discipline is infringed upon, administrative measures will be taken while violations of law must be dealt with in accordance with law and not through compromise by members within the party in order to protect one another. The concern of leading agencies and leaders about motivation through moral and material incentives as well as about the maintenance of stern party discipline and state discipline and laws is a matter that should never be neglected.

IV. Cultivate Revolutionism Versus Individualism

The leadership qualities of the party and its prestige are in direct relation to its correct line and the effective implementation of this line. But another element which is also very important in ensuring the satisfactory implementation of the correct line and in firmly preserving the party's prestige is the qualities of party cadres and members as reflected in their work performance and in their communal and private lives.

As party members we must struggle tirelessly for our cause, be ready to make sacrifices for it, lead an untainted life, be typical new socialist men -- the communists -- and set good examples for the masses to follow. Party cadres and members, ranging from members of the party Central Committee to every party member at the grassroots level, must be vanguard and in every way examplary combatants capable of enlisting the masses' support for the implementation of all the policies of the party and the state.

In the past, when the great majority was surging forward to struggle selflessly for the noble cause of the party and the state, a segment of party cadres and members who had shown a decline in qualities injured the party's prestige and weakened the party's efforts to materialize its line. It is noteworthy that among them there are a number of high- and intermediate-ranking cadres and party members who have spent many years fighting the enemy as far back as before the August revolution and during the resistance against the French.

The decline in qualities, the degradation in lifestyle, and bureaucratic behavior usually stem from individualism. These negative phenomena developed at an alarming rate in a number of cadres due to the fact that they had been influenced by a bourgeois lifestyle and by neocolonialism following the total liberation of the country.

Individualism, together with the influence of bourgeois concepts and of neocolonialism, has destroyed the fighting determination of many party cadres and members who are reported to have misinterpreted the party's policies and have abandoned their duties. Worse still, they have engaged in profitable dealings and have indulged in exploitive and corrupt activities, in demanding bribes, in misappropriating public funds, in acting in complicity with dishonest merchants, in debaucheries and so forth.

Over the past few years, the party has taken severe disciplinary actions against these miscreants and removed them from the party. However, it should be noted that there still exists a number of party cadres and members -- including a number of leadership cadres -- who have committed such mistakes as lacking a sense of responsibility and breaching ethical codes and who have not yet been severely punished.

One may argue that in the face of life's difficulties and the many negative aspects in society, we must have been handicapped by the absence of uniform and effective economic, financial and educational measures needed to deal with these difficulties in a timely manner. But party members are not allowed to relax their training, to fail their noble role as Communists and to stay aloof from their fighting position under any circumstances.

The party must pay attention to organizing systematic indoctrination in President Ho Chi Minh's thoughts, virtues and behavior among the entire party. It is necessary to improve revolutionary enthusiasm, to oppose a decline in qualities, and to guard against individualism and selfishness, that is to value money and illicit interests higher than man's dignity and the ideals of Communist Party members and even higher than the political life of revolutionary fighters.

We must, through realistic actions, reject the false allegation that bureaucracy and degradation are unpreventable ills of the ruling party. It is totally correct that we can percent this state of illness by enforcing those uniform measures which we have already laid down. We must pay great attention to improving economic management and to relying on the masses to control our working apparatus. We must increase indoctrination activities and intensify party and state control efforts. We must outlaw all perogatives and special privileges; strictly prohibit those agencies which have materials and funds at their disposal from creating a system [of special privileges] for themselves and their cadres; impose a ban on the creation of petty-cash funds; stop indulging in drinking parties and in depravity; and prevent public funds from being stolen by certain units in order to divide them among their members. Party chapters must closely supervise the enforcement of these prohibitions, must give necessary assistance to those party cadres and members who have difficulties making ends meet and must keep in mind that the dignity of party members does not allow them to breach communist ethical codes. An important thing to be emphasized is that the agencies in charge of managing party cadres and members must quickly help these cadres and members correct their shortcomings at the very outset. Party chapters and party committee echelons must scrupulously execute their duty of eliminating from the party anyone -- irrespective of his position -- who has oppressed the masses and has become corrupt such as by accepting bribes or committing exploitive acts; and must seek every way possible to halt this state of affairs.

V. Close the Ranks and Strengthen the Unity Within the Party

Historical experiences learned by our party and by our fraternal parties all show that the invincible strength of the Marxist-Leninist party rests in the unity and unanimity within the party itself.

The unity and unanimity must be based on the correct political line of the party and its organizational and operating principles and must be strengthened with the pure revolutionary sentiments of like-minded people. The traditional unity of the party has always been the main reason for the many victories scored by our party and people.

Over the past few years, as the revolution was reaching a turning point, besides our strong points and achievements we have displayed many shortcomings. In view of these shortcomings and the many difficulties now confronting the revolution, there exist different views within our party about one problem or another in materializing the party line, in appraising the situation and in ascertaining the root causes of shortcomings. It is quite normal to have such different views. What is important is that we must discuss them carefully so that we can correctly appraise our strongpoints and shortcomings, can thoroughly ascertain the root causes of the situation and can integrate those problems regarding theory and practice which create different views. This is to strengthen our unanimity, to solve problems regarding judgement and to introduce those policies which suit the new situation. We are striving to get these tasks done with a determination not to allow this situation to drag on.

In the coming period, the party Central Committee, Political Bureau and Secretariat will work out a program for discussions aimed at reviewing carefully those problems which need a high identity of views and at creating conditions for the participants to make their views heard straightforwardly. This work is very necessary for strengthening unity and unanimity within the party and for improving the party's leadership qualities. We must do it in an organized way in order to solve various problems and to force the mass movement upward.

To ensure party unity it is required that all the party correctly adheres to set organizational principles. Concerning issues on which resolutions have been adopted by the collective, there can be only one will, one opinion and one course of action. Factionalism is absolutely ruled out within the party. Protecting the party's unity as one does the apples of his eyes in accordance with President Ho Chi Minh's instruction is the absolute obligation of all party members. Schisms and factionalisms must be considered as the gravest offenses committee against the party and the people.

In the new situation, an appropriate attitude is required of party members. They must contribute to overcoming difficulties by carefully studying the various problems and present their opinions to the party and must neither make unwarranted statements nor remain indifferent and irresponsible. The discussions of the draft documents prepared by the party Central Committee for presentation to the national congress at congresses held recently at various levels -- including the grassroots level -- have allowed us to affirm strongly that the great majority of party members consciously care for and protect the party's unity, display an identify of views with the party's correct lines, and know how to use their democratic rights correctly to contribute their opinions to the central level on general problems facing the entire party. This reflects the strength that is derived from our party's unity.

There exist in the party, however, some comrades who, in spite of their good intentions, have shown a lack of objectivisim and shortness of patience in directing criticisms at the higher or lower echelons from their own standpoints out of their poor method of thinking or their unsatisfactory attitude and conduct. They fail to see their own shortcomings; nor do they carefully weigh the views of others. They express their opinions without due consideration, thus bringing about a lack of unity. We must help these comrades develop an appropriate way of viewing and resolving problems.

It is dangerous that a number of opportunist elements are taking advantage of the difficulties plaguing the party to carry out their private designs. They criticize the leadership and spread distorted information to create internal confusion. Some opportunists resort to flattery and obsequiousness in a bend-with-the-wind fashion in order to win favor of certain persons. They praise some persons while speaking ill of others in an attempt to sow division and foment factionalism. Factionalism is the very symbol of opportunism. The opportunists are unprincipled in their ideological viewpoints, often sophisticated in their arguments and pragmatic in their actions. We must tighten party discipline and purge the party of opportunist elements who are causing division.

A number of Maoist elements have betrayed the fatherland and joined the ranks of the enemy as its henchmen to oppose and sabotage the revolution. They are trying to approach dissatisfied elements and persons still having doubts about the question of nationalities to divide us internally and are distorting party lines and policies in an attempt to build counterrevolutionary forces to lend a hand to the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in secretly sabotaging us in all fields. We must combat Maoism and expose these Maoist elements who are opposing the party lines and serving as henchmen of the enemy. Our party has fought and is fighting Maoism, as it did during the anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation. With the recent victory of our struggle against the war of aggression by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, we have laid bare the anti-Marxist-Leninist, anti-socialist and anti-national independence nature of Maoism and its ultimate goal of being the center and ruler of the universe.

We must oppose Maoism in a thorough manner and check its influence on the party and the people. The party Central Committee will direct the responsible organs to study Maoist thoughts systematically and more comprehensively so as to make party cadres and members and the people clearly aware of the anti-Marxist, unscientific and deceptive characters of Maoism and its advocates as well as their reactionary scheme of colluding with U.S. imperialism to oppose the Soviet Union, other countries of the socialist community and the independence of nations; to dispel all allegations aimed at distorting the truth and to check all their acts and schemes of sowing division.

Furthermore, a number of opportunist elements who have been expelled from the party are seeking ways to divide our party internally. They blatantly distort party lines and policies, refute the gains of the revolution, blacken the party's achievements and discredit its international line in a bid to weaken the international solidarity of our party and people with the parties and peoples of fraternal countries. In reality, they themselves are lending a hand to Maoism to weaken the party. We must smash all such allegations made by them.

VI. Ceaselessly Strengthen International Solidarity and Inculcate the Spirit of Proletarian Internationalism in Party Cadres and Members and the People

True to proletarian internationalism, our party always struggles against all tendencies for big-nation chauvinism or nationalist selfishness. It holds that in our time, the legitimate interests of any nation are inseparable from those of the socialist community and the world revolutionary movement -- of which the Soviet Union is the pillar -- and that legitimate patriotism must be closely associated with lofty proletarian internationalism.

Our party has unceasingly consolidated and strengthened the militant solidarity and all-round cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union, considering it as its principle and its strategy as well as its revolutionary sentiment. The Soviet Union has incessantly assisted us in national construction and national defense. This assistance has been extremely great.

Precisely as President Ho Chi Minh affirmed: by following the road charted by great Lenin -- the road of the October Revolution -- the Vietnamese people have scored very great victories.

It is exactly because of this that the Vietnamese people's loyalty to and gratitude for the glorious October Revolution, great Lenin and the Soviet people are extremely profound. Our party and people must strengthen forever their militant solidarity and their relations of all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union. This is also our party's noble proletarian internationalist obligation to the strengthening of the socialist system and the struggle for peace and socialism in the world.

Our party has constantly consolidated and strengthened the special relations among Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, considering this as a law governing the development of the revolution in the three countries and as a matter of vital significance for the destiny of the three nations. This reflects the pure revolutionary sentiment and the age-old solidarity among the three parties and three peoples. Our party, our state and our people must constantly cultivate this solidarity, this militant alliance and these special relations.

Our party has also ceaselessly consolidated and strengthened the militant solidarity and fraternal cooperation between Vietnam and other countries of the socialist community. It is always grateful for the assistance of the parties, the states and the peoples of various fraternal socialist countries and has unceasingly maintained its sincere sentiments for the brothers who share its ideal. This solidarity and this cooperation represent an invincible strength which no reactionary force can undermine. All the opportunists and reactionaries who are seeking to distort our party's line of international solidarity so as to sabotage this solidarity and cooperation are doomed to failure.

The entire party and people must regard the militant solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union, Laos, Kampuchea and other fraternal socialist countries as a principle and a matter of strategic significance of our party's and state's foreign policy. This also is a condition for the survival of the revolution in our country and an unavoidable obligation to the working class and people throughout the world and to the international communist and workers movement which our party always strives to fulfill.

We must educate party cadres and members and the people so that they may have a profound understanding of our party's internationalist viewpoint and line. We must ceaselessly inculcate in them the spirit of proletarian internationalism and overcome all bigoted nationalism or big-power nationalism. All words and deeds of party cadres and members must be aimed at incessantly contributing to strengthening the party's solidarity and unity and to promoting international solidarity.

Comrades, these tasks and aims of the party's efforts to strengthen the ideological front so as to consolidate the party and to improve the quality of its political leadership are also the main objectives of the education in the party's working class character. Obviously, strengthening the party's ideological front is an immeasurably important factor in creating spiritual and material strength. It is also an extremely important factor in enhancing the quality of the party's leadership and its fighting capacity.

We must enhance the party and scientific character of ideological work so as to make it really effective. The entire party must do ideological work; all party members must do ideological work, clearly see their position on the ideological front and take the initiative to fulfill their won responsibilities.

Party organizations, especially party committee echelons, party chapters, propaganda and training departments and other departments at various levels and in various sectors must carry out ideological work.

They must change their methods of doing ideological work and know how to coordinate all organs, departments, sectors and mass organizations and to use all instruments -- information, culture, arts and letters, education and so forth -- to carry out this task. They must closely combine propaganda and education with organizational work and with the review of reality in doing ideological work.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON FIFTH VCP CONGRESS

Kaysone Speech

BK090807 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 31 Mar 82

[Speech by Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee, delivered at the Fifth VCP Congress in Hanoi on 28 March -- read by announcer]

[Text] Respected Comrade Le Duan, respected comrades in the congress Presidium, beloved comrades:

The LPRP delegation deems it a great honor and is extremely glad to attend the fifth congress of the majestic and noble VCP. With fraternal and intimate love and with the pure, comradely friendship which have bonded our two parties and peoples in revolutionary struggles to score glorious victories, we would like to extend the warm salutations and best wishes of the Lao Communists and people to the congress and the heroic Vietnamese Communists and people.

Amid an atmosphere of special joy and elation, we miss Comrade Ho Chi Minh, the outstanding fighter of the international communist and workers movement who rendered great services by bringing the light of Marxism-Leninism to the struggle for national salvation of the three peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, and founded the Indochinese Communist Party -- the predecessor of the present LPRP.

Beloved comrades, after listening to the political report of the VCP Central Committee -- with its profound and clear-cut contents regarding the socialist construction and safeguarding of Vietnam -- we are of the view that since the fourth party congress, under the talented and clear-sighted leadership of the VCP headed by beloved and respected Comrade Le Duan, the Vietnamese people have written another splendid chapter in their glorious national history and won ever greater confidence, love and admiration from brothers and friends in the world.

Just emerging from the fierce and long wars against colonialists and neocolonialists, with wounds that have not yet healed, the Vietnamese people had to wage a new fight against aggression by the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces. With their glorious exploits in defeating the two aggressive wars launched by the Beijing reactionary clique and its Pol Pot-Ieng Sary lackey, the Vietnamese people have not only firmly defended their fatherland, they have helped the fraternal Kampuchean people free themselves from a genocidal disaster, restore their country and build a new life, and contain the plots of expanion, aggression and annexation by the reactionary circles in the Beijing leadership, thus making a very important contribution to the struggle for peace and stability in this region and in the world.

With a struggle filled with great sacrifices, the VCP has resolutely protected the purity of Marxism-Leninism, exposed the true nature of Maoism and unmasked the great traitors of the Chinese people and the world revolutionary movement. At the same time, with a tradition of hard work and endurance and with a sense of creative and industrious labor, the Vietnamese people have scored numerous achievements in building their economy and developing their culture, thus strengthening the potentials of their country in all fields and drawing numerous excellent experiences in advancing directly toward socialism as a former colony with a backward economy.

All of these historic victories scored by the Vietnamese people -- which are of epochal significance -- have testified to the fact that the VCP is a staunch and experienced contingent of the internationalist and workers movement, and that the Vietnamese people are very heroic and absolutely loyal to the party and the fatherland and have sacrificed and stand ready to make more sacrifices for independence, freedom and socialism and for fulfilling their internationalist obligations. The LPRP and the Lao people wholeheartedly hail the victory of the VCP and the fraternal Vietnamese people and consider it as their own.

Beloved comrades, in the past 6 years, directly confronting the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, the Lao people -- under the correct and resolute leadership of the LPRP -- have gradually smashed the enemy's acts and schemes of opposing and sabotaging our country with the aim of swallowing it up. In this way we have restored a normal situation in the country and consolidated the people's administrative power with every passing day. We have scored significant successes in rice production and collecting agricultural taxes, thus basically managing to meet the people's food requirements. Illiteracy has been largely stamped out among the people of all tribes. The cultural standard of the people and cadres has been gradually raised.

In the foreign affairs sector, we have stepped up efforts to strengthen our solidarity and all-round cooperation with Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, and have attentively made contributions to the struggles for revolution and peace in this region and in the world. These all-round great efforts have served to strengthen further and stabilize the posture and strength of the Lao revolution and to raise further the position and influence of the LPDR in the international arena.

Comrades, in the new period of the revolution, the special relationship between Laos and Vietnam -- which is the invaluable bequest left behind by President Ho Chi Minh for the two parties and countries -- has further flourished with a new quality and can be broken by no reactionary forces.

The implementation of the treaty of friendship and cooperation between the LPDR and the SRV has achieved fine results as is shown in the building of the Laos-Vietnam border into a permanent border of friendship and peace, in diversified activities in the political, economic, cultural and technical fields and in the relations of brotherhood between border provinces of the two countries. These results have constantly strengthened the forces of the countries in all fields, firmly ensured the independence and the prosperous development of each country and, at the same time, constituted an important factor for preserving peace and stability in this region.

We are very elated to see that even though encountering numerous difficulties and shouldering heavy burdens of international obligations, the Vietnamese party, government and people have tried in all respects to render great and timely assistance in various fields to the Lao people in defending and building the young LPDR. The beloved children of the Vietnamese people, continuing to enhance the pure spirit of internationalist proletariat, have shared weal and woe and stood shoulder to shoulder with the Lao cadres, combatants and people in the new period of the revolution, thus further increasing the special relationship between Laos and Vietnam.

On this majestic and grand podium, once again on behalf of the Lao party, government and people, I would like to express our profound and sincere gratitude to the fraternal Vietnamese party, government and people for their invaluable assistance and deep affection shown to us. I wholeheartedly hail and profoundly thank all Vietnamese specialists, volunteer forces and economic counselors for using wisdom and labor, as well as sacrificing blood and lives to fulfill the Lao revolution.

Particularly, I want to thank the Vietnamese parents and wives who have endured the agony of waiting for their children and husbands who are fulfilling their internationalist obligations in our fatherland. On this occasion, I would like to express our profound sympathy and sincere thanks to you. The great virtue and immense sacrifices of the Vietnamese people in the Lao revolution will be engraved in the history of Laos and the memory of the Lao people forever.

Fully conscious that the special Laos-Vietnam solidarity, the militant alliance and all-round cooperation constitute a law of existence and development of the two countries, our party has always paid attention to educating party cadres, members and people of all tribes to do their best to safeguard the Laos-Vietnam solidarity and resolutely oppose all wicked divisive schemes of the enemies. Our party has instructed our young generations in cultivating this special relationship so as to make it bear more fruits and last forever.

We are proud that in all crucial and fierce trials in the past as well as at present, we have always stood side by side with Vietnam and have done our best to contribute to the victories of our beloved brothers and comrades. In the future, we will continuously expand our close coordination with the Vietnamese comrades and increase our mutual support in all fields in order to bring into full play the potentials of each country for the successful defense and building of socialism in each country.

Comrades, at present, the reality in the world shows that the three revolutionary currents and peace movements are growing unprecedentedly stronger and larger. In the meantime, the imperialists — led by the U.S. imperialists — are in a weak position and are suffering severe crises. Their conflicts are becoming fiercer with every passing day. Hoping to extricate themselves from such a deadlock, the Reagan administration has stepped up the arms race, created a danger of a nuclear war and threatened the security of the world community, thus aggravating the situation in the world. Faced with this situation, the revolutionary and peace forces must further heighten their vigilance and strengthen the solidarity among their ranks in opposing the adventurous and warmongering policy of the imperialists and reactionary forces.

We highly value the new proposal made by Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and chairman of the Supreme Soviet Presidium of the Soviet Union, in his speech delivered at the 17th congress of the Soviet trade unions. This proposal in the continuation of the implementation of the infamous peace policy adopted at the 26th CPSU Congress. It is the most important factor in the evolution of peace and international detente.

We solemnly condemn all acts of sabotage, provocation, intrusion and threat of aggression by the reactionary clique in the Beijing ruling circles against the SRV, and demand that they cease their hostile policy toward the three Indochinese countries. We are ready to do everything possible to preserve our relations of friendship with the Chinese people and to establish normal relations between the LPDR and the PRC for the interests of the peoples in the two countries.

The Lao people wholeheartedly hail the great victory of the fraternal Kampuchean people in the struggle to defend and build the PRK under the correct leadership of the KPRP led by General Secretary Comrade Heng Samrin. This victory has restored the traditional solidarity between the Lao, Kampuchean and Vietnamese peoples in the struggle against their common enemies for the earnest interests of the peoples in the three countries. All acts of assistance to the Khmer reactionaries, which are aimed at opposing and sabotaging the Kampuchean revolution, serve not only the dark scheme of the Beijing clique, but will bring disaster to their own countries as well.

We deem it necessary to promote a dialogue between the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN countries with the aim of creating an atmosphere of mutual understanding and trust in order to turn Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation in conformity with the aspirations of the peoples in this region.

We completely support the drastic measures taken by the Polish party and state to extricate the country from the serious crisis created by the imperialists and reactionaries, aiming at safeguarding and preserving securely the socialist fruits of the Polish people.

We completely support the just struggles of the peoples in the countries in Central America, (?the Caribbean), the Middle East and other regions in the world against the intervention, threats, aggression and sabotage by the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces. We firmly believe that these struggles will win victories.

Adhering to our consistent foreign policy, we will continuously increase the special relationship with Vietnam and Kampuchea, strengthen our solidarity with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, promote our solidarity with all peace and progressive forces, and do everything within our power to contribute to the common struggle of the peoples in the world for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

On this occasion, on behalf of the Lao party, government and people, I would like to express our profound gratitude to the fraternal socialist countries and all friends throughout the world for their assistance and support to our Lao people.

Beloved comrades, in the past several decades of our revolutionary struggle, we are very proud to have the heroic VCP and the Vietnamese people by our side to encourage and help us. The experiences drawn by you, comrades, in the defense and construction of your socialist country are also excellent lessons for us. We are firmly convinced that the resolution adopted by this congress will further encourage the Vietnamese people to march forward to score even greater achievements in building their beloved country into a rich and strong entity.

I wish the congress a glorious success.
Long live the great friendship, special relationship and all-round cooperation between the two countries -- Laos and Vietnam!
Long live the majestic and honorable VCP!
Long live the invincible Marxism-Leninism!
May the great President Ho Chi Minh remain in the revolutionary struggles and special relationship between our two parties and peoples forever!

Thank you.

[From the Hanoi press review for 1 April]

[Text] Under the boldface headline "Flush With Noble International Feelings," today's NHAN DAN carries the greetings from international delegations attending our party congress.

In his greetings speech, Comrade Laszlo Marothy, head of the Hungarian Socialist Workers Party delegation, said: Displaying a principled valiant spirit and perseverance in revealing its shortcomings, the VCP has once again demonstrated that it is a worthy, outstanding vanguard of the Vietnamese working class, the leading force of Vietnamese society.

We are confident that with their implementation of the strategic line of economic construction specified in the political report, with their intensive labor, and with their incredible industry, the Vietnamese people will overcome any trials they may face. In the current grave economic situation and, I might add, at a time when the world political situation is fraught with so many serious tensions not encountered before for a long time, the implementation of the guidelines set for the 1981-1985 period is an important task of the Vietnamese Communists, who have lived up to their international prestige.

LABOR COOPERATION STRENGTHENED WITH USSR

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, 8 Apr -- "The agreement on labour cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union signed a year ago has effectively contributed to Vietnam's construction", remarked Minister of Labour Dao Thien Thi in an article on the significance and result of labour cooperation between the two countries.

"The Soviet Union", Dao Thien Thi wrote, "has helped Vietnam train scientists, technicians, economic managers with university and higher qualifications and skilled workers specializing in various economic and technical branches. The Soviet Union has sent tens of thousands of experts to Vietnam to help build economic, cultural, scientific and technical establishments, and train and improve the skills of Vietnamese cadres and workers on the job.

The Soviet Union has also provided accommodation and education, at Soviet universities, colleges, institutes and vocational schools, to hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese students, post-graduates, researchers and workers, who, together with those trained in the other fraternal socialist countries and at home, have been serving as nucleus of various branches of Vietnam's national economy.

"The Soviet Union and Vietnam have over the past year broadened their cooperation in a new form: bilateral labour cooperation.

"The Soviet Union has undertaken to help Vietnam train and improve the professional skills of Vietnamese workers at Soviet factories in such branches and jobs as desired by the Vietnamese side, with a view to accelerating Vietnam's socialist industrialization.

"Under the study and work system, Vietnamese workers will in a period of five to six years receive vocational training and improve their professional skills as well as their general knowledge and secure for themselves the industrial working style. In the process, they will also contribute to communist construction in the Soviet Union.

"The Vietnamese workers enjoy the same rights and interests as their Soviet colleagues in the same jobs with regard to wages, social welfare and insurance and other rights. The Soviet offices and factories employing Vietnamese apprentices will ensure their material, cultural and spiritual welfare such as accommodation, clothing and other facilities, and create a necessary sentimental environment for them to work, study and live as comfortably as at home.

"This cooperation will help improve the professional skills of a large number of Vietnamese workers and broaden the range of trades and professions as required by Vietnam's socialist construction.

"In the first year of implementing this cooperation agreement, several thousand young Vietnamese, male and female, were signed on as apprentices in dozens of jobs at Soviet factories. Wherever they learn and work, at engineering factories, coal mines, chemical plants, textile factories, etc, in the provinces of Astrakhan, Volgograd, Donets, Kamerovo, Rostov and Krasnodar... they have received warm and fraternal welcome.

"This year, the Soviet Union and Vietnam will further strengthen their labor cooperation with increases in the numbers of jobs and learners. A number of Soviet factories will experiment on the method of training of technicians and workers for a complete factory."

SUBROTO DISCUSSES NEED FOR MORE FOREIGN AID

[Text] Jakarta, 7 Apr (OANA/ANTARA) -- Prof. Dr. Subroto, minister for mining and energy, said Wednesday [7 April] that, being credit worthy, Indonesia would, if necessary, seek more financial aid from abroad. He made this remark in answer to a question if, in view of the declining foreign exchange earnings that might affect development activities, more foreign aid would be required.

Minister Subroto explained that foreign credits obtained in the framework of IGGI (Inter-Governmental Group in Indonesia) would go on as usual according to plan.

He denied that new loans would make Indonesia more dependent on foreign countries by saying, "This is only of temporary nature; we don't want to be so for ever."

According to him, the government has already made the necessary calculations and the matter is expected to be finalized within 3 months time.

He also hoped that the situation would have improved in the third and fourth quarters of the year "which is indeed within expectation."

Subroto emphasized that at the moment foreign aid to Indonesia had obviously reduced, considering that "our development programs at present for 78 percent are being financed with domestic funds and only 22 percent with aid from abroad."

"The role of domestic funding of development has steadily increased, whereas foreign aid has gradually diminished. Everything is being done to see to it that the national budget would not be revised. We shall see how things are faring. I think it will take just a little time."

Another effort is, according to the minister, the expected increase of revenues from the export of non-oil commodities.

"The government will attempt not to change Indonesia's export and try to find some of its shortcomings. We will see how the market situation develops," Subroto said.

Answering a question about foreign oil companies' going to cut production in view of OPEC's last decision, Minister Subroto said that three or four big oil companies like "Total Indonesie" of France would do so.

It was earlier reported that "CALTEX" (USA) would cut its production with 200,000 barrels a day, while the remaining 100,000 barrels a day would be divided among the other companies.

Under the OPEC agreement Indonesia was prepared to lower its oil production from 1.6 million barrels to 1.3 million barrels a day, a reduction of 300,000 b/d.

[Text of VCP Central Committee Political Report to Fifth VCP Congress -- read by announcer; for an abridged account of this report as read at the opening session of the congress by VCP Central Committee General Secretary Le Duan, see the 29 March Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT.]

[Text] Dear comrade delegates, esteemed guests: The years that elapsed between the fourth and the fifth congresses of our party were the first of a new stage entered upon by the Vietnamese revolution, with the birth of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, independent and unified. They were years of economic restoration, transformation and development, of cultural transformation and development in the light of the lines set forth by the party's fourth congress; they were a period of war to defend the fatherland and of struggle against a new enemy, Chinese expansionism and hegemonism. They were a period in which national independence and the positions of socialism in our country made a steady step towards further consolidation in a closer-than-ever association with the two fraternal countries on the Indochinese Peninsula, and with the Soviet Union and the world socialist community.

There were exciting and complex years in the unceasing advance of the Vietnamese revolution, a period in which our people won very great victories in the defense of the fatherland and initial achievements in the rebuilding of our country in accordance with the sacred testament of the great President Ho Chi Minh.

At present the tasks of our entire party and people before history are extremely heavy. Our fight is still very hard and complex; the enemy is stepping up his hostile policy against our people; the current economic and social situation presents serious difficulties.

The fifth congress of the party is to review the implementation of the lines of the fourth congress, give a correct assessment of the achievements, the shortcomings and the actual socioeconomic situation at present, analyze the causes of the successes and difficulties, set forth the strategic tasks of our revolution in the new situation, adopt decisions and measures to bring into play the strong points of our country, take our economy forward over the difficulties, consolidate national defense, maintain security and ensure an effective defense of the socialist fatherland.

Following is the activity report of the Central Committee to the congress.

Part I -- General Situation and Tasks

After the complete victory of our anti-U.S. resistance war in the spring of 1975, our entire people, filled with legitimate pride and new vitality, were animated by a common will to forge ahead and build the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

A brilliant success of our party and people has been the speedy reunification of the country on the state plane, the establishment of the system of proletarian dictatorship in the whole country and the carrying into effect of policies in all fields to speed up the reunification process, and to bring about a life of national concord and communion from north to south. For the first time, our fatherland has achieved real unity on the firm basis of national independence and socialism. All the subtle and wicked tricks carried out by imperialism for decades to destroy the unity of our nation and to make the Vietnamese degenerate, have met with failure. The U.S. imperialists dreamed of internal rebellions breaking out in our country after their withdrawal. But this did not happen. Political security has been maintained. A first step has been made to promote the working people's right to collective mastery. The overwhelming majority of those who worked for the other side have become equal members of the national community. Vietnam is one; the Vietnamese nation is one. The great strength of the reunified country is being brought into play in the healing of the wounds of war, the rehabilitation of the economy, the building of socialism; and it has been given an outstanding manifestation through two wars to defend the country.

We have given a timely solution to pressing economic problems, speedily started the reconstruction of large rural areas in the south and economic and cultural establishments in the north which have been devastated by the war. Millions of people have been given assistance to return to their former homes, reunite with their families, and take part in national construction. Hundreds of thousands of unemployed people in newly liberated areas have been given jobs. Tens of thousands of victims of the depraved way of life and culture under the old regime have been rehabilitated. Production and the people's life have gradually returned to normal.

After 30 years of war, our people have no more cherished desire than to live in peace, independence and freedom to rebuild the country and their own life. However, the construction work had not been going on for long when our nation had to face new, extremely serious trials due to the hostile policy of the reactionaries in the Chinese ruling circles.

For a long time now, the Chinese leaders have cherished a scheme to annex Vietnam and the Indochinese Peninsula as a whole, so as to pave the way for the realization of their dream of expansion into Southeast Asia. While helping us fight against the U.S. aggressors -- which they could not fail to do when the United States was still their enemy -- the Chinese reactionaries gradually made preparations for this perfidious design. After they entered into collusion with the U.S. imperialists, their expansionist scheme became increasingly apparent. They occupied the Vietnamese Hoang Sa (Paracels) Archipelago. They attempted to perpetuate the partition of our country, and tried by every means to prevent our people from overthrowing the Saigon puppet administration, and completely liberating South Vietnam from U.S. domination. Since our people's victory in 1975, the Chinese reactionaries have even more brazenly carried out their policy of hostility toward Vietnam. They regard an independent, unified and socialist Vietnam as a major obstacle to their expansionist and hegemonic designs in Southeast Asia.

In their strategic calculations, the Chinese reactionaries intend to weaken Vietnam in all respects, and eventually to conquer our country with a two pronged attack, up from the south and down from the north. They frenziedly embarked on this scheme right from the moment our country emerged from the anti-U.S. resistance, still scarred with wounds and confronted with countless postwar difficulties. They incited the stooge Pol Pot clique to widen and intensify the war along the southwestern border of our country in an attempt to invade large areas from Ha Tien to Tay Ninh, to create an opportunity for the reactionaries inside southern Vietnam to rebel and overthrow the revolutionary power. In coordination with these activities, China staged the so-called "Overseas Chinese Incidents," cut off aid, withdrew specialists, tried by every means to cause us political and economic troubles, and increased military pressure along our northern borders and in the eastern sea.

The Chinese leaders' hegemonic dream regarding Vietnam was noticed increasingly clearly by our party during the years of resistance against U.S. aggression. Nevertheless, proceeding from our policy of entertaining good-neighbor relations with China and securing a peaceful juncture for national construction, we took the initiative of proposing negotiations with China to resolve the disputes bequeathed by history. However, the Chinese rulers refused to enter into serious negotiations with us. Regarding the border conflicts started by the Pol Pot clique, we also tried patiently by every means to reach a peaceful settlement. However, with the design to annex our country, China incited the Pol Pot clique to reject all our good-willed proposals and to intensify their war of encroachment on Vietnamese territory, causing great human and material losses to our compatriots in the southwestern border areas. Realizing the schemes of the new enemy and the historic mission of our nation to face and defeat Chinese big-nation expansionism and hegemonism, our army and people, in light of the resolution of the fourth plenum of the party's Central Committee, initiated full preparations to cope with a possible war of aggression started by China from the north, while determinedly dealing with a fitting riposte to the war of aggression waged in the south by the Pol Pot clique under orders from their boss; at the same time, we strongly supported the Kampuchea National United Front for National Salvation and the fraternal Kampuchean people in their endeavour to liberate their country and save the Khmer nation from genocide.

Early in 1979, the Chinese reactionaries openly started a large-scale war involving 600,000 troops across our northern border. With this criminal war, the reactionary clique in the Chinese ruling circles unmasked themselves as a direct and dangerous enemy of our people, and also a very wicked international reactionary force threatening national independence, peace and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia as a whole. They revealed to the whole world their true colors as counterrevolutionaries, proponents of Great Han expansionism and hegemonism, enemies of socialism and national independence, entertaining the mad dream of becoming a center ruling over the whole world.

Holding high the tradition of dauntlessness and the staunch spirit of our nation, bringing into play the great might of the system of socialist collective mastery, our heroic armed forces together with our countrymen in the northern border provinces, and with the dedicated backing of the whole country, put up a gallant fight, defeated all the attacks of the aggressors, and compelled them to retreat in shame.

The victory in the two wars to defend the fatherland is one of enormous historic significance. Our people have inflicted an initial defeat on the wicked schemes of the Chinese authorities, safeguarded independence, freedom and socialism in Vietnam, fulfilled their international duty to the fraternal peoples of Kampuchea and Laos, and actively defended national independence and peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia as a whole. By their fight and victory, they have helped strengthen the three revolutionary currents of the time and the struggle of the world's peoples against imperialism and international reaction, for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress. Through this combat, our party and people have heightened their vigilance over the evil treachery of the reactionaries in the Chinese ruling circles. At the same time, we have come to realize that however truculent, cruel and perfidious the new enemy is, our people have enough spiritual and material forces to fight and know-how to defeat him if he ventures to start another war of aggression against our country.

Parallel to, and associated with, the glorious victory won in the war to defend the country, we have strengthened the militant alliance of the revolutions in the three Indochinese countries, whose mutually linked-up position has become unprecedently solid; we have also strengthened our militant solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union, joined the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, and broadened our cooperation with the other fraternal socialist countries. These achievements of strategic significance are a guarantee of paramount importance for our people in the successful building of socialism and the effective defense of the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

On the economic front, our people have recorded noteworthy achievements. We have striven hard to overcome the heavy aftermaths of the wars of aggression and consecutive natural calamities. On the whole, the war-ravaged establishments in agriculture, industry, communications and transport have now been restored; production has developed in a number of fields. An initial effort has been made to redistribute social labor. Thanks to continuing efforts on the foodgrain and foodstuffs production front, we have staved off famine in the areas heavily affected by natural calamities. Although the working people's living standards are still low, there have been improvements in some respects in many rural areas.

The new relations of production in the north have continued to be consolidated. In the south, the socialist transformation has scored initial results. The compradore bourgeoisie has been eliminated; some capitalist industry and trade has undergone transformation. Small industry, handicrafts and small trade are being rearranged and reorganized. Some of the peasants in the Nam Bo provinces have been organized into production collectives; establishing collective farming among the peasants of the southern Trung Bo provinces is almost complete.

The production capacity of various economic branches has been further increased. With the rehabilitation and reclamation work, and the efforts to get more crops of the same soil, the acreage under cultivation has increased by nearly 2 million hectares. We have supplied agriculture with an additional 18,000 tractors of various types, raising the proportion of mechanized tilling to 25 percent of the total acreage under cultivation. Agricultural production has developed particularly since 1979. The acreage under afforestation has reached 580,000 hectares.

The production capacity in industry has been supplemented by an addition of 100,000 kilowatts of electric power, 2 million tons of coal, 500,000 tons of cement. Many projects under construction will be brought into operation during the 1981-85 period such as cement works, power plants, motor engineering plants, shipbuilding and repair facilities, sugar refineries, paper factories, spinning mills, etc. In communications and transport, we have restored or built nearly 1,700 kilometers of railways, 3,800 kilometers of highways, 30,000 meters of bridges, 4,000 meters of wharves, and acquired additional means of transportation. The fixed asset of the state in 1980 marked an increase of 10.2 thousand million dong over the 1976 figures.

We have recorded economic achievements under extremely difficult conditions; at the same time, we have had many shortcomings and mistakes in this field. Therefore, the results are still low in comparison with the requirements and do not correspond to the efforts made and the money invested. However, in the revolutionary context of the past five years, we affirm the significance of these achievements.

The resolution of the sixth plenum of the Central Committee, Resolution No 26 of the Political Bureau and the new policies adopted by our party and state in the economic field have begun to bring about new vigor and new progress in production. In the whole country, there are good trends of development in agriculture. In state-run industry, there have emerged a number of enterprises with typically high economic efficiency. Small industry and handicrafts have undergone a fairly good development. The economic management of the state, which has begun to take a correct direction, is creating new positive factors, and opening up the prospect of a better exploitation of the existing and latent possibilities to overcome difficulties and bring the economy forward in the coming years.

The cultural front has scored many achievements. Education has continued to develop. In the newly liberated areas, illiteracy has been liquidated on the whole. In our country, nearly 16 million people, or about one-third of the population, attend school. The building of a new culture has unfolded throughout the country; the southern provinces have done a lot of work to eliminate the old regime's legacy of reactionary, backward, depraved culture. The literary and artistic work has achieved some progress. In public health, physical education and sports, we have made efforts to forge ahead. The scientific and technological branches have done a good job in meeting a number of requirements of the economy and national defense. Both in the fight to defend the fatherland and in the work to build a new life, many examples have arisen of groups and individuals typical of the style and ethics of the new, socialist people.

All the great revolutionary achievements which our people have recorded through blood and sweat in half a century of struggle under the party's leadership are articulated in the new constitution. That is the Constitution of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, the constitution of the period of transition to socialism. The new constitution has institutionalized the party's line of socialist revolution and the working people's right to collective mastery, giving our people an important tool, a sharp weapon with which to carry on the building and defense of the new regime.

The past five years will go down in our nation's history as a stage of very glorious victories of the Vietnamese revolution. Overcoming countless difficulties, our people have taken the Vietnamese revolution forward to a new strategic position, more solid than before, and created greater possibilities for the defense of the fatherland and the successful building of socialism.

These victories are due to the steady leadership of our party, a party founded and steeled by President Ho Chi Minh, boundlessly faithful to Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, to the nation's destiny and the people's cause. They bear out the correctness of the lines charted by the party's fourth congress and of the resolutions of its Central Committee. In the extremely serious situation confronting the country in the face of the new enemy's aggressive schemes and acts, our party has set forth resolute and clear-sighted strategic directions, and correct and timely decisions to take our revolution over an important turning point and ensure its continued development in the right direction.

The victories we have won in the past stage have once again highlighted the fine qualities of our nation and of our people's armed forces. Over thousands of years, our nation has never yielded to any brutal force. Since the August (1945) revolution, several succeeding generations have fought aggressors to save the country. Our people have not enjoyed peace for long before being confronted with a new aggressor. In response to the sacred call of the party, our entire people -- old and young, men and women, in the north and in the south, in the plains and in the highlands -- and our entire army have once again closed their ranks, fearless of hardships and sacrifices, put up a resolute fight to defend the sacred territory of the fatherland and extended wholehearted assistance to brothers and neighbors in danger. The staunch will of our people-workers, peasants and intellectual workers, and of the people's armed forces, also shines in the daily struggle to overcome postwar difficulties and trials and those encountered in the first stage of the advance to socialism. Great indeed are the heroic Vietnamese people!

Our congress warmly commends the compatriots from all ethnic groups in the country together with all cadres and fighters of the People's Army, People's Security Forces, militia and Self-Defence Corps who united closely, fought heroically and achieved outstanding exploits in the two wars to defend our country, writing another glorious chapter into the epics for the independence and freedom of the fatherland, and who are night and day defending our borders, territory, airspace, territorial waters and offshore islands, preserving political security, public order and social safety. Our congress lauds the various strata of working people who have made continuous efforts, recorded achievements in economic rehabilitation, transformation and development; cultural transformation and development; and who are tirelessly striving to overcome difficulties and ensure the country's continued advance along the socialist path.

Our victories in the current fight for self-defense and national construction are inseparably linked to the all-round cooperation and active aid of the Soviet Union, the special solidarity of Laos and Kampuchea, the wholehearted support of the other socialist countries, the sympathy and support of the world's revolutionary and peace forces.

From this rostrum, our congress expresses the most sincere and profound gratitude of our whole party and people toward the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the Soviet state, headed by esteemed Comrade L.I. Brezhnev; toward the great Soviet people; the trusted comrade and brother who has been extending to our people all-round, great and most effective assistance.

We express our warm feelings and deep gratitude to the peoples of Laos and Kampuchea, the brothers who have been fighting shoulder to shoulder with us for several decades now against the common enemy, and who, together with us, are carrying aloft the banner of independence, freedom and socialism on this beloved peninsula.

We express our heartfelt gratitude to the other fraternal socialist countries which have extended to our people's just cause a great and valuable assistance. We warmly thank all our friends in the world who have been standing at our people's side and generously supporting us.

Dear comrades, over the past five years, besides successes and achievements, there have been a great many difficulties, and on the economic front, our country is now being confronted with many acute problems. The results of the implementation of the economic plans in the five years 1976-1980 have not reduced the serious imbalances in our national economy. Production rises slowly while the population increases quickly. The national product is not in a position to meet the needs of social consumption; part of social consumption must be taken from loans and aid, and the economy is not able to accumulate reserves. There are shortages of food, clothing materials, and other essential consumer goods. Great tensions exist in the supply of energy and materials, in communications and transport. Many enterprises operate below capacity. There are still great disparities between financial revenues and expenditures, goods and money, exports and imports. Markets and prices are unstable. There are still large numbers of working people who are not being employed. The livelihood of the working people, especially workers, public servants and peasants in areas affected by natural disasters or enemy destructions, is fraught with difficulties. In the economic and cultural life, in the way of life and social safety, there have been prolonged negative manifestations; in some respect, the socialist positions have been encroached upon by capitalist and nonsocialist factors.

The deep-rooted cause of the difficulties in the economy and daily life is the following: Our economy is still primarily one of small production, and suffers extremely heavy aftermaths of prolonged war and of colonialism; of the past five years, nearly three were spent in war for national defense; new destruction was wrought while the old wounds had not healed; great natural disasters occurred in quick succession; the enemy permanently indulges in sabotage activities in many respects. Our economy has simultaneously to meet three very pressing basic requirements -- to satisfy the needs of national defense, to ensure the people's livelihood, and to build step by step the material-technological basis of socialism. Under these circumstances, difficulties and imbalances are unavoidable.

On the other hand, the difficulties have also stemmed from shortcomings and mistakes of the party and state agencies, from national down to grass-roots levels, in economic leadership and management and in the running of our society. In certain fields, the shortcomings and mistakes in leadership and management have been the main causes leading to, or aggravating, the economic and social difficulties in the past years. The resolutions of various Central Committee plenums have pointed out those shortcomings and mistakes.

Our party's fourth congress, proceeding from the major characteristic features of our country, set forth correct general and economic lines, which reflect the laws governing the period of transition from small production to socialism in our country. However, during the five years 1976-1980, there were shortcomings and mistakes in our grasping and understanding the actual situation, concretizing and implementing the party's lines. We also had very great shortcomings and mistakes in organizing and directing the implementation, which included the planning and managerial work.

We failed to fully realize the difficulties and complexities of the advance to socialism from a primarily small-production economy; we failed to fully realize the dimensions of the economic and social upheavals following a prolonged war; we failed to fully appreciate the difficulties and complexities in overcoming our weaknesses in economic and social management; we failed to fully foresee international developments which are unfavorable in some respects. Therefore, we have shown subjectiveness and hastiness in setting a number of targets too great in scale and too high in speed concerning capital construction and production development, especially at the outset. Hastiness is also apparent in our organizing too large cooperative farms in some regions, in our planning and starting the construction of a number of projects while lacking data from surveys and studies and lacking adequate preparations.

On the other hand, we have shown utmost conservatism and slackness. Many party and state bodies from national down to grassroots levels did not strictly and fully carry out the lines of the fourth congress and many resolutions of the Central Committee. They did not correctly assess the advantages and the possibilities, especially the existing potential of the country in labor, land, forest and sea resouces, material-technical facilities, branches and trades turning out consumer goods and export items. They lacked the determination and the will to ponder over how to bring into play these advantages and possibilities. We have maintained, for too long, the mechanism of administrative, bureaucratic management based on the state financing system; we have been slow in changing the policies and regulations that hindered production. There is a very heavy tendency of reliance on others in production activities and economic management.

Subjectiveness, hastiness, conservatism and slackness which are all shortcomings and mistakes in concretizing and carrying out the party's lines, stem in the final analysis from failure to really grasp the laws governing the advance from small production to socialist large-scale production reflected in the party's lines, to fully grasp the realities, and from lack of economic knowledge. The shortcomings and mistakes in concretizing and carrying out the party's lines have been exposed in the working out of economic and investment structures which are not rational; in the failure to do thorough planning at all central, local and grassroots levels, to pay due attention to the planning from the grassroots level, to link planning with cost-accounting and socialist business operations, to attach importance to productivity, quality and efficiency. The shortcomings and mistakes showed themselves also in failure to pay attention to the bringing into play of the combined strength of all factors in the general and the economic line; especially in failure to bring into play the strength of the working people's collective mastery system, and of the mechanism of party's leadership, people's mastery and state's management, to achieve a good combination of the three revolutions, and to initiate a wide and deep revolutionary mass movement.

In organizing the implementation, our shortcomings and mistakes lie in bureaucratism, divorce from the realities, lack of sensitivity to life, conservatism, slackness, lack of responsibility in economic and social management.

The ideological and cultural front has been neglected. The education of party members and the masses about the struggle between the two paths has not been given due attention. In the struggle against psychological warfare, reactionary ideologies, depraved culture, the ideological and cultural work has lacked incisiveness and militancy.

There has been slowness in strengthening socialist legality; law and discipline have been relaxed. The struggle against law-breaking and social evils has not been resolute and thoroughgoing.

The party-building work has been marked by prolonged slackness in some respects, and has failed to keep abreast with the new tasks, especially those related to economic transformation and construction. In particular, the cadre work has suffered from great slowness and conservatism in all the links of training, assignment, employment and remuneration.

The above-mentioned shortcomings and mistakes prove that, on a number of problems, we have failed to hold firmly enough to proletarian dictatorship, whose comprehensive contents have been laid down in the resolution of the party's fourth congress. They are very serious shortcomings and mistakes. The Central Committee undertook a severe self-criticism before the congress, and proposes that after the congress there be a drive of profound self-criticism and criticism in the party, in state bodies at all levels, and that effective measures be taken to correct these shortcomings and mistakes.

Dear comrades, the past five years have been a specially significant period not only from the viewpoint of the dimensions of historic events. Their special value also lies in the very useful experiences accumulated by our party. All the above-mentioned qualities, shortcomings and weaknesses should be pondered upon and analyzed by the whole party, and necessary lessons should be drawn so as to further improve and heighten the party's leadership and the state's management capacity, and ensure the fulfillment of the heavy tasks of the revolution in the period ahead.

In more than half a century of activity, our party has devoted a major part of its time and effort to the task of national liberation. Its historic mission has been in the past six years, and it is from now on to lead our entire people in successfully building socialism, taking our country forward step by step along the path to progress and civilization while constantly defending the fatherland and ensuring durable independence from our nation and an ever happier life for our people.

However, our socialist revolution unfolds in an international background of complex developments. The bellicose forces of imperialism, headed by U.S. imperialism, and the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists are closely working hand in glove to rally forces in order to launch counterattacks on the world revolutionary movement, primarily on the Soviet Union and the socialist community. In Southeast Asia, the Chinese reactionaries and imperialist forces spearhead their attacks at Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea.

At present, the Chinese reactionaries, aided and abetted by the United States, are waging a kind of sabotage war against Vietnam on the military, political, economic and cultural front, using various forces and resorting to very wicked tricks. The enemy positions troops close to our northern borders, provokes partial armed conflicts, wages a war of encroachment aimed at gnawing away our border lands; at the same time, active preparations are made for a large-scale war of aggression. Through psychological and espionage warfare, he tries to undermine us politically, ideologically and organizationally, to sow division among the various ethnic groups, to drive a wedge between the people and the party; he covertly rallies the reactionary forces, organizes opposition activities in an attempt to foment disturbances and subversion. He engages in economic sabotage, tries to undermine production, connives with the imperialists in pursuing an embargo policy, and sows the venom of reactionary, depraved culture. He attempts by every means to tarnish the image of Vietnam in a bid to isolate our country in the international arena. Along with these anti-Vietnam schemes and acts, China also colludes with the United States, gathers together reactionary stooge forces, and entices ASEAN countries to oppose the revolution in Kampuchea and Laos. All these hostile actions are part and parcel of China's strategy against national independence and socialism in Vietnam, in all three Indochinese countries, a strategy designed to weaken and eventually to annex our country and this region as a whole.

Thus our country is now in a situation wherein it enjoys peace while having to face a kind of multisided war of sabotage waged by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists acting hand in glove with the U.S. imperialists, and at the same time, having to stand ready to cope with the possibility of a large-scale war of aggression started by the enemy.

Proceeding from the above-mentioned situation, in the new stage of the revolution, our entire people and army under the party's leadership must closely unite and strive to carry out two strategic tasks: First, to build socialism successfully. Second, to stand combat-ready, to defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland effectively. These two strategic tasks are closely interrelated.

It is only by building socialism with practical results and making our country stronger in all respects and in all circumstances that we can have enough strength to defeat any war of aggression started by the enemy, and effectively defend our fatherland. Conversely, it is only by strengthening national defense, defeating the enemy's multisided war of sabotage, and constantly ensuring a solid defense of the country that we can be in a position to build socialism successfully.

"All for the socialist fatherland, for the happiness of the people!" Such is the motto of our entire party, people and army, the lofty and sacred mission that all Vietnamese generations from now on must assume before the history of the nation.

While carrying out the above-mentioned two strategic tasks, we must always strengthen our militant solidarity and broaden our all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union, Laos and Kampuchea, with the other fraternal socialist countries, and extend constant support to the struggle of the peoples of all countries against imperialism and international reaction, for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress. That is an international obligation of our people, and also a task of strategic significance, which has a bearing on the vital interests of independence, freedom and socialism in our country and on the Indochinese Peninsula, on peace and stability in Southeast Asia and peace in the world.

The task of combat-readiness to defend the fatherland requires permanent vigilance against the war schemes and acts of the reactionaries in the Chinese ruling circles and of the bellicose imperialist forces; it requires the mobilization of the greatest efforts of our entire party, people and army to resolutely defeat the enemy's multisided war of sabotage, and also to ready the country in a constantly prepared state and strong enough to defeat the enemy in any contingency.

To meet this requirement, we must build an all-round, modern national defense by the whole people on the basis of a continuing consolidation and strengthening of the working people's collective mastery system in all fields. We must cater to the people's material and cultural life, maintain political security, public order and social safety, strengthen the people's political and moral unity of mind, and increase the unity of the various ethnic groups and the unity between the army and the people. We must closely combine economy with national defense, and national defense with economy, develop the defense industry step by step along with the strengthening of the economic potential of the country. These are elements constituting the combined strength of the defense of the fatherland.

It is necessary to build the people's armed forces in accordance with the viewpoint of people's war and national defense by the entire people; this is to include the main force and local troops in a balanced and integrated structure between the standing army and the reserve forces, with the required troop strength and an increasingly higher quality; the greatest importance is to be attached to the building of a strong militia and self-defense crops, especially in border areas; the various categories of forces are to form closely connected mobile forces and on-the-spot forces, making it possible to enjoy a solid mastery of the ground and to launch strong offensives. We must unceasingly strive to improve the country's defense posture, to have the entire country and each locality constantly prepared and able to seize the initiative in coping with any contingency. In particular, we must exercise increased guidance, and strive to build the northern border provinces and the Tay Nguyen provinces into well-defended ones with steady political conditions, developed economy and culture, mighty armed forces, and the ability to provide for on-the-spot logistics.

We must continue to achieve a good performance in the drive to build our army into a people's revolutionary army possessing a rock-like will to win, a strict discipline, a serious behavior, increasingly higher standards as a modern regular army, an unceasingly better state of combat-readiness, and constantly fulfilling all tasks assigned by the fatherland. We must take greater care of the material and spiritual life of the troops, consolidate the flesh-and-blood relationship between the army and the people; ensure a good implementation of the policies with regard to the families of fallen soldiers, to war invalids and soliders in active service. We must organize an appropriate and effective participation of the army in productive labor and economic construction. Comprehensive education work is to be undertaken to give the people and the youth a clear understanding of the law on military duty and prepare the younger generation for joining the armed forces and to steel themselves in the army's great school into new, socialist people.

To ensure political security, public order and social safety is a task of paramount importance to defeat the enemy's multisided war of sabotage. We must resolutely suppress the counterrevolutionaries, foil in ti e the schemes of the reactionaries of all kinds to raise their heads, check and punish the enemy's sabotage activities in all fields, enforce law and discipline more vigorously, preserve the order of society and the safety of the people.

For a good performance of this task, we must build the People's Security Forces, which are to be pure, solid in all respects, and really constitute a sharp instrument of the state of proletarian dictatorship, absolutely loyal to the fatherland, the party, and the people; there must be fulltime modern regular forces which are to be politically steadfast, professionally proficient, endowed with fairly good scientific-technical standards, and with the required technical equipment; the People's Security Forces must also possess strong, part-time forces and a widespread mass basis to ensure an outstanding performance of all tasks.

It is necessary to coordinate the activities of all branches, services, mass organizations, forces, categories of armed forces under the leadership of the party committees to fight against the enemy's multisided war of sabotage; to achieve a good coordination between the security services, the Prosecutor's Office, and the judiciary bodies in the enforcement of the law; to achieve a good coordination between the People's Security Forces, the People's Army, militia, Self-Defense Corps, and the forces of the masses in the maintenance of political security, public order and social safety.

In particular, in border areas and minority-populated regions, patient efforts are to be made to mobilize the masses, to enable our countrymen to clearly identify the enemy. Resolute and timely actions are required to foil the enemy's schemes and acts to sow division among the various ethnic groups, instigate violent disturbances, and provoke trouble. We must ensure a good implementation of the policy of unity and equality among the various ethnic groups, step up the socialist transformation and construction with a view to raising the material and cultural living standards of the countrymen from all ethnic groups.

Our congress highly appreciates the great contributions of the People's Army, the People's Security Forces, the militia and Self-Defense Corps which have been fighting for over thirty years now under the glorious banner of the party. The people's armed forces will be forever a trusted instrument of the state of proletarian dictatorship in the defense of the fatherland and the preservation of our revolutionary gains.

While not slackening even for a minute in the task of consolidating national defense and defending the fatherland, our party and people should put on the front rank the task of building socialism. This is not only because socialism is the goal of our whole cause, but also because socialism and the solidity of the socialist system are guarantees for our fatherland's independence and freedom.

Our congress affirms the continued implementation of the line of socialist revolution and the line of building a socialist economy mapped out by the fourth party congress.

The line of socialist revolution is: "To hold firmly to proletarian dictatorship, promote the right to collective mastery of the working people; carry out three revolutions simultaneously -- the revolution in relation to production, the scientific-technological revolution, and the ideological and cultural revolution, of which the scientific-technological revolution is the kingpin; step up socialist industrialization, which is the central task of the period of transition to socialism; establish the system of socialist collective mastery, build socialist large-scale production, develop the new culture, mold the new socialist people; abolish the regime of exploitation of man by man, do away with poverty and backwardness; unceasingly uphold vigilance, constantly consolidate national defense, maintain political security and social order; successfully build the Vietnamese motherland into a peaceful, independent, unified and socialist country; actively contribute to the struggle of the world's peoples for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism."

The line of building a socialist economy is: "To step up socialist industrialization, build the material-technological basis of socialism, and take the economy of our country from small production to socialist large-scale production. To give priority to the rational development of heavy industry on the basis of developing agriculture and light industry, build industry and agriculture in the whole country into an industrial-agricultural economic structure, build the central economy while developing the regional economies, combine the central economy with the regional economies into a unified national economic structure; combine the building of productive forces with the establishment and perfecting of new relations of production; combine economy with national defense; strengthen the relations of cooperation and mutual assistance with the fraternal socialist countries on the basis of socialist internationalism, and at the same time develop our economic relations with other countries on the basis of firmly maintaining our independence and sovereignty, and mutual benefit; turn Vietnam into a socialist country with modern economy, industry and agriculture, advanced culture, science and technology, firm national defense, and a civilized and happy life."

The general line and the economic line constitute a single, integrated whole in which there are some questions requiring special attention, namely: to hold firmly to proletarian dictatorship, promote the right to collective mastery of the working people, and carry out socialist industrialization.

The whole of these lines is an application of the principles of Marxism-Leninism to the specific conditions of our country, and a carrying into effect of Lenin's thesis on the possibility of advancing to socialism bypassing the state of capitalist development.

The general line and the economic line guide all activities of our party, people and army throughout the transition period. All through this revolutionary process, we must have a correct understanding of the general line and the economic line, concretize them, and base ourselves on them to work out a socioeconomic strategy, development plans, policies and major measures both for the whole country and for specific branches and fields of activity, in keeping with the specific historical conditions of the country, with the needs and possibilities of our people in each stage.

The stage ahead, which includes the five-year period 1981-85 and stretches on to 1990, is a period of special importance.

We are building socialism against a background of complex international developments, while our country is confronted with serious difficulties, and an acute struggle is going on between the socialist and the capitalist path. We must realize that the building of socialism is in many respects a new work about which we do have not much experience. We do not in the least make light of our shortcomings and mistakes, but some of these require time to overcome.

On the other hand, we enjoy very fundamental advantages. Over the past five years, our whole party, party branches at all levels and party cadres and members have matured further. The party, realizing its qualities, shortcomings and weaknesses more clearly, grasping the lines more firmly and the realities more concretely, and determined to correct shortcomings and mistakes, is sure to gradually find correct and effective solutions so as to bring about a turn for the better.

Our system is by nature a superior one. Our people are very heroic, intelligent and creative, they thoroughly understand the difficulties of the country, they are undaunted in fighting and industrious in productive labor.

In national defense, we have powerful forces, more solid defense dispositions and more experience than before. In economic management, changes in the right direction have begun to appear; the new vigor and new factors are gradually rolling back the negative manifestations in production.

A great advantage of ours is our having available productive capacities not being used such as labor, land, branches, trades, and existing material-technical facilities, together with new productive capacities which will be added; we also enjoy the all-round cooperation and the assistance of the Soviet Union and the other members of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, and of fraternal Laos and Kampuchea.

The stage ahead is one of continuing socialist construction and socialist transformation, further strengthening the political and moral oneness of mind of the people, reducing and overcoming difficulties, stabilizing and improving the people's living conditions, stopping and eliminating the negative manifestations, achieving important progress in all fields, creating a new balance of the economy, and at the same time, preparing for even steadier and stronger steps forward in the next stage. Our party should lead the whole people in exploiting all existing and latent possibilities, closely combining the political, economic, cultural and social activities at all levels, in all branches, fanning a buoyant revolutionary movement involving tens of millions of people, arousing the creativity and noble qualities of the working people, bringing into play the combined strength of the socialist collective mastery system.

In the political field, we should establish and bring into full play the action of the mechanism of party's leadership, people's mastery and state's management in the whole country and in each branch, each region, each unit. We should strictly observe the new constitution; strengthen legality; preserve political security, public order and social safety; heighten vigilance; strive hard to defeat the enemy's multisided war of sabotage; continue to consolidate national defense; and stand combat-ready for an effective defense of the fatherland.

In the economic field, we should combine economic development, rearrangement and transformation, and in particular, concentrate our forces on the development of agriculture, taking it a step toward socialist large-scale production in a rational industrial-agricultural structure combining agriculture, consumer goods industry and heavy industry right from the outset. In this way, we shall meet the immediate requirements regarding the people's life, and the consolidation of national defense and security, and effectively overcome the difficulties and imbalances, create accumulation from within the economy, and make a good preparation to step up socialist industrialization.

In the ideological and cultural field, we should step up the building of the new culture and the molding of the new people, in close connection with the revolutionary requirements and in keeping with the economic possibilities, thereby giving a better impulse to the building of the new system and the new economy. We must intensify the struggle to do away with old social evils, vestiges of the neo-colonialist culture, and all influences of the reactionary ideology and culture.

The decisive factor for a successful performance of all tasks of socialist construction and national defense lies in raising our party's leading ability and strengthening its fighting capacity. We must strive to build up a really strong and pure party with increasing adeptness in economic and cultural leadership. We must make every Communist Party member worthy of being an outstanding militant of the working class and the nation, standing really at the forefront, setting examples, and enjoying the trust and affection of the masses. Acting upon the teachings of President Ho Chi Minh, our party must always be worthy of being "the leader and very loyal servant of the people," the organizer of all the successes of the Vietnamese revolution in the new stage.

Part II -- Main Socioeconomic Tasks for the Five Years 1981-85 and the 1980's as a Whole

Dear comrades, the experience of the 5 years 1976-1980 spells out the need to concretize the party's lines -- the general line of socialist revolution and the line of building a socialist economy in our country -- to map out a socioeconomic strategy for the first stage of socialist industrialization. To lay a basis for the study of the socioeconomic strategy, we shall, at this congress, define the economic and social objectives together with the major policies to ensure their attainment.

Basing ourselves on the party's lines and proceeding from the actual state of our national economy, we define the overall economic and social objectives of the 1980's as follows:

1. To meet the most pressing and essential requirements, gradually to stabilize, and eventually to improve to some extent the people's material and cultural life, first of all, to bring about a steady solution to the foodgrain and foodstuffs problem, to better meet the requirements in clothing, study, medical care, housing, moving, child care, and other essential consumption needs.

2. To carry on the building of the material-technological basis of socialism, with a view mainly to boosting agriculture, consumer goods production and exports, at the same time, to increase the technical equipment for the other economic branches, and to make preparations for a more vigorous development of heavy industry in the next stage.

3. To complete the socialist transformation in the southern provinces, to continue perfecting the socialist relations of production in the north, to consolidate the socialist relations of production in the whole country.

4. To meet the defense requirements, to consolidate national defense, to maintain security and order. The achievements of the four overall objectives mentioned above requires a fundamental change in the actual state of our economy:

First, to make national production, progress from inability to ability to meet the social consumption demands and ensure accumulation from within the economy.

Second, to make the gross national product progress from being in volume and structure too low and too disproportionate to the requirements of the economy and the country to be able to meet an important part of the needs, including through the import of articles unavailable or in insufficient supply at home with the proceeds of exports.

To bring about a fundamental change in the actual state of the economy, we must manage to create a new productive force and a higher social labor productivity, even in the absence of a relatively developed big industry; to this end, we must correctly work out major economic and social policies.

1. The first and most decisive factor is a correct combination of industry and agriculture.

Our most valuable asset is labor: the biggest potential, which can be brought into play in the first place and which is also an object of labor capable of attracting the largest work force, is the land, including the forests and the sea; a very big capacity lies in branches and trade, including sideline occupations in the countryside, handicrafts, small industries and installations of consumer goods industry, which are in a position to undergo a strong development and to employ much labor. Our biggest motive force is the socialist collective mastery system, which makes it possible to combine labor with land, to ensure a vigorous expansion of branches and trades and to create a new productive force at an early date.

Therefore, what is the most important, what can and must be done first, is to achieve collective mastery for the sake of a rational and effective use of labor and land and a vigorous expansion of branches and trades at every establishment, in every locality and in the whole country; the purpose is to provide jobs for all working people, to exploit all lands, to develop all branches and trades both in width and depth, to achieve a higher social labor productivity, a greater value of gross national product and a wider variety of products. To this end, we must concentrate our forces on a vigorous development of agriculture, take it a step toward socialist large-scale production in a structure closely and correctly combining agriculture, consumer goods industries and heavy industry.

The taking of agriculture a step toward socialist large-scale production in the 1980's has the following main contents:

First, to arrange for agriculture to carry out the production work and the distribution of produce in accordance with the programs and plans of the whole country. Under these plans, agriculture must strive for a good performance of three tasks: to ensure food supplies for the whole society, to supply agricultural produce as raw materials for consumer goods industries and to create an important source of export items. The use of labor and land must be geared toward intensive cultivation, crop specialization and compound business operations with a view to developing crop growing, livestock breeding, food processing and other branches and trades in the countryside. A rational and scientifically grounded arrangement is to be made in the structure of crops, animals, branches and trades to put to rational use both agricultural and forest lands so that the environment can be well protected, every hectare of land can bring about high economic effectiveness and all branches and trades can yield big incomes. A rational division of labor must be carried out in each establishment and each locality to spur intensive farming and crop multiplication; at the same time, we should redistribute the work force on a nationwide scale to expand farming areas with the same zeal as in the fight against the enemy, under close guidance, and in accordance with firm plans, ensure effectiveness on the basis of a summing up of past experiences in land reclamation. We must strive to put to use within three 5-year plans all the 10 million hectares of agricultural land and 15 million hectares of forest lands and to grow an average of two crops a year on arable lands.

Second, to step up the scientific-technological revolution in agriculture, actively build material-technical facilities and take a step in modernizing agriculture, to step up the building of water conservancy projects, both for irrigation and drainage; to transform the soil and fit up the lands, widely apply biological achievements to crop growing and livestock breeding; to broaden chemicalization, make the most of the available sources of organic fertilizers while trying by every means to secure more chemical fertilizers; to achieve a good performance in the fight against pests and epizootics; to carry out mechanization with steps suitable to each locality, to achieve a good combination of mechanized means with manual methods and semimechanized means, to ensure economic effectiveness; to develop the processing industry, ensure good storage and timely transportation. To this end, we must bring into play our country's material and intellectual possibilities, especially the capabilities of heavy industries and, at the same time, import with the proceeds of exports those technical materials unavailable or in insufficient supply at home.

Third, to complete the socialist transformation with correct forms and steps, to achieve a steady development of the state sector in appropriate areas, to trade in crop plants, and animals for breeding and to undertake fitting links in agriculture, to attain importance to the consolidaton of the state farms, whose productivity, quality and effectiveness are to be increased, to make them really worthy of their role as examples in production and management, to complete the cooperativization of agriculture, to strive to perfect the cooperatives and production collectives to raise the quality of the collective sector; to encourage the development of the household economy in the right direction, to establish and broaden the socialist economic relations directly linking the state to cooperatives, production collectives and individual peasants, those between industry and agriculture, town and country, through state plans, economic contracts, state purchase of agricultural produce and sale of industrial articles and various forms of production and business association.

Fourth, to take the district as a most important ground for carrying out the three above-said contents. The economic structure of the district is an economic structure in which grassroots units are cooperatives, agricultural production collectives, small industrial enterprises, and which may include state farms, afforestation yards of the district, and production units of other kinds. To actively build the districts along the line of combining agriculture and industry -- or forest, agriculture and industry, or fishery, agriculture and industry depending on the specific conditions of the various kinds of districts -- that is to say, to take the district as a ground for division of labor and reorganization of production, to put to good use labor, land, forest and sea, to carry out intensive farming, crop specialization, to develop crop growing and livestock breeding, to expand branches and trades; to organize the association of cooperative farms, handicraft units, small industrial installations and other production units jointly built up by cooperative farms, with a number of production establishments, technical stations, stores for supplying materials, purchasing agricultural produce and selling consumer goods, set up by the state in the districts. The economic structure of each district takes shape from its economic conditions, its orientation for production, specialization and compound business operations, from the requirements and possibilities of the cooperative farms and agricultural production collectives; at the same time, the building of the district's economic structure must be linked to the provincial and national programs of economic development. Therefore, the building of the district cannot be separated from the building and consolidation of the cooperative farms and agricultural production collectives; it must aim at meeting the requirements of its population, developing exports and contributing to national construction, along with the building of the economy. It is necessary to develop education, culture, medical care, physical education and sports, achieve a good organization of the material and cultural life and build the new countryside. We must combine economy and national defense of the motherland. The building of districts in keeping with the above-mentioned contents is a business of the state, of economic and cultural establishments and of the entire population of the districts concerned. In all fields, it is necessary to strictly carry out the policy providing for "joint efforts of the state and the people." Active contributions of the people in labor, intelligence and talent, materials and capital are to play an extremely important role. We must take a step to review the building of the district and perfecting of the district level, draw experiences to unfold the construction work in all districts, while concentrating the forces of the state in the first place on the districts in key areas regarding foodgrain, foodstuffs, important industrial crops and those turning out high rates of marketable produce, especially of export items, to attach great importance to the training of cadres for the districts.

To take agriculture to socialist large-scale production does not mean in any way to develop agriculture in isolation but instead as part of a structure that closely and correctly combines agriculture with industry. The development of agriculture must be combined with that of consumer goods industries, both in width and depth, from food-processing and light industries to small industry and handicraft branches in town and country. To boost consumer goods production is an extremely important orientation to meet the material and cultural needs of society, broaden the domestic market, create an important source of exports and expand the market outside the country. To boost consumer goods production is to increase the value of agricultural produce, provide the state with commodities for exchanges with the peasants, stimulate agricultural production, broaden the division of labor, create more jobs, develop the economy, increase social labor productivity, the national product and national income in the present stage. To list and classify all branches and trades, achieve a rational division of labor and cooperation in the whole country, to bring into play the capacity of central and local industries, small industry, handicraft, and use each individual handicraftman with a view to developing production in major cities, provincial capitals and rural areas. Small industry and handicrafts in our country have a great potential. They are an important part of consumer goods industry. They have been and are being transformed and reorganized into a component of the socialist economy. They hold an important position in the national economy during a long period, especially in this first stage. As an immediate step, to pay due attention to increasing technical equipment, improving techniques, producing and supplying raw materials, using economic levers, giving appropriate encouragement to groups and individual working people, in order to achieve a vigorous development of small industry and handicraft, from traditional trades to newly appearing ones.

To develop agriculture and consumer goods industry is to lay the foundation for the development of heavy industries. On the other hand, to develop agriculture and consumer goods industries, we must turn to good account the available industrial capabilities, rationally build the necessary heavy industries to supply electric power, coal, gasoline, fertilizers, pesticides, basic chemicals, ordinary tools, semi-mechanized and mechanized tools, building materials; at the same time we must very actively exploit a number of heavy industry products, so as to increase the sources of materials and export goods and supply additional technical equipment to other economic branches and to heavy industry itself. With regard to the needs of agriculture and consumer goods production which the production of our heavy industry is not in a position to meet adequately, agriculture, consumer goods industry and heavy industry itself must turn out export goods to pay for the necessary imports.

While steering heavy industry principally and primarily to the purpose of boosting agriculture and consumer goods industries, we should actively carry out all necessary preparations with the utmost importance being attached to more intensive geological surveys, so that when favorable conditions are presented, we can start the construction of a number of key heavy industrial projects, especially in engineering and steel. For we shall never forget that the only material-technological basis of socialism is a mechanized large industry capable of transforming agriculture and providing new technical equipment to the whole national economy.

To further the development of agriculture, consumer goods industry and heavy industry, to meet the requirements of production, construction, national defense, security and the people's life, communications and transport must be improved and strengthened in all respects: organization, management, guidance, material facilities, technical equipment, unloading and transportation means; the postal communication network must be consolidated, developed and improved.

Thus, in the five years 1981-85 and in the 1980's as a whole, it is necessary to concentrate forces on a vigorous development of agriculture, to regard it as a primary front, to take it a step further to socialist large-scale production, to strive to boost consumer goods production and to carry on the building of a number of important branches of heavy industry; to combine agriculture, consumer goods industry and heavy industry in a rational industrial-agricultural structure. These are the main contents of socialist industrialization in the immediate stage.

That is precisely "to give priority to the rational development of heavy industry on the basis of developing agriculture and light industry", create a new productive force in this first stage; and, at the same time, prepare preconditions and forces for stepping up in subsequent years socialist industrialization, whose main content will be the building of a modern industrial-agricultural structure with a comparatively developed heavy industry network as the core.

2. To correctly combine the building of the central economy with a vigorous development of local economies in a unified national economic structure. For a good performance in this respect, it is necessary to map out a chart of overall development and distribution of productive forces. What should be stressed at present is the need to overcome impediments at an early date, define a rational structure for local economies, achieve a smooth coordination of central and local economies and a correct observance of the principle of combining branch management with local and territorial management. We must take strong steps toward broader initiative and greater responsibility for the local authorities in the areas of planning, budget, materials, labor, personnel, organization, etc. The relationship between the central and local levels must correctly embody the principle of democratic centralism with the higher and lower levels being united and closely linked together to eliminate bureaucratic centralization and correct manifestations of dispersion and disregard for the organization. All this aims at creating conditions for a vigorous development of local economies and a ceaseless strengthening of the economic-technical branches.

We must step up the transformation and building of Hanoi, the political center of the whole country, and Ho Chi Minh City into big economic, cultural, scientific, technological and external trading centers. The building of these two centers must rely on the efforts of the two cities themselves to forge ahead; at the same time, it must be made an important task in the state plan, in the program of activity of the Council of Ministers. In particular, the building of the capital city is a common responsibility of the whole country. It is necessary to involve in it all branches, all forces. It is necessary to rely on the strong points of the two cities regarding skilled and educated workers, available material-technical facilities, and scientific and technological potential; to strive hard to develop industry, small industry and handicrafts and turn out large amounts of consumer goods and relatively-high-technology products, with a view to meeting the needs of the whole country and expanding exports.

To strive hard to achieve a noteworthy development in various respect of the mountain provinces and districts in the north and in Tay Nguyen and of the mountain districts in the central coastal provinces. To this effect, to make the most of on-the-spot labor in combination with the sending in of work forces from other areas so as to enhance the possibilities of the mountainous region. To combine the development of agriculture with that of forestry and the gradual building of industry; to attach particular importance to expanding communicatons and transport and developing education, medical care and culture in order to raise the material and cultural living standards of the various ethnic groups; to combine economic building with the consolidation of national defense and the maintenance of security. For this purpose, we must thoroughly carry out the handing of forests and forest lands to districts for management and to cooperatives for exploitation according to the state's programs, plans and laws. The mountainous provinces and districts must turn to good account their strong points, achieve their rise from agriculture and forestry, use the lands on the line of combining agriculture and forestry, correctly organize specialized production along with compound business operations, do away with economic self-sufficiency, expand economic relations between the highlands and the lowlands, boost export-import trade, thereby meeting the food, clothing and other daily life needs of the local population, and making ever greater contributions to national construction and defense. The observance of the above-mentioned development orientation will limit and eventually put an end to forest destruction and bring about conditions to really achieve sedentary abode and farming for the local population. In its investment policy, the state must pay due attention to the mountain provinces and districts; at the same time, it is necessary to insure and enforce other appropriate policies to resolve such particular problems of the mountain areas as environmental protection, use of the work force, exploitation of special products, development of communications, cultural development, training, assignment and remuneration of cadres, and so forth.

3. To ensure the correspondence between the productive forces and the relations of production, constantly and closely combine the transformation of the relations of production with the reorganization and development of production.

To continue to push agricultural cooperativization in the Nam Bo provinces, and step by step bring into play the effect of cooperativization in taking agriculture to socialist large-scale production and building the new countryside. To overcome sluggishness, hesitation, inaction in directing the cooperativization movement; on the other hand, avoid hastiness, oversimplification and massive and formal undertaking. To carry on land readjustments so that all working peasants can have land to till; in those places where transformation is yet to be carried out, such readjustments are to be conducted at once with a view to creating preconditions for cooperativization. Along with the setting up of production collectives and cooperative farms, marketing and credit cooperatives are to be developed.

In the building and consolidation of cooperative farms and production collectives, we must sum up and popularize in time the experiences of advanced units of consolidating the ownership system and improving the management and distribution systems. To achieve a good management of the farm lands, lay down a stable size for cooperative farms and production collectives, carry out adequate size readjustments where really necessary, apply widely and perfect the form of assignment of delivery quotas to the tillers, either in group or in individual capacity. To consolidate and assist medium and weak units to enable them to catch up with advanced ones. To reorganize production and consolidate fishing cooperatives in the north, and set up fishing collectives and fishing cooperatives in the south.

With regard to private capitalist industry, we must work out good policies and organizations to use and transform it in the form of joint state-private enterprises or other forms. The capitalist component is to be radically eliminated in trade. With regard to small industry, handicrafts and service branches, we shall resort to collective forms of operation or maintain the individual form, depending on the particular features of each trade. To gradually shift small traders unnecessary in circulation to production and other service activities. Thus during a definite period of time, there are three economic components in the north -- state-run, collective and individual -- and five in the south -- state-run, collective, joint state-private, individual and private capitalist.

The state must unceasingly consolidate and strengthen the state economy and support, encourage and strengthen the collective economy to the greatest extent. With appropriate policies and organizational forms of production, it is to strengthen its close ties with collective and individual economic organizations and take care to associate the different economic components under the direction of the state economy in furtherance of the interests of socialist construction and socialist transformation along the line of the state plans.

In the process of economic transformation and construction, we must correctly resolve the relationship between large, medium and small scales; between mechanized, semi-mechanized and manual techniques, achieve a skillful combination suitable to each branch, trade and locality, ensure a rational size and an appropriate technique for each unit; and attach greater importance to medium and small scales and to semi-mechanized and manual techniques.

4. To combine the economy with national defense and national defense with the economy according to a basic and long-term orientation, and, at the same time, provide in advance for timely and appropriate contingency readjustments to ensure victory over the enemy. We must work out a mobilization plan to get the national economy ready to oppose a war of aggression.

The planning of economic zones, the redistribution of labor and productive forces, the building of economic-technical branches and the development of local economies must aim at bringing about a unified strategic disposition so as to be master in both the fields of economy and national defense on a nationwide and a local basis. Both central and local economies should care for a good solution to the problem of on-the-spot logistics for national defense.

To strengthen the defense industry in an appropriate manner; and at the same time, turn to account its capacity to contribute to economic development.

While unceasingly increasing their fighting capacity and combat readiness, the army must organize production to provide for part of the needs in those units in a position to do so; at the same time it is to mobilize the capacity of the defense industry to participate in appropriate economic activities and use part of its forces to assume the building of a number of projects. While participating in economic construction, the army must learn techniques and the managerial business so as to ensure productivity and effectiveness.

5. To combine economic development at home with the expansion of economic relations with foreign countries. In view of its special importance, the external economic work must be strengthened. To firmly grasp the strategic principle and the main orientation in foreign economic work, namely: to broaden and strengthen all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union, to develop cooperation with the other members of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance in the direction of socialist economic integration, to take an active part in the process of international division of labor, specialization and cooperation in production in appropriate fields; to broaden all-round cooperation and mutual assistance with Laos and Kampuchea in order to develop the economic potential of each country; at the same time, to widen in an appropriate way our economic relations with countries outside the socialist community. To attach the utmost importance to economic effectiveness; to make good use of foreign loans and aid; to strive to bring into play the enormous effect of the assistance extended by the Soviet Union and the other fraternal countries and endeavor to fulfill our obligations, to promote international credibility far and wide; resolutely to overcome any tendency to wait for and rely upon external aid.

In all our economic activities, a task of strategic significance of our entire party and people is to strive to increase exports for purposes of imports. We must promote export to import, with its proceeds, technologies, equipment, machinery, spare parts and materials, for the sake of the scientific-technological revolution and socialist industrialization. Exports must effectively contribute to creating a new balance of the economy, a new economic structure, and as an immediate step, provide gradually for the requirements of production and daily life. We must strive for a rapid increase of export turnover, gradually narrowing down the gap between exports and imports, and eventually balancing them. We must try by every means to use our abundant work force and exploit all possibilities regarding land, forest, sea resources, branches and trades, material-technical facilities with an eye to a quick increase of the sources of export items. We must pay special attention to tropical agricultural produce, forestry, sea and animal husbandry products, some items of consumer goods, some products of heavy industry, and a number of minerals. In addition, we must try to widen tourism and other services to earn foreign currencies. We must pursue a policy of thrift in home consumption in order to increase the export of exportable items. While seeking an all-round development of export goods, we must strive to turn out main export items of high value, in big and stable quantities, with steady markets.

Our policy provides for state monopoly over foreign trade and unified management of this work by the central authority. Pursuant to this principle, every branch, locality, establishment having a responsibility and duty for export is to strive to provide by its own means for its import requirements and actively contribute foreign currencies to the central authority. The various branches, localities, major economic organizations -- such as companies and industrial combines -- are entitled to conduct export-import transactions in accordance with the principles, policies and unified management regulations of the state. In this spirit, the state should enact appropriate policies and regulations to encourage the expansion of export-import activities and ensure their good handling. An important orientation of our state is to organize effective cooperation with foreign countries with a view to quickly increasing our export capacity.

6. To broaden division of labor, redistribute and put to good use the work force in the whole country to increase labor productivity. This is a requirement and also a main content of the socioeconomic plans. To achieve a broadened division of labor on a local basis, along with a redistribution of the work force, on a nationwide basis, combine labor with lands, natural resources and other means of production available, achieve a vigorous expansion of trades and professions, with a view to providing jobs for all working people and quickly creating a bigger volume of products. To take steps to encourage every working man in every establishment to enhance his revolutionary ardor and sense of collective mastery, improve his skills, promote initiatives, rationalize production, improve techniques; and strive to turn out more and better products with an equal or even reduced amount of material means. To rely on the strength of the collective mastery system, on a correct planning, an application of appropriate incentive policies, and effective measures of organization and mobilization, and in particular on a stepped-up socialist emulation movement, to bring about a drastic change with regard to individual and social labor productivity.

In the years 1981-85, we must broaden the division of labor, turn to good account the work force locally available at district level and move a big work force from densely populated areas, towns and cities, to sparsely populated districts to join the local people in developing production, to build new economic zones in agriculture and forestry and build important water conservancy, communications and industrial projects.

To strive to achieve a notable increase in labor productivity in every economic establishment, especially in industry and agriculture. To resolutely streamline the state bodies and move an important part of cadres and employees from higher levels to reinforce the grass roots or to take part in production work.

The existing technical work force must be better managed and used; at the same time, we must strive for a better performance in the training of a contingent of technicians and skilled workers of increasingly higher quality and with an increasingly more integrated and rational structure.

We must decide and put into effect a correct population policy, in which an extremely important work of strategic significance economically and socially, requiring the utmost concern and direct care of all party organizations and administrative bodies at all levels is to continue stepping up the family planning campaign. To change a number of specific policies and regulations which are no longer appropriate, amend and issue relevant policies and exercise very tight and resolute guidance over their implementation in order to bring down the population increase rate to a rational level.

7. To step up scientific and technological work. This is a very important content of the scientific-technological revolution, the kingpin of the three revolutions. Nowadays high scientific and technological standards, particularly a speedy application of scientific achievements, the creation of high technologies in production, constitute one of the factors determining the economic might of a country. With regard to our country, the requirements about productivity, quality and efficiency in economic construction and management, development in depth, thrift, the manufacturing of new products and substitutes, especially in the field of consumer goods, export items, engineering, metallurgy, chemicals, building materials are posing tremendous demands on science -- natural sciences, applied sciences, social sciences -- and technology. To meet these demands, we must master those scientific and technological problems that are necessary for our country. We must work with the will to strive to master at any cost what is needed by the country.

To link the scientific and technological activities to production, daily life and national defense. To achieve a good performance in scientific research. To bring into play in a fitting manner the role of every science; at the same time closely combine social sciences, natural sciences and applied sciences; attach great importance to the organization of the collaboration and coordination among various sciences through interbranch activities for purposes of joint research to resolve important scientific and technological problems. In particular, good work is required in widely and speedily applying scientific achievements and technical progress to production, management and other aspects of socioeconomic life.

To combine the research work of the scientific and technological institutions with the experiences of the broad masses of scientific workers, technicians, managerial cadres and working people in farms, factories with a view to carrying out integrated programs according to state objectives, especially those catering to agriculture, consumer goods production and exports. Scientific and technological progress must become a main content of socioeconomic plans in all branches, at all levels. The mechanism of economic management and planning must be renovated along the lines of requiring and encouraging the application of scientific achievements and technological progress; the scientific research institutes are to be rearranged and perfected; the socioeconomic effectiveness of scientific activities is to be enhanced. To make good use of the assistance and cooperation of the Soviet Union and the other fraternal countries in the field of science and technology and, at the same time, endeavor to establish relations in this field with countries outside the socialist community.

To set in motion an ebullient mass movement to master science and technology, quickly apply scientific achievements and technological progress, observe technical processes, procedures, standards and norms, introduce technical innovations and improvements, and raise professional knowledge and skills. To achieve a good performance in scientific and technological management; take constant care to make good use of the scientific workers, technicians and millions of skilled workers, to promote their ability, and give them continued political and ideological education and professional training. In this spirit, universal general education is not only a matter of raising the cultural living standards, it has become an increasingly pressing requirement of the economy itself.

8. To correctly resolve the relationship between accumulation and consumption and meet both demands: To ensure the present requirements of daily life and national defense and security and to build the material-technological basis of socialism in order to improve the living conditions and meet the requirements of national defense and security at a higher level in the future. For satisfactory resolution of both consumption and accumulation, two equally pressing requirements now, the fundamental way is to boost production, unceasingly increase labor productivity and at the same time to practice strict thrift.

To practice thrift is a major and long-term national policy which should be made the subject of specific policies, regulations, target figures and measures. To practice thrift in all fields: Capital construction, production, daily life, national defense and security spending, and administrative expenses. To practice thrift in all respects: capital, materials, energy, raw materials, equipment, machinery, consumer goods, time and work force. To practice thrift in social and individual consumption and in the spending of the state, collectives and people. Although the living standards of our working people are still low, we should clearly realize that we are consuming beyond what we can produce. This is unacceptable. We must live in accordance with the results of our own labor, and refrain from consuming beyond the limits permitted by production. We must ensure the requirements of daily life, but we must know how to endure difficulties to safeguard national independence and freedom, and set aside an appropriate rate of accumulation for purposes of achieving enlarged reproduction and building the material-technological basis of socialism.

Each establishment, each locality, each branch must strive to secure accumulation to mobilize and put to good use all sources of capital, all accumulation possibilities of the central, local and grassroots levels, of the state and the people, concentrate capitals for key branches, key areas, key projects as laid down in the socioeconomic strategy and the state plans.

9. To establish a new, socialist order on the distribution and circulation front so as to help stabilize the living conditions, boost production, bring about a turn for the better in the economic and social situation. To bring into play the action of distribution and circulation as a lever and a bridge regarding agriculture and industry, town and country, state enterprises, collectives and individuals, central, local, and grassroots levels. To highlight the active role of distribution and circulation in stimulating production and serving consumption. Distribution and circulation must take an effective part in the struggle between the two paths, expanding the positions of socialism, rolling back those of spontaneous capitalism, regulating the incomes of the various strata of people in a fair and rational way. It is necessary to closely combine economic administrative and educational measures with economic measures being at the root.

A problem of prime importance is to increase the commodities funds, to concentrate goods, primarily the important ones, into the hands of the state. To this end, the state must unceasingly strengthen the state-run economy and the state establishments must vigorously develop production and strictly abide by the discipline of handing over their products to the state. The state must have a policy to boost production and extend its hold on the goods from the collective and individual economic sectors through taxation in kind, purchases pursuant to mandatory obligations and two-way contracts. All branches, all levels must fight with all their forces against theft and waste of state commodities and materials.

To enact at an early date an active financial and monetary policy suited to the current stage. The state must use finances and money and effective instruments for economic transformation and development, bring into play the role of the financial and banking services in supervising and controlling economic activities, and unceasingly raising the effectiveness of investment and production capitals. The state must broaden and mobilize the sources of financial revenues from the state-run, collectives and other economic components, strictly handle the financial revenues, and expenditures, it must have a hold on the currency, do a good job in monetary circulation, improve credit work and accounting through the bank, balance the budget, gradually narrow down and eventually put an end to overexpenditures in cash.

To carry on the readjustment of the price system in a timely and steady manner so as to bring into play the effect of prices on boosting production, rearranging the economy, and stabilizing the people's life. Through readjustments rationally succeeding one another, and pursuant to carefully studied plans, and through the implementation of an integrated set of relevant policies and measures, we shall step by step bring about a new system of prices, carry out a price reform suited to the home and international situation at present and in the forthcoming period. While there is still imbalance between supply and demand, we must apply a mechanism of both stable and flexible prices. To achieve a distribution of responsibility in the management of the system of prices in the whole country, highlight to the utmost the need for a discipline in prices.

To continue improving the wage system. To diligently study various alternatives and actively create conditions for a wage reform in close connection with the price reform and the improvement of other links on the distribution and circulation front on the basis of good developments in production. As an immediate step, to strive to guarantee the real wages, apply the principle of distribution according to labor, closely link wages with labor productivity, correctly broaden the system of job work, piece work and bonuses along with the supply on rations stipulated by the state for essential items.

To vigorously improve the system of state trading services and marketing cooperatives, and eventually achieve a solid command over the market, holding in hand the major part of wholesale trade, occupying a dominant position in retail trade, develop catering and other services. To improve material supplies, ensure integrated and timely supplies for production, giving priority to important tasks, and ensure a thrifty, highly effective use of materials. To strengthen the transformation and management work with regard to the market; check and punish speculations, price increases, trafficking, tax evasion and all market-perturbing activities.

10. To establish correct managerial and planning system, renovate the present one. To abolish the mechanism of administrative bureaucratic management based on the state financing system, overcoming slackness, conservatism, irresponsibility, indiscipline; bring into play collective mastery as a motive force, promote creative dynamism, the sense of responsibility and discipline. In the whole process of building and running the economy, expanding material technical facilities, and developing production, we must pay constant attention to in-depth development, seek to make good use of existing productive capacity and material facilities with all suitable measures: Fitting into an integrated whole, transformation, expansion and improvement. In every branch, locality, unit and in all cases, all policies, plans, and measures, we must attach importance to productivity, quality and effectiveness.

Progressing from small production to socialism, we must ensure without fail that all management levels -- central, local, grassroots -- are really masters of the plans, i.e., each level must actually work out, balance, defend and carry its plans into effect; planning must be carried out from the grassroots. The plans must embody the principle of cost-accounting and socialist business operations. This conforms to the system of collective mastery, and represents one of its important contents, i.e., to bring into play the strength of the community acting as master in combination with that of the individual acting as master in the framework of the community's mastery and in keeping therewith, and to correctly achieve the unity of the three interests, ensuring those of the whole society and the collectivity and paying due attention to the personal interests of the working man. To do so is to hold firmly to use value while attaching great importance to value and the law of value.

At the central level, the state plan must direct the development of the whole national economy in accordance with the party's lines and its socioeconomic strategy, and lay down the overall development tasks of the various branches and local ties. On the basis of a synthesis of the main contents of the plans of all branches and localities, the state plan must ensure that the central authority firmly holds in hand the strategic economic fields, the major balances, the main target figures, the important projects and products of the national economy. Branch plans must be worked out. The plan of a branch must embody a correct strategy for its development on a nationwide scale, in keeping with the general socioeconomic strategy, provide for an increasing rise of its scientific and technological standards, ensure through good cost-accounting and socialist business operations, an enlarged reproduction process, contributions to the development of the national economy and the satisfaction of the needs of the whole society. On the basis of the general program of the whole country and the orientations and tasks of the state plan, local plans (including provincial and district ones) must aim at turning to account the possibilities and strong points on the locality, broadening exchanges with national services and other localities, providing through its own export-import trade for its requirements in production and daily life, and making ever greater contributions to the revolutionary cause in the whole country. The plans of grassroots units -- enterprises or connected enterprises in industry, cooperative and state farms in agriculture -- must express creativeness and initiative in production or business operations on the principle of financial autonomy. Every unit must manage to cover production costs and make profits so as to make ever bigger contributions to the whole country, ensure enlarged reproduction, provide better collective welfare and increased material incentives for its working people. Each planning level must bring into play its initiative, flexibility, keenness and good knowledge of trading as Lenin put it, do away with reliance on other, passivity, attempts to seek autarchy within narrow confines. We must broaden the home market and expand foreign trade, thereby turning to account the possibilities and strong points of each level, ensure a quick turnover of capital, broaden the division of labor, specialization and cooperation, and boost production.

We must make the planning work more and more scientifically grounded, pay full attention to fundamental surveys, economic and social forecasting, scientific-technological forecasting, long-term programming, economic zoning, the working out of a chart of overall development and distribution of productive forces; establishment of a system of a economic-technical norms, establishment and selection of good economic-technical projects, working out of inter-branch balance charts and linking of economic-financial planning with scientific-technical progress planning. We must strengthen the mandatory character of the plan on the basis of scientifically-grounded and realistically-balanced planning.

To diligently study, issue in time and correctly implement economic leverage policies so as to strongly stimulate and tightly control production and business activities. We must enhance the role of economic contracts in the working out and implementation of plans and promote a sense of responsibility in the fulfillment of contracts.

To put to good use the goods-money relationship and market relations, direct our main effort at using the organized market while striving to handle the free market in a really good manner.

To carry on the reorganization of social production. To build, consolidate and strengthen the grassroots units in all respects, and make the management of production and business operations a routine procedure. We must set forth at an early date organizational forms suitable to each type of grassroots unit in agriculture, forestry, fishery, industry, communications, trading, material supplies and so forth. Higher levels are dutybound to assist the grassroots level and each unit must strive to ensure the material supplies required for a stable and continuous production process. We must promote at an early date a rational and flexible economic relationship on providing material supplies to grassroots units and finding outlets for their products. In each unit, care must be taken to foster the working people's health, raise their skills and afford them favorable conditions to engage in production with peace of mind and enthusiasm. While consolidating and strengthening the grassroots level, we must actively build economic-technical branches. We must make adequate preparations and organize in a rational and steady manner specialized companies and corporations -- national or regional -- and other forms of association in production, construction, transport and circulation. The building of economic-technical branches must be combined with a stepped-up development of local economies.

Through organizational adjustments, we must suit the state apparatus to the requirements of the new managerial mechanism and make it no longer cumbersome with overlapping components. We shall diligently achieve a good division of responsibility between the central and local levels, highlight the functions of the Council of Ministers in the unified management of the national economy and enhance the important role both of the general ministries and of the branch-managing ministries. We shall strive to perfect the district level, strengthen in a suitable manner the provincial and municipal level and clearly lay down the position of the wards and Phuong Kin towns and cities.

To attach importance to raising the work-running capacity and efficiency of the various managerial levels, ensuring a good coordination of forces, concentrating on the main tasks, carrying out tight controls, giving up rewards and meting out fitting punishments and summing up and popularizing experiences in time. The determining factor for a successful renovation of the economic management system is a drastic change in cadre work. In particular, we must assign the right cadres to key positions in the major production and business establishments, in various localities, especially pivotal areas, in various branches, particularly general branches and key economic-technical ones that are still weak.

To carry out in an integrated way the great policies mentioned above is to create a combined strength to bring about a fundamental turn to the actual situation of the national economy. However, the combined strength is the result not only of the implementation of these policies and measures, but also of the implementation of the party's general line and economic line as a whole. The collective mastery system, new culture and new people are the goals of the socialist revolution and also strong motive forces for the building of socialist large-scale production. The people's sense and capacity of collective mastery, their educational and knowledge standards, their patriotic thoughts and sentiments and their love on labor must become material forces stimulating the development of production. The mechanism of the party's leadership, people's mastery, and state's management must be given a concrete expression in all branches and at all levels through a correct relationship and appropriate methods of activity in order to set into motion an ebullient revolutionary movement of the broad masses for a successful attainment of the economic and social targets for the 1980's.

In the five years 1981-85, we should concentrate our forces on the following main tasks:

1. To resolve the most pressing problems to stabilize and improve to some extent the people's living conditions. To ensure food supplies for society. To supply the workers, cadres, civil servants and armymen with adequate rations of food, grain and foodstuffs. To meet the clothing needs of the whole people at a necessary minimum. To ensure an adequate supply of writing paper and printing paper for schoolbooks and new papers. To ensure adequate supplies of essential medicines. To achieve a better supply of household utensils and daily necessities. To increase the means of transport. To relieve the housing shortage and improve to some extent the dwelling conditions of urban people, especially through increased water supplies, a rational supply of electric power and better sanitary conditions. To achieve a better organization of the cultural and spiritual life of the people.

2. To develop and rearrange production. To strive to turn to account all existing and latent possibilities in order to bring about a new balance for the economy. To concentrate forces to a high extent for the agricultural front. To stimulate the development of forestry and fishery; to make every effort to develop consumer goods production, to take food industry and light industry a step forward. To ensure a better supply of electric power, coal, engineering products, metals, chemicals and raw materials to various economic establishments in accordance with a centralized integrated plan and a rational priority order on the basis of a careful calculation of general economic effectiveness. To step up prospecting for, and exploitation of, oil and gas. To develop local economies, to make active efforts in district building. To achieve a redeposition of the work force suited to the new arrangement of production and capital construction; to consolidate the newly-built economic zones and bring into play their effectiveness at an early date; to carry on the division and redistribution of social labor.

To improve the management and increase the material facilities and technical equipment with a view to enhancing the capacity on communications and transport. To ensure the reception of import goods, transportation of export goods, north-south transport, transport to and from areas which are very important with regard to economy and defense, and transport for key construction projects and for fraternal Laos and Kampuchea.

3. To rearrange capital construction in a way suited to the possibilities with an eye to creating more conditions for a good use of the existing material technical facilities in the pursuit of the most pressing economic and social objectives. To fit into integrated structures, transform, expand and improve the existing facilities; to resolutely drop or postpone those projects that cannot be built or are not so urgently needed; to carry on the building of unfinished projects that can be built and are badly needed to undertake the building on a selective basis and in keeping with our possibilities a number of new projects badly needed to meet the requirements of the 1981-85 5-year plan and those of subsequent years. To increase the effectiveness of investments in capital construction.

4. To improve the circulation and distribution work, to make a step in establishing a new order on this front. To adjust by steady steps the price system, to make resolute efforts to control and eventually to stabilize the prices. To guarantee the real wages of the workers, cadres and civil servants, to continue to better the wage system and prepare conditions to reform it and to cater for collective welfare. To ensure satisfactory incomes to stimulate the peasants' ardor in production. To improve and strengthen state and collective trade, to establish a strict control over the market in the whole country and resolutely to get rid of speculation and trafficking. To ensure the state's control over an overwhelming part of marketable foodgrain, the whole output of the state-run economy and a great part of other goods in society so as to ensure a distribution mainly according to the plans. To strive to balance the budget and achieve an important improvement in currency circulation.

5. To step up with determination socialist transformation and to complete in the main agricultural cooperativization in the Nam Bo provinces with production collectives as the most common form. To strive to complete in the main the transformation of trade, transport, industry, small industry and handicrafts in the south with appropriate ways and forms. To consolidate the socialist relations of production throughout the country with regard to ownership, management and distribution.

6. To achieve good economic cooperation with the Soviet Union, Laos, Kampuchea and the other members of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance. To strive to achieve a major change with regard to exports and to reduce to an important extent the gap between exports and imports.

7. To practice strict thrift, to attach particular importance to thrift in capital construction and production. We must save each workhour, each gram of raw material or fuel, make a rational use of the equipment and machinery on the basis of advanced economic-technical norms. To use lands in a rational and extremely thrifty manner. To strive every year to save between 5 and 10 percent of energy, material and food. To put to maximum use wasted materials, faulty products, and to initiate a broad movement to collect discarded items for further use. To enhance the sense of responsibility in the storage of goods, to avoid loss and detrition. To enforce a strict ban on unauthorized spending by various offices and units. To conduct an active campaign for thrifty consumption among the people. To carry out a resolute struggle against waste and losses; to mete out severe punishments for theft of state commodities and materials.

8. To achieve a good performance in quickly and widely applying scientific achievements and technological progress to production and daily life. Effectively to unfold key scientific and technological programs, actively to finalize main economic-technical projects contributing to the implementation of the 1981-85 5-Year Plan. To strengthen technical management in production and business operations, to spur the working people's movement for innovations to improve techniques and rationalize production. To coordinate the activities of the branches of social sciences and those of applied sciences with a view to effectively contributing to the renovation of the management and planning system.

9. To make a step in renovating the economic management system. To achieve a change in planning in the direction of planning by all managerial levels -- central, local and grass roots, planning from the grassroots, linking planning with cost-accounting and socialist business operations. To attach great importance to improving and strengthening the conduct of the work to carry out the plans, resolutely to concentrate forces and means on key tasks and links according to an integrated plan. To achieve a close combination of economic, administrative and educational measures and to attach importance to economic measures. To continue the timely enactment of urgently needed leverage policies with a view to encouraging production, increasing productivity, and ensuring the unity of the three interests. To readjust the organizational and managerial apparatus, to improve working regulations, to strengthen the economic information work. To spur the socialist emulation movement, making it ebullient and enduring.

10. To step up cultural and public health activities in keeping with the economic needs and possibilities. To carry out the education reform in an active and steady way; to attach the utmost importance to improving the quality of education. To lay down a rational training scale, and carry on the training of scientific workers, technicians, managerial cadres and skilled workers. To strive to develop and improve cultural, information, physical exercise and sport activities. To strengthen the protection of the people's health, to achieve good performance in hygiene, prophylactic, medical treatment and environment work. To wage a resolute struggle to eliminate all influences of reactionary, backward and depraved culture. To fight bad customs and superstitions.

11. To strengthen social management, to wage a resolute struggle against law-breaking, social evils and other negative manifestations, to highlight discipline in state and economic management, to maintain public order and social safety. Resolutely to check and punish economic sabotage activities, to conduct an effective struggle against the enemy's psychological and espionage warfare. To promote cultural life according to healthy, happy socialist patterns.

12. To meet the economic requirements of the consolidation of national defense and security; at the same time, to mobilize the capacity of the defense industry, and make a rational use of the military forces in suitable economic activities.

Thus, in the implementation of the socioeconomic strategy of the stage ahead, the years 1981-85 are ones of further development of the national economy, rearrangement of its structure, and stepped-up socialist transformation. These three aspects are to be closely combined to stabilize in the main the economic and social situation to meet the most pressing and essential requirements of the people's life, reduce the most serious imbalances in the economy, make an important step towards overcoming the abnormal state of affairs which prevails now in distribution and circulation, increase the prerequisites and conditions for a more vigorous and steady advance in subsequent years.

Part III -- Cultural and Social Tasks

Comrades, over the past years, parallel to the gradual formation of the new system and new economy, the building of the new culture and the molding of the new people have recorded definite achievements. With the new system, our people have thrown away the shackles which had tied man for millennia; the working people from the status of hired labor have stepped into the position of genuine masters of the country and society and regained national values and human dignity. That is the greatest revolutionary gain. However, because our society has just entered the transition period, there has been a small number of negative, unhealthy manifestations besides the new, socialist people who are taking shape, and the new, progressive features that are emerging in man. The struggle between the two paths, between the new and the old, the advanced and the backward, the progressive and the reactionary in the fields of culture, ideology and way of life is going on daily, in a very complex manner and cannot be slighted.

As an immediate step, we must wage a resolute and effective struggle against the negative phenomena in cultural and social life. We must take an integrated set of measures in various fields: economic, administrative, organizational, ideological, cultural. At the same time, we must realize that the struggle to mold the new people and build the new culture is a protracted, complex and difficult one. It cannot be separated from the resolute, continuous and deep-going struggle to wipe out the leftovers of the backward, reactionary ideologies and cultures which are the products of the old society -- the feudal society that had existed for millennia, and especially of the colonialist and neocolonialist system which existed in the south over the past few decades -- nor can it be separated from the strong, persistent and thoroughgoing struggle to oppose psychological warfare, to eliminate and check on a permanent basis the influences of the reactionary, depraved cultures covertly infiltrated from the outside by the imperialists, the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, and their agents. Over the past few years, we have not fully realized, and have relaxed to some extent these aspects of the struggle. The heavy responsibility of the ideological and cultural revolution is to carry on the remolding of man, commend good people and good deeds, criticize the evil, the unhealthy, and bring about conditions to step up the whole cause of building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland.

We realize that the new social system and the new economy exert a decisive influence on the shaping of the new culture and new people. Conversely, the successes in the building of the new culture and molding of new people constitute a great motive force speeding up the building of the new system and new economy.

The building of the new culture and molding people must and can be carried out step by step, part by part, right from today. In the stage ahead, there are objective and subjective conditions allowing us to make initial steps in the establishment of a society which is fine with regard to the way of life, and relations among men; a society in which the working people feel happy even though the material living standards are not high. The reason is that as was very rightly pointed out by the party's fourth congress, the cultural level of a society does not depend mechanically on the level of economic development.

Collective mastery is the greatest happiness, the finest and loftiest feature of man. Happiness consists in gradually achieving mastery over society, nature and oneself; everybody will work and fight together for the development of the social community so as to have enough food and clothing, and at the same time, a merry and healthy life in equality and concord, in free labor, love and reason; everybody is allowed to develop to the full his or her personality, talent and aptitude, in a harmonious relationship among individual, family and society, and carry into effect the lofty ethics: "Each for all, and all for each."

As the fourth congress of the party clearly pointed out, the new culture is one which has a socialist content and a national character, a deep party and popular character, and is pervaded by patriotism and proletarian internationalism. It crystallizes and raises to a new height what is the finest in the 4,000-year-old tradition of the Vietnamese soul and Vietnamese culture while absorbing on a selective basis the gains of human civilization and the achievements of modern culture and science. It harmoniously combines what is the finest in the cultures and specific features of the fraternal nationalities in the great family of the Vietnamese nation.

The Vietnamese are filled with ardent patriotism and animated with a spirit of democracy and equality in the relations among men. "To love one's country and one's family, to love others and oneself" is a deep-rooted tradition of our people. Thanks to this patriotic and democratic spirit, our nation has accomplished glorious feats of arms in its 4,000-year-old history. Since the birth of our party, under the banner of national independence and socialism, our people's traditions of patriotism and democracy have been raised to a new level and developed more vigorously than ever before. At present, our country is building a system of socialist collective mastery by the working people. This conforms to the laws of the time, and is a continuation and heightening of the Vietnamese nation's age-old tradition of patriotic and democratic culture.

To build the new culture and mold the new people is a cause having a comprehensive content, in which the educational system comprising preschool education, general education, secondary vocational education, vocational training, university and post-graduate education are of primary importance.

Over the past years, thanks to the great efforts of the party, state and people, of the men and women teachers, education work has continued to develop vigorously. It has begun to evolve in the direction of the education reform laid down by the party's fourth congress. All the educational services are striving to overcome the numerous difficulties in material facilities, surmount the obstacles resulting from our poor economic life and keep teaching and learning going regularly. At present, 2.7 million children attend kindergarten or preschool classes, the figure of general school children has reached 12.5 million, and that of university students is 150,000. In the south, the U.S.-puppet education system has been transformed rapidly, private schools abolished, and the schooling privilege for exploiting classes eliminated. The basis of a revolutionary education has been built, curriculums have been unified, and schools have been opened wide for the children of the working people and ethnic groups, pre-school, general and higher education has been developed, complementary education stepped up.

The achievements recorded in education as a source of pride for our regime. However, the educational work has fallen short of the present requirements of the revolution. Generally speaking, the educational system as a whole fails to prepare the younger generation well with regard to moral qualities and capacity to engage in productive labor, to struggle for socialist construction, and to accomplish the duty of defending the country as masters possessing the required practical skills and professional standards to serve the cause of achieving the economic and cultural development and transformation, consolidating national defense, maintaining political security, public order, and social safety. The programs and plans of educational development, especially with regard to higher education, secondary vocational education and vocational training, are not in harmony with economic development plans. The distribution and employment of school graduates still lack a good performance.

The biggest problem now is the serious decline in the quality of education. We have not only let the standard of cultural, scientific-technical knowledge drop, but also relaxed the education of the younger generation in revolutionary ideals and socialist ethics. The organization and direction of the training process are not close and serious enough. There are severe shortages of school buildings and school equipment; moreover, those available are not well utilized and maintained.

The whole educational effort must become pervaded with the goal of training new people, working people with a sense of collective mastery, ardent patriotism and pure proletarian internationalism. We must ensure that the younger generation can gradually master mankind's treasures of culture and knowledge, turn this knowledge into a source of confidence, a scientific world outlook and method of thinking, thereby enabling people to think creatively, and act correctly in accordance with the lofty ideals of national independence and socialism, with the will to take a firm stand on the position of national independence and socialism.

The task in the coming years is to unfold the educational reform, develop education in an active and steady manner with steps suited to the requirements and possibilities of the national economy, strive for better-quality education, and pay due attention to vocational orientation for general school pupils. In the south and in the mountainous areas, while striving for better quality, we must attach great importance to increasing the number of schools, especially general schools. At the same time, we must not slight complementary education and literacy work.

To consolidate and develop preschool education; complete on the whole the endeavor for universal first-level education, actively and steadily develop second-level basic general education and strive step by step to make it universal. To expand the secondary general schools of the half-study, half-work type; to readjust the network of vocational training schools, broaden the forms of training and perfecting skilled workers both for industrial branches and for agriculture, small industry and handicrafts. To arrange a rational network of vocational secondary schools, universities, colleges; to give particular attention to consolidating and improving teacher-training schools. To work out programs and plans to train, perfect and turn to good account a balanced and integrated contingent of scientific workers, technicians, economic management cadres -- including those with postgraduate standards -- suited to the economic development requirements in the whole country and in each locality. To strengthen political, ideological, and moral education in schools. To enhance the position, quality and effectiveness of the Marxist-Leninist education department in universities and colleges. Each school must be a solid position of socialism.

The achievement of the educational objectives requires efforts and contributions from the whole society. Good coordination among the various services of the administration and mass organizations, especially the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union, close combination between the state and the people, between schools, family and society, under the leadership of the party, such are basic conditions for the success of the educational work.

Our party, state and people have a high appreciation of the role of teachers in the training of the future generations; every man and woman teacher, every educational administrator must clearly realize his or her glorious task, love his or her profession all the more as he or she loves the people, firmly grasp the educational objectives, set real examples of moral qualities, strive to improve his or her work and wholeheartedly devote his or her knowledge, convictions, mind, pedagogic skills to the training of the most useful people for the country. The party committees and administrative bodies at all levels must give constant care to the building of the contingent of teachers, take steps to gradually raise their political, cultural, scientific and professional standards and endeavor to improve their material and moral living conditions.

In the building of the new culture and molding of the new people, an extremely important role belongs to cultural and artistic activities -- literature, stage performances, cinema, photography, music, fine arts, architecture, museums, and so on.

The implementation of the resolutions adopted by the party's fourth congress in this field have yielded fairly good results. The neocolonialist culture in the south has been eliminated on the whole. The revolutionary culture which developed during the resistance war has undergone an even more vigorous growth since the liberation. The mass movement for cultural activities -- the activities in the fields of exhibitions, libraries, clubs, cultural houses -- have continued to expand. A new feature in the countryside is the gradual establishment of a cultural network in a number of districts along with initial steps being made in the building of material-technical facilities for culture. In the field of cultural and artistic creation, there have appeared over the past few years a number of works of value which have had marked effects in the promotion of new thoughts and sentiments. A number of works and artists have been given high awards in international competitions. Obviously, the building and transforming of culture along socialist orientations have made a step forward.

However, society now has ever greater cultural requirements. The cultural, literary and artistic work has failed to keep up with the new demands of society. Attendances at movies and artistic performances have risen, yet due to economic difficulties, the distribution of books, newspapers, and cultural items has decreased. Besides good cultural works, many cultural, literary and artistic activities are not of very good quality, generally speaking; they lack deep socialist content and a strong appeal, fail to give deep impressions and to lead people toward correct thoughts and actions. In cultural, literary and artistic activities, it is to be regretted that besides efforts to search for and create the new and the progressive, which should be highly appreciated and encouraged, some deviations and unhealthy tendencies have emerged. Meanwhile, the struggle on the cultural front has slackened in some places, and as a result, vestiges of the neocolonialist culture, bad customs and superstitions tend to return to favor in many areas and affect not a small number of young men and women. Party committees and administrative bodies at all levels, and ideological and cultural services must be fully aware of their responsibilities and enhance their supervision over cultural life.

To strive to develop and improve the cultural, literary and artistic activities suited to everybody and the activities suited to each age group, each locality, each ethnic group, with a view to meeting the ever greater cultural needs of the people. To broaden the mass movement for cultural, literary and artistic activities which must be really linked to the movement for production and fighting, create a basis and an inexhaustible source of nutrition for our new culture. To tighten the relation of mass culture, literature and arts with professional activities in this field, unceasingly to raise the standards of the masses in cultural creation and enjoyment.

To make patient efforts to promote a new, healthy, scientific, thrifty and plain way of life, to protect and develop the spiritual values. To wage a resolute struggle against bad customs and superstitions and carry on the struggle to sweep away the neocolonialist culture and the influence of all other reactionary and depraved cultures. All this is aimed at giving the new thoughts, sentiments and way of life a really dominant position in the life of the people, and successfully achieving a common will throughout the country to build socialism, and effectively to defend the socialist fatherland.

A task of the ideological and cultural revolution is to make culture pervade the people's daily life. Special attention should be attached to the promotion of cultural life in grassroots units, to ensure that every factory, construction yard, state farm, afforestation yard, army unit, people's security unit, service, school, hospital, government store, village, cooperative, city ward and hamlet has its own cultural life. To achieve a better organization of cultural life in cities and provincial capitals, making urban centers worthy representatives of the new culture. To give the utmost care to promoting cultural life in the countryside with greater attention being paid to former base areas and minority-populated regions. To build a number of works, such as cultural houses, cinemas, libraries, stadiums in district centers and in various villages in the districts, thus creating a network which functions to promote and popularize the new culture in rural areas. To build the above-mentioned works and to develop cultural life, we must carry out the policy of joint efforts by the state and the people.

Literature and arts constitute a very important and complicated area of culture and social life. The party must exercise strengthened and improved leadership suited to the peculiarities of this field. The party trusts the writers and artists, highly appreciates their contributions, and always looks forward to seeing the emergence of many creative talents and literary and artistic works of high ideological and artistic value, worthy of a country with an age-old culture and of a heroic people. The party encourages every research and creative endeavor and the development of artistic styles and talents. At the same time, the party requires writers and artists to firmly grasp the method of socialist realism, highlight the party character and the responsibility of the fighters on the cultural and ideological front in the new stage of the revolution, to serve the interests of the people more effectively and make worthy contributions to the cause of socialist construction and national defense.

Newspapers, publications, radio, information and agitation work, television broadcasts, and so on -- in short, the mass media as a whole -- constitute very important elements on the cultural and ideological front. In the past few years, these services have made great efforts in disseminating the views, lines and policies of the party, progressive thoughts, scientific and technological knowledge and cultural and artistic achievements of our nation and mankind. However, the masses and the revolutionary cause require the mass media to further heighten its ideological character, quality and effectiveness. At present, newspapers are still marked by poor contents, poor information, unattractiveness in form, poor credibility, lack of high educating effect. Radio broadcasts are not always attractive to listeners. Much remains to be done to improve the quality and enrich the content of TV programs. Political and theoretical books and newspapers are still too few in number. The masses are asking for studies with scientific value and books presenting political and theoretical Marxist-Leninist knowledge in a varied, vivid and attractive manner suitable to each category of readers: workers, peasants, intellectuals, youths, and so on. The activities of the mass media must be given increased practicalism, truthfulness, militancy, higher technical and artistic standards. On the information and propaganda front, we must always have the command of the situation in all places, at all times, resolutely take the offensive, win victory at every day, every hour, smash in time the enemy's psychological warfare contentions and tricks. In many rural areas, mountain areas, especially the higher lands and border area, there are now very serious shortages of newspapers, radio sets and badly needed means of information and propaganda. The services concerned must make the greatest effort to put an end to this state of affairs.

Physical exercise and sports are an important, indispensable part of the building of the new culture and molding of the new people. The party and state should cater with greater attention to the development of physical exercise and sports with a view to helping enhance the people's health, promote the fine qualities of the new, socialist people, such as courage, energy, skill, intelligence, aesthetic sense, collective spirit, and honesty, and meet the requirements of national construction and defense.

Over the past years, the mass movement for physical exercise and sports at the grassroots level has made noteworthy progress and begun to gain ground in a number of districts and branches. The contingent of athletes has further developed. However, the movement has not been developed on a broad and permanent basis; the performances and records achieved in various sport are still low.

To ensure a steady development of physical exercise and sports with practical results, and gradually build the socialist physical exercise and sports with a balanced development and a national, scientific and popular character, it is necessary in the years ahead to broaden and improve mass activities in physical exercise and sports, first and foremost, among the schoolchildren, youths and in the armed forces. At the same time, we are to make active efforts to build up a contingent of athletes with ever greater numbers, good political and moral qualities, high performances and records. To this end, we must strengthen the organizational and managerial system of physical exercise and sports at all levels, in all branches, and mass organizations; enhance the quality and effectiveness of the cadre-training work, step up the scientific and technological research and application work, and increase the material-technical facilities for physical exercise and sports step by step.

In the past few years, we have been confronted with ever greater and more comprehensive demands regarding the protection of the people's health. Carrying out the resolution of the fourth party congress, we have persevered in the direction of practicing preventive medicine, and made progress in combining modern medicine with our traditional medicine. We have quickly unified the health care organization, promoted a mass movement for hygiene and disease-prevention, increased workers and equipment, especially at the grassroots level and in districts. Thanks to this, we have on the whole checked and controlled in time epidemics, done a good job in meeting the first-aid requirements of the war-wounded, markedly lowered the incidence of a number of social diseases, increased the capacity of providing medical examination and treatment and achieving self-sufficiency in medicines. We have begun to keep health records on patients suffering from a number of diseases and on some categories of people in the south particularly, we have effectively got rid of some social diseases and evils, products of the U.S.-puppet regime, bringing a new life to hundreds of thousands of people.

However, much remains to be done in the protection of the people's health. The present conditions of environmental hygiene, especially in public places, in cities, provincial capitals and industrial regions, are posing many problems to be solved. Shortages of medicines and medical equipment are obstructing the treatment of diseases. On the basis of bringing into play the great strength of the people, the capacity of the localities and services concerned, we must provide appropriate investments to protect and gradually clean the environment, enhancing the quality and effectiveness of the work to prevent and fight epidemics, to prevent and check social diseases, better organize medical examination and treatment. We must continue to promote and develop our traditional medicine, achieve a more effective combination of traditional medicine with modern medicine; we shall consolidate and develop the health network, especially at the grassroots and district levels. An urgent task is to turn to account all possibilities available at home to create sources of pharmaceutical materials -- actively build the drug and medical equipment industry, bring about all conditions for putting an early end to shortages of medicines, including through imports with the proceeds of exports.

Our party, state and people hold in high esteem the great contributions of the medical workers from central to grassroots levels, the fighters whose lofty function is to cater to the life of man. To protect the people's health is a lofty revolutionary task. All medical workers, physicians or pharmacists, from professors medical doctors to nurses and attendant personnel, should clearly realize their glorious duty, show to a high extent the moral qualities of socialist medical workers "physicians are like kind mothers," and put all their intelligence and conscience to the service of the patients. Party committees and administrative bodies must afford favorable conditions for the medical workers to raise their professional skills, enhance their political standards, and at the same time, seek ways and means to improve their living conditions, especially with regard to medical workers in grassroots units.

Our party, state and people will remember forever the merits of the fallen soldiers and war invalids. In spite of current economic difficulties, we have made great efforts to provide suitable jobs for disabled soldiers, cater for the seriously injured ones, and organize the masses to care for the disabled soldiers and help the families of the fallen ones. Pursuant to the tradition of showing gratitude to those who have rendered services to the country, the various strata of people, especially women, adolescents and children, have made very active contributions to the work regarding the disabled and the fallen soldiers with thousands of practical and moving deeds. In the forthcoming period, the party committees, administrative bodies and mass organizations at all levels must show permanent concern to the disabled soldiers and the families of fallen soldiers, and ensure a full implementation of the policy with regard to them.

In accordance with the humane spirit of our social system, our state and people have done much to cater to, assist, and support helpless old people, orphans, and invalids. These works have been stepped up during the international year of the handicapped persons. From now on, we should strive on along this direction.

Administrative bodies at all levels should show, in coordination with the mass organizations, greater concern for poor children with no schooling.

With regard to the retired workers whose number is increasing year by year, our party and state must enact the required complementary policies and regulations, show due concern for their spiritual and material life, make special efforts to care with gratitude and due consideration for those cadres with a long record of revolutionary activities, and to attend to the health of old comrades. We welcome the eager contributions of retired workers to appropriate social works.

Special attention is required to provide better maternity and child care. This is a big problem in the economic and cultural development, molding of new people, and building of the new society, having a direct bearing on the happy life of every family. This is not only an extremely important task of our party and state but also a common task requiring the attention and contribution of the whole society.

The new regime must create ever fuller conditions for every family to live in happiness and for the women to fulfill their lofty function as mothers. A better performance is to be achieved in the family-planning campaign. We shall gradually broaden society's assuming the task of catering to, and educating children. However, this will in no way relieve the mother's role in bringing up healthy and well-educated children. The highest happiness of a young child is to be fostered and to grow up in its mother's love.

Despite the present economic difficulties of our country, our society has given priority to the satisfaction of children's needs in food, clothing, medical care, schooling, moving and recreation, and striven to allot to the children what is required and the best facilities available. The state has recently promulgated new laws and decrees on policies regarding the protection, care and education of children. All administrative bodies, services, mass organizations, economic, social, educational, health care and cultural organizations must seriously and fully carry out those policies in accordance with their respective functions. Socialism, and socialism alone, can bring happiness to man, and this is reflected first of all in the care for all aspects of the children's life.

Part IV -- To Strengthen the Socialist State, To Launch a Revolutionary Movement of the Masses

Dear comrades, to build and bring into play the working people's right to collective mastery according to the mechanism of party's leadership, people's mastery and state's management is a problem of decisive significance for a successful performance of the important and urgent revolutionary tasks in the forthcoming period. This mechanism has been institutionalized in the Constitution of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, but it has not been clearly embodied in the organizational structure of the state, in that mode of social and economic management, in the rules and pattern of daily activities of the various party committees, state bodies and mass organizations from the central down to the grassroots level. The efficiency of the state machinery at various levels is not great enough. The activities of the mass organizations have not brought about on a permanent basis a buoyant and widespread mass movement. There is slowness in improving the party's method of leadership with regard to the state and the mass organizations. That is precisely a weak point in our work of leadership and management over the past period.

The working people exercise their right to collective mastery mainly through the state under the leadership of the party. This state is that of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, a state of proletarian dictatorship. Therefore, to strengthen the state is a pressing problem at present. It is necessary to strengthen the state to bring into play the working people's right to collective mastery and fully manifest the party's leadership in the accomplishment of the three revolutions, the building of the new regime, the new economy, the new culture, the molding of the new people, the maintenance of political security, public order and social safety, the preservation of the revolutionary gains, the defense of the socialist motherland, the promotion and defense of the people's happiness.

Exercising their mastery through the state, our people do so primarily through the National Assembly and the people's councils at all levels. However, so far, the representatives of elective bodies have been given little training with regard to their tasks, powers and methods of activity; a number of elective bodies still work in a formal way, falling short of their functions, tasks and powers as provided for by the constitution. That is a weak point in the functioning of the state apparatus, and also a shortcoming in the party's leadership work.

Therefore, it is necessary to strive to ensure that the National Assembly, the highest organ of state power, really brings into play its role in lawmaking, deciding major issues of the state, and supervising the activities of the administrative services at the central level; and that the people's councils at all levels function in accordance with their position as local bodies of state power, making decisions on important issues in the building of the locality. The deputies to the National Assembly and the people's councils should fully bring into play their mandatory responsibilities and powers, entertain close and regular contacts with the electors, reflect in time the people's views and aspirations to the state bodies, thereby bringing about a quick acceptance and materialization of the people's correct suggestions.

Exercising their mastery through the state, our people do so through the Council of Ministers and the people's committees at all levels, which constitute a system of bodies handling political, economic, cultural, social, defense, security and other activities. As economic activities bear a foundation character, the crucial problem now is to readjust the organization of the economic management bodies of the state and improve their activities in close connection with the building of a new economic structure and a new management system.

In keeping with the new economic structure, proceeding from the requirements of production, business operations, and with a view to ensuring genuine connections with the grassroots, it is necessary to rearrange and perfect the economic management bodies of the state in every branch and at every level. We must resolutely readjust the organization, put an end to the current state of affairs wherein the apparatus is cumbersome with many intermediate levels, overstaffed but not very effective.

To perfect the Council of Ministers, increase its effectiveness in carrying out an appropriate centralized and unified management of the national economy. To attach special importance to the perfecting of the State Planning Commission and other general management bodies, to bring into play their role in furthering and supervising the economic activities of the various branches, localities and grassroots units. To consolidate and strengthen the ministries and general departments in charge of branch management to ensure their good performance in programming, policy planning, setting forth orientations and steps to develop science and technology, building the contingent of cadres and workers for the whole branch in the entire country and to hand over the concrete business of conducting production and business activities to the various companies and enterprises.

To reorganize the various production and business establishments, steadily build local economic structures, in particular to build the districts, form and develop in a rational way economic-technical branches in the fields of production, construction, transport, circulation in the form of companies or enterprise combines operating on the cost-accounting and socialist business system.

To consolidate and perfect on a permanent basis the local administration at all levels, give an adequate attention to the building and consolidation of the administrative apparatus at village and city ward level; give systematic training to the principal leading cadres of villages and city ward; amend the policies with regard to grassroots cadres of the administration and mass organizations.

To strengthen socialist legality is an imperative need in order to raise the managerial effectiveness of the state, ensure the working people's right to collective mastery.

To strengthen social management under the laws, our state must diligently concretize the new constitution through a system of laws; pay great attention to the gradual establishment of a system of economic laws and public security laws. To strengthen the bodies engaging in legal work, and urgently increase the training of state administrative cadres and legal cadres.

Our state must fully exercise both its political and economic powers to preserve social discipline, wage an effective struggle against law-breaking and social evils, and do away with the abnormal situation in which many laws and legal orders are not correctly implemented, or even not implemented at all. The state bodies at the central and local levels should take a firm attitude and strong measures to prevent and eliminate violations of the people's right to collective mastery, mercilessly suppress the counterrevolutionaries; punish those exploiters who refuse to reform, hooligans and ruffians, speculators, traffickers, embezzlers; take stern measures against those cadres and employees who abuse their functions and power to contravene the laws.

Party committees, state bodies and mass organizations must engage, on a permanent basis, in the work to make known and explain the laws among the various social strata; education on the law is to be introduced into schools at various levels, to promote a law-abiding spirit. To strengthen prosecution and inspection work; organize and broaden a system of people's inspectors; amend the handling of complaints, do away with their piling up, to put an end to the state of affairs in which no service, no organization takes upon itself the responsibility of adequately resolving the people's grievances and the violations of civic rights about which consideration is required.

The managerial bodies of the state must improve their method of activity; renovate their style of work, so as to give management activities militancy, incisiveness, conclusiveness and practicality; provide a close and thorough guidance with regard to each task, oppose red tape and the holding of too many meetings. Every section, every person in every service, every unit must abide by principles and regulations, observe a very strict discipline in the performance of their tasks. In the state's managerial bodies, it is necessary to abide by the one-chief system and to put an end to the shirking of responsibility, an important cause of sluggishness in management. To promulgate and stricty implement regulations on specific tasks for each office in the state's managerial bodies.

It is necessary to improve the procedures of study, discussion and approval with a view to ensuring correct and timely decisions on problems related to economic and social management. To put to use research agencies, economic, and scientific-technical organizations, mass organizations, collect the views of ordinary people and of cadres for the purpose of a good preparation of socioeconomic policies. In making decisions, it is necessary to take into account specific conditions and circumstances, which differ from one zone or one area to another in the country. After a decision or a directive of the party and the state has been issued, it is necessary to promulgate in a timely manner an integrated set of specific policies and regulations required for its implementation. We must write off and avoid setting forth complicated, impractical, overlapping or contradictory procedures likely to cause difficultues and troubles to production and business units. To strictly forbid arrogant and authoritarian attitudes towards the people. To organize a close follow-up of the implementation of the policies, handle in a clear-cut manner the requests of the lower levels and the masses; achieve an early detection of incorrect or obsolete stipulations and promptly issue new decisions to amend or supersede them. To eliminate sluggishness and obtain an atmosphere of diligent work, promote initiative and creativeness, and ensure unified centralization, it is necessary to apply in an integrated and effective way economic, administrative and educational measures. To lay down economic policies and measures, ensure a correct relationship between interests; carry out in a deep, wide and vivid way the political and ideological education work in the party, state bodies, and mass organizations; strictly enforce regulations designed to maintain discipline and law; achieve a good combination of the three aspects of this work to stimulate and compel all groups and individuals to work eagerly, with good quality and great efficiency. Good, efficient workers will be commended and rewarded; bad performance and faulty work must be given proper punishments. The outstanding progress of many agricultural and industrial establishments in production and exploitation over the past period has proved that ensuring the unity of the three interests, catering appropriately to the personal interests of the working man; strongly arousing and permanently fostering the revolutionary ardor of the masses and highlighting clear-cut responsibility and strict discipline together create a motive force causing everybody to work well and stimulating dynamism and creativeness.

To strengthen the party's leadership over the state, to improve the leading method of party committee with regard to the administration is a decisive condition to promote the role and effectiveness of the state.

At present, there are still party committees and leading cadres that have not completely realized that to consolidate and strengthen the socialist state is a primary task of the party; there are still party organizations that take on themselves the business of state bodies. It is necessary to rapidly do away with this state of affairs. All party committees, party cadres and members must abide by the constitution and the law in an exemplary way, and be at the forefront in the struggle to strengthen socialist legality. The party organizations are strictly forbidden to lay down at will stipulations contrary to the law.

All party committees must go deeply into every field of concrete activity, especially on the economic front with a view to promoting positive factors, redressing wrongful actions, detecting problems related to policies and measures, and working out and perfecting accordingly a method of leadership consistent with the character and special features of each branch. It is necessary to base oneself on the specific requirements and contents of leadership in each branch, at each level to build the party organization and assign cadres in an adequate manner. Party cadres and members working in state bodies must firmly grasp the law and clearly understand the organizational structure of the state, the managerial mechanism and the method of the leadership of the party with regard to the state.

Dear comrades, the revolution is the cause of the masses. Therefore in any period, agitation and organization work among the masses for revolution-making bears a strategic significance. In the stage of socialist revolution, and at the present time when the revolution in our country carries out two strategic tasks -- to build socialism and to defend the socialist fatherland -- the importance of mass agitation work, far from being reduced, has increased. That is because a task of paramount importance to the revolution is to bring into play the working people's right to collective mastery and to build a system to this effect; that is both a target and a motive force of the socialist revolution. The working people's right to collective mastery under the leaders of the party is exercised mainly through the state, and also through the activities of the mass organizations which find an expression in the revolutionary movement of the masses.

Over the past five years and more, in specific areas of activity and during specific periods, we have initiated strong mass movements for the liquidation of the war aftermaths, the fight against natural disasters, emulation in productive labor, participation in the fight against the enemy to defend the country, maintain political security, public order and social safety. There has thus been noteworthy progress in the political and cultural standards of our working people and in their sense and capacity of mastery.

Our working class has grown much stronger. The number of workers has increased by 24 percent, and skilled workers account for 1.7 million persons. The political, cultural and vocational standards of the workers have been raised to some extent. In the face of great difficulties in production and daily life, our working class has shown its revolutionary nature, maintained and developed production, and built the material-technological basis of socialism.

The 1.6-million-strong contingent of small industrial workers and handicraftsmen represents a great productive force which has made an important contribution to economic rehabilitation and development, the boosting of consumer goods production and the furthering of everyday life and of exports.

Our working peasants have achieved new progress. Their consciousness and political, cultural, and technical standards have been markedly enhanced. The peasants in the north have developed many initiatives for intensive farming, increased productivity, consolidated the new relations of production, and actively fulfilled their duty to the state. The peasants in the south have eagerly restored and developed agriculture, have step by step embarked on the path of collective farming, and clearly shown their attachment to the new regime.

The contingent of intellectuals of our country has undergone a fairly rapid development; it has marked a 78-percent increase in five years in the whole country; there are now more than 260,000 university graduates and postgraduate cadres. The intellectuals have made intensive efforts and devoted their energy and capacity to the building and defense of the fatherland. A number of our research and artistic works have reached high standards.

Our youth has grown rapidly to maturity, and made contributions worthy of the glorious traditions of the young generation and the nation. The three shock actions in collective mastery movement has mobilized the youth to march in the forefront in many areas of activity, in productive labor and in the fight to defend the motherland and maintain political security, public order, and social safety; at the same time, it has fostered in young people revolutionary heroism, patriotism, love of socialism and a spirit of creative labor.

Our women are very worthy of being a mighty contingent of the revolutionary masses, a great social workforce, and have heavy responsibilities in the bearing and raising of future generations. The "new woman building and defending the fatherland" movement has educated and mobilized women in the whole country for a good performance of their civic duties and their responsibility as mothers; at the same time, it has fostered among women the spirit of striving for equality between man and woman, taking the liberation of women an important step forward.

Our compatriots of various ethnic groups from the mountain areas to the plains, from the high to the low lands, have brought into play their dauntlessness and their tradition of unity and struggle, and made great contributions to our victory in the two wars of aggression and to the defeat of the enemy's divisive maneuvers. Through the fight and the construction work, the fraternal ethnic groups have further steeled themselves and enhanced their patriotism and love of socialism.

The compatriots of the various religious communities with constant attachment to the nation have united with the nonbelievers, and eagerly striven for a good performance of their duty to the cause of building and defending the motherland.

The overseas Vietnamese with their minds constantly turned towards the country, have engaged in varied activities and made active contributions to national defense and reconstruction.

Through countless difficulties and trials the bloc of great unity of our entire people has been further consolidated and developed; every class, every stratum of working people has made contributions and grown mature. The fighting power, creative capacity and revolutionary potentialities of our people are great, indeed. That is an inexhaustible source of strength which guarantees the fulfillment of the historic tasks in the new stage.

However, in the recent years the mass movement has undergone an uneven development and in many cases, its effectiveness is low. Parts of the workforce have not been given a good education on the role of the vanguard class and the responsibility of socialist collective mastery, they still suffer from the influence of the psychology and style of the small producer, and they fail to consciously abide by labor discipline and the law of the state. Some of the young people have been unable to set a revolutionary ideal for themselves; they fail to realize their duty to build and defend the fatherland. A number of youths and adolescents in towns and cities, under the influence of the bourgeois way of life, of depraved cultural leftovers and of the enemy's psychological warfare, have had thoughts and actions at variance with the socialist ethics and pattern of life.

The cause of the above-mentioned shortcomings lies in our failure to turn to account the entire system of proletarian dictatorship for the education and mobilization of the masses and to improve and heighten the contents, forms and methods of mass agitation in a way suited to the new requirements.

Many party organizations and party committees do not yet care to study the situation in regard to the life and thoughts of the various social strata; they do not attach importance to the building of the mass organizations and promoting of their roles and functions; they fail to exercise close leadership over the revolutionary movements of the masses. No small number of state bodies suffer from bureaucratism, commandism, authoritarian methods; they violate the people's right to collective mastery. The activities of the mass organizations have also been bureaucratized; they have been slow to be improved, and fail to meet the new requirements of the masses. A number of party cadres and members have suffered moral degradation, abused their positions of authority to bully the masses, isolated the law, injured the prestige of the party and state, and adversely affected the revolutionary ardor of the masses.

The buoyant, widespread and effective emulation movement in cooperative farms and agricultural production collectives, which has resulted from a correct application of the allotment of delivery quotas to the working people, constitutes a valuable and useful lesson. A correct grasp of the requirements and aspirations of the masses, the carrying out of a policy consistent with the vital interests of the working people, the finding out of specific forms and measures harmoniously combining the three interests, a close linking of correct economic policies with a good organization work and a deep propaganda and education work, have all guaranteed the exercising by the working people of their right as masters and resulted in a strong mass movement. And it is precisely through such a mass movement that the working people's right to mastery is really exercised. Obviously the working people must really exercise their right to collective mastery if there is to be a revolutionary movement; conversely, there must be a revolutionary movement if there is to be general collective mastery of the working people.

Our party must direct the correcting of the shortcomings in the mass agitation work; strive to overcome bureaucratism in the party organizations, state bodies and mass organizations; and manage to set going a truly deep, wide and strong mass movement.

The party committees, mass organizations, and state bodies must coordinate their efforts to use integrated sets of economic, administrative and educational measures, and bring about buoyant and lasting revolutionary movements of the masses in every locality, especially at the grassroots, in every social circle, every branch, every field of life, movements directed at the common objective: for the socialist fatherland, for the happiness of the people. Each movement should have practical contents and concrete targets, closely linked to the successful implementation of economic, cultural, social plans, the ensuring of defense and security, and yield effective results in all the three economic, social and ideological fields.

The party cell must assign mass work to its members and supervise their activities in mass organizations. Every party member must regularly participate in the activities of the mass organization of which he or she is a member, and use his or her exemplary actions and knowledge to persuade the masses and encourage them to carry out the policies of the party and state. The party organizations must create favorable conditions for the masses to criticze the party's leadership and express to them their opinion on the relations of party cadres and members. They must become acquainted with the desires and possibilities of the masses, collect their initiatives and experiences, and give answers to the problems raised by them.

The state bodies, especially those in direct daily contact with the people, such as the administrative services in villages, city wards, districts, security services, tax-collecting offices, tribunals, prosecutors' offices, the cadres and employees of enterprises, shops, schools, hospitals, and so on, are dutybound to carry out propaganda and agitation work among the masses, maintain the close relationship of the people with the party and state, rapidly and properly handle the legitimate requests of the masses, fulfill their task to serve the people and resolutely eliminate arrogance, authoritarian methods and irresponsibility. The state bodies must act in close coordination with the mass organizations to mobilize the masses to implement the lines and policies of the party, and the plans and laws of the state.

The role and strength of the mass organizations lie precisely in their ability to rally the masses, understand their moods and aspirations, promote their socialist consciousness, arouse their conscious activity, initiative and creativeness. To this end, there must be a renovation of their organizational forms and mode of activity to suit the new conditions. In their activities there must be dynamism and sensitivity to the problems newly arising in life, an end to bureaucratism, oversimplification, and rigidity in organization and activity. To broaden the forms of organization according to professions and the requirements of daily life and cultural activities so as to draw mass participation in social activities, the contingent of mass organization cadres must be renewed. In addition to skilled and ardent full-time cadres with the required number, it is necessary to make wide use of half-time ones to help mass organizations get closer to the grassroots and the masses.

It is the duty of the mass organizations to educate their members in socialism, socialist legality, the responsibilities and powers of collective mastery; to promote the sense and capacity of mastery; to persuade the masses to consciously implement the policies of the party and the laws of the state and at the same time, to collect and reflect the views of the people to propose to the party committees and state bodies policies and measures to resolve the matters related to the people's interests and help build the administrative apparatus at all levels.

The trade unions must improve their organization and activities to carry out their goal, functions and tasks in the socialist revolution to the full as laid down in the resolution of the fourth party congress and the Constitution of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. As an immediate step, the party's work among the workers and the trade union's activities must be directed at the task of building a strong Vietnamese working class, promoting the class consciousness, molding the new, socialist workers. The trade unions must concentrate their activities on the attainment of economic, scientific, technological, organizational targets, step up the emulation movement for productive labor and thrift among the workers and public servants, raise the workers' political, cultural, scientific-technological standards, and actively contribute to the training of highly skilled workers and good managerial cadres.

The trade unions must take an effective part in state affairs; effectively contribute to the improvement of economic management, especially that of the management of enterprises; closely cooperate with the state bodies to resolve concrete problems. On production conditions, labor protection and fostering the labor force, stabilizing and ensuring the life of workers and public servants, the trade unions must play the role of a core in the socialist emulation movement, set brilliant examples regarding the new attitude towards labor, the sense of discipline, initiative, creativeness, thrift and protection of public property; at the same time, they must criticize and overcome unhealthy manifestations in labor and everyday life among a number of workers and public servants. The party committees and administrative bodies must afford every condition for the workers and public servants to take a direct part in handling production and distribution, and for the trade unions to supervise and control the work of state bodies.

The trade unions are dutybound to defend the legitimate interests of the workers in the joint state-private enterprises and private capitalist ones in the south. On the basis of the new constitution, the state should study the amending of the trade union law.

The federation of cooperatives which represents the small industrial workers and handicraftsmen must strengthen the political and ideological education work to enhance the sence of mastery among co-op members and handicraftsmen; it must carry on the transformation and reorganization of small industries and handicrafts, unceasingly consolidate and perfect the new relations of production, cater to the organization of the workers life, the training of cadres and workers, make suggestions to the party and the state about policies and regulations to impulse the development of this production sector in keeping with the socialist path.

The work among the peasants aims at uniting and educating peasants for materializing the worker-peasant alliance, stepping up the three revolutions, achieving an all-round development of agricultural production, taking agriculture a step toward socialist large-scale production, building the new, socialist countryside, making an important contribution to socialist transformation and construction. The party committees and state bodies, especially at district and village levels, must strive to build and consolidate the cooperative farms and agricultural production collectives. The cooperative farms and production collectives are to fulfill their functions of organizing production and business operations, carry out their obligations to the state, cater to the life of their members; at the same time, they are to do a good job in uniting and educating peasants, fostering their sense and capacity of collective mastery. To bring into play the action of the union of collective peasants and the peasants' association, it is necessary to find forms suitable to each locality to enable cooperative farms and production collectives to exchange experiences on the organization of production and the building of the new countryside.

Our party must further strengthen the work among the intellectuals, strive to bring into play the great potential of our intellectuals with a view to serving the country and socialism in an increasingly better way.

The Political Bureau of the party's Central Committee has issued a resolution regarding the policy on science and technology. The party committees, state bodies and mass organizations should seriously implement this resolution, work out policies and plans for the development of culture, education, science and technology, and ensure their good implementation; overcome the shortcomings in the training, perfecting, and employing of scientific workers and technicians; help them raise their political and professional standards, afford them favorable material and moral conditions to work with high efficiency.

Our party has always held that the work among the youth has special importance. This is a strategic question of the revolution, a responsibility of the entire system of proletarian dictatorship. Its task, both on an immediate and a long-term basis, is to enhance in the younger generation the sense of mastery and to bring into play its shock-role in socialist construction and national defense; quickly overcome unhealthy manifestations among a number of youths and adolescents; strive to train and steel the young people into new people with an all-round development, loyal and outstanding continuators of the cause of the party and nation.

The party branches must exercise close leadership over the youth work, cater to the building of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union and the Ho Chi Minh Pioneers' Organization, in accordance with President Ho Chi Minh's behest in his testament: ...The training and education of future revolutionary generations is of great importance and a necessity. All branches, state bodies and mass organizations and the whole society are dutybound to work among the youths and the adolescents, and must achieve a close division and coordination of work for the sake of a good performance in this respect. It is necessary to achieve a genuine renovation of the forms and methods of organization and education of the youth and adolescents in keeping with the new situation and tasks, the particular features of the youths with regard to their age, and new requirements; to smash in time the enemy's schemes and acts of sabotage with regard to the youth; to lend political education to the caring for the settlement of concrete matters related to the interests, material and cultural life of the youth. In the forthcoming period, it is necessary to hold special conferences to study and resolve the new problems regarding the thoughts and way of life of our youth; to issue, in due course, Central Committee resolutions on the agitation and education work among the youth in the new stage; the state should study and promulgate a law on the youth.

Our party has always had a correct appraisal of the good nature and revolutionary capacity of the youth and the political role of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union. The union must achieve a better performance in organizing its members and the youth and educating them on socialism and communism. To enhance the young people's sense of collective mastery, give them a clear understanding of their duties and rights, make them live in accordance with the lofty communist ideal, lead a civilized, healthy life, show creativeness in labor and study, wage an uncompromising struggle against the negative manifestations. To attach the utmost importance to the education of the youth in the national and the revolutionary traditions, genuine patriotism and proletarian internationalism. To encourage the young people to march in the van of the emulation movement to engage in productive labor and thrift, to develop culture, education, science and technology, to build the armed forces, to fight and stand combat-ready to defend the motherland, to maintain political security, public order and social safety.

The union must carry out a better work in educating the adolescents and children, and guiding the Ho Chi Minh Pioneers' Organization and the Ho Chi Minh Children's Organization.

As an arm and a reserve of the party, the union must actively encourage and guide its members to participate in party building. Party committees must assign politically good, knowledgeable and able cadres to be directly responsible for the work among the youth and pay much attention to the training of prominent union cadres into future leading cadres of the party and state.

To continue to step up the cause of liberating women and achieving equality between men and women, so as to promote further the role and capacity of women in the building of socialism and the defense of the fatherland, party committees should ensure that the party's viewpoint and policy regarding the work among women are fully grasped in all organizations belonging to the system of proletarian dictatorship. It is necessary to struggle to eliminate the feudal and bourgeois viewpoints in the assessment of the women's forces and capacity, the training and employment of women workers and cadres, the resolution of concrete matters related to the life of women and children.

The Vietnam Women's Union must strive to educate and encourage women to bring into play their right to collective mastery, to make even greater contributions to the fatherland and to socialism and to carry on the struggle for the liberation of women and the molding of the new, socialist women. It must cater to the welfare and life of women, afford them conditions for a good performance of their production tasks, social activities and raising of children. It must undertake, in coordination with state bodies, the trade unions and the youth union, surveys on women's life, labor conditions, needs and aspirations, their status in participating in state and social management; it must propose to the party and state the promulgation of policies and laws to ensure the women's rights, and contribute to the supervision over the implementation of these policies and laws.

Enhancing our people's tradition of unity, the Vietnam Fatherland Front mobilizes the various social strata, religious communities, ethnic groups, intellectuals for an eager participation in various revolutionary movements to build and consolidate the administration; it strives to strengthen socialist legalities, increase the political and moral oneness of mind in our society, and promote the working people's right to collective mastery in the building of socialism and the good of the motherland.

The party must direct a good implementatkon of the resolution of the fourth congress regarding the policy on nationalities while carrying on studies for a timely settlement of the new problems related to the party's work on nationalities. It is necessary to strengthen the unity of the various ethnic groups on the principle of equality, mutual assistance and joint collective mastery; to step up the propaganda and education work to give the compatriots from the various ethnic groups of the whole country a deep understanding of the new situation and tasks and the party's policy on nationalities and help them enhance their vigilance, smash in time all divisive and sabotage maneuvers of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, of the imperialists and other reactionaries, write off the remaining national prejudices, and join efforts to build and defend the motherland.

The state must increase its investments for the ethnic minority areas and all party branches, administrative bodies. Mass organizations must make every endeavor to develop economy and culture, meet in time the pressing needs of the minority nationalities in production and everyday life, especially of the higher lands and in border areas, with a view to making a step toward overcoming the gap bequeathed by history in economic and cultural development standards between the various ethnic groups. Every level, every branch must implement the party's policy on nationalities to the extent of its responsibility and possibilities; it must particularly seek a good performance in the training of leading and managerial cadres, scientific workers and technicians of minority stock, first and foremost, for the district lands.

The religious policy of our party and state is to respect the people's freedom of religious belief and nonbelief; to unite all religious communities; to unite believers and nonbelievers with a view to jointly building and defending the country; to mete out severe punishments for activities which abuse religion to the detriment of the interests of the fatherland and socialism. All party branches, administrative authorities, and mass organizations must step up propaganda and education activities on the policy of our party and state with regard to religions, and encourage the religious believers to strengthen unity with the other strata of people, to strictly implement all policies of the party and the laws of the state, and to engage eagerly in the emulation movement for production, study, fulfilling civic duties, defending the fatherland and promoting a new life.

Our people are confident that the overseas Vietnamese will enhance their tradition of unity and patriotism, and make worthy contributions to the defense of the fatherland.

Part V -- The World Situation and the Foreign Policy of Our Party and State

Dear comrades, during the 1970's, especially after the U.S. imperialists' debacle in Vietnam, the world situation entered a new era of development. The three revolutionary currents of the epoch grew tremendously, creating a tremendous consolidated strength. They won brilliant victories in the struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. The countries of the socialist community rapidly increased their total strength, clearly reflecting the superiority of socialism -- a system under which the working people are the genuine masters and the loftiest objective is the happiness of human beings.

The Soviet Union is advancing vigorously to the stage of building the material-technical basis of communism. Many countries are accelerating the process of completing the building of developed socialism. A number of countries are building the material-technical basis of socialism. The socialist countries in CEMA have maintained the accelerated pace of economic development. The Soviet Union has doubled its fixed assets over those of 10 years ago, and its production forces have reached new standards for quality. The countries of the socialist community have built a firm and strong national defense, developed the scientific and technical revolution broadly and deeply and scored remarkable economic and social achievements. As a result, they have shaped a good way of life and ensured legitimate human rights.

The economic alliance has been broadened with every passing day, and the increased cooperation in the various aspects of production and science and technology, as well as the close coordination of the political and diplomatic domains, has opened fine prospects for the development of the socialist community.

Despite definite difficulties still being encountered in the process of advance and despite the betrayal of the Chinese ruling clique, the socialist system has created a consolidated strength that is far superior to that of the imperialist and reactionary forces. With the Soviet Union as a pillar, this system has more vigorously developed its effect as the decisive factor in the developmental trend of mankind's society, as the firm bulwark of peace and as the reliable support of the world people's revolutionary struggle.

The national liberation independence movement is sweeping away the last positions of colonialism and dealing heavy blows to neocolonialism. Over the past 5 or 6 years more than 20 additional countries have gained independence and become equal members of the international community. The independent nationalist Afro-Asian-Latin American countries are continuing their vigorous struggle to win their complete sovereignty over the natural resources still under imperialist control. They are demanding the establishment of a new world economic order. Many countries, such as the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen, Afghanistan, Angola, Mozambique, Ethiopia, Libya, Congo, Benin, Algeria, Madagascar, Nicaragua and Grenada closely unite with the socialist countries and countries that hold firm to their positions in each region of the world. They hold high the banner against imperialism and international reaction. They have established democratic power of the people, carried out many economic, cultural and social reforms in the interest of the majority of the working people and chosen the path of advancing to socialism.

The increasingly close attachment of the national independence movement to the socialist system has created a new position of strength for the revolutionary forces. Relying on this strength, the Nonaligned Movement has made great contributions to the cause of consolidating national independence and maintaining world peace.

In the developed capitalist countries, the class struggle has unfolded very fiercely. The movement of the working class and laboring people has undergone new development, assumed a large scale, displayed a buoyant spirit and taken highly diversified forms. Waves of fierce struggles against bourgeois administrations' attempts to shift the burden of the economic crisis, inflation and recession to the working people and struggles against unemployment, exploitation and social vices have been closely combined with the struggles against the strangulation of democracy, for the establishment of the working people's political rights, against the arms race and for the implementation of a foreign policy of peace, friendship and cooperation among nations. These waves of struggle have brought about the downfall of the fascist dictatorships in a number of countries and have plunged monopolistic capitalist administrations into an unending crisis.

In some countries, the communist and workers parties have played an important role in the national political life, and they have been the principal force which has held high the banner of democracy and social progress against a monopolistic capitalist administration.

Imperialism has recently suffered repeated defeats. The capitalist world has been plunged into a serious general crisis without precedent. Many factors which helped promote the strong development of the capitalist world's production forces up to the early 1970's have been lost, and they are gradually losing effect. Along with the economic and social impasse, there has been a collapse of various demagogic doctrines and arguments beautifying the capitalist society. In the common weakened position of imperialism, its chieftain, the United States, has suffered the biggest failures and the most acute crises and has been overtaken by other capitalist powers. The worldwide economic, energy and raw material crises have spawned even more contradictions among the imperialist countries. In an attempt to find a solution to its economic crisis and to cope with the world revolutionary movement, U.S. imperialism has rallied its forces to strive to maintain its control of the imperialist system, and it has readjusted its counterrevolutionary global strategy by directing the spearhead of its main attacks against the Soviet Union and other socialist countries.

In its attempts U.S. imperialism has found a new ally in the reactionary clique within the Chinese leadership. The collusion between the chieftain of imperialism and Chinese expansionism and hegemonism is a striking characteristic of the current international situation. The Reagan administration's policy of playing the China card and the Sino-U.S. collusion is a factor which constantly threatens world peace. In particular, this collusion is posing a serious threat to security and stability in Asia.

U.S. imperialism has attempted to launch a global counteroffensive to realize its ambition of gaining worldwide military supremacy, retaking lost positions and blocking the development of the three revolutionary currents. It has stepped up the arms race on an unprecedented scale and has actively developed various types of mass-destruction weapons, including the neutron bomb. It has introduced medium-range nuclear missiles into Europe, blatantly propagandized nuclear war, recreated a cold war atmosphere and has sabotaged international detente and security.

The United States has relied on a policy of force to attack the national liberation movement, which it has slanderously branded terrorism. It has expanded and strengthened its worldwide system of military bases and has feverishly armed reactionary dictatorships in Central America, the Middle East, South Asia, southern Africa and so forth, so as to fan the flames of armed conflict and create new hotbeds of tension in these regions.

In fact, the United States is gradually realizing its scheme of entering into a military alliance with China so as to turn the latter nation into a U.S. shock trooper in Asia.

The United States and its reactionaries have interfered in Poland's internal affairs in an attempt to overthrow socialism in the country and to sap the aggregate strength of the socialist community. This adventurist policy is posing an extremely serious danger to world peace.

The current struggle for the various goals of our time is going through a turbulent, difficult and much fiercer stage. However, the imperialists and international reactionaries are coming up against the growing strength and the offensive trend of the three revolutionary currents. The desire for and the determination of various nations to achieve peace are being encouraged by the Soviet Union's foreign policy of peace and by various countries in the socialist community. At present, no country in the world wants to see a war which would kill millions of humans; nor does any country want to squander its assets and natural resources in destroying human civilization. Peace, the fruit of the common struggle of various peoples, must be defended. The unification of all the efforts of various socialist countries, of the nonaligned countries, of various democratic and peaceful forces and of all the nations now has a great potential to dispel the danger of a nuclear war and to prevent the warlike and aggressive policies of the imperialists and international reactionaries. The U.S. imperialists or anyone who wants to play the role of an international gendarme will certainly be duly punished wherever they raise their interfering or offensive hands. Mankind is now in the era in which the peoples of all the countries have become conscious of their role as masters. Even a small island has also been able to rise up and regain independence. Any war staged by the aggressors to suppress the national liberation movement or to strike against any independent country will certainly bring disaster to the very ones who have staged that war.

At the 26th CPSU Congress, Comrade Brezhnev proposed a very important peace program containing many new measures dealing with the elimination of nuclear weapons and disarmament, the prevention and the quick eradication of armed conflicts and tension and the establishment of various peace zones in many sensitive areas in the world, from central Europe to the Far East, from the Middle and Near East to the Pacific and the Indian Ocean and so forth. This peace program is the determined voice of a nation which experienced the heaviest sacrifices of World War II and which has made the greatest contributions to the peaceful life of the peoples of various countries.

The VCP, the SRV Government and the Vietnamese people would like once again to express their total support for the Soviet Union's peace program and its unswerving stand and to heartily welcome the Soviet Union's good-will and constructive proposals in its relations with the West, especially the recent proposals -- contained in some important statements by Comrade Brezhnev concerning the European and Asian situation -- aimed at halting the arms race, dispelling the danger of a nuclear war and promoting detente, security and cooperation in the world.

Dear comrades, looking back over more than half a century of activities of the VCP, we are pleased to note that since its founding, in parallel with its correct internal policy, our party has always adopted a correct foreign policy. The Leninist foreign policy advocated and maintained by Comrade Ho Chi Minh constitutes a component part of the party's strategies and policies for all the developmental stages of the Vietnamese revolution. Relying on the clearsighted assessment of the many major changes in the world situation following the October Revolution and World War II and skillfully combining genuine patriotism and pure proletarian internationalism, our party has guided the Vietnamese revolution in constantly following the correct direction for development in our time. This is an important factor leading to the success of national independence and socialism in our country and serves to ensure our people's just contributions to the world people's revolution.

Over the past 5 years, in implementing the party's principled foreign policy we have achieved many great successes, increasing the steadfast stature and strength of our people in their struggle for national defense, and creating more favorable conditions for our socialist construction.

In spite of the enemy's schemes and tricks aimed at encircling and isolating our country, the role and position of the SRV have been enhanced further in the international arena. In the period to come, our diplomatic work must be aimed at striving to take advantage of favorable international conditions and seeking to obtain the great and multifaceted international assistance for our national construction and defense undertaking, thereby contributing to ensuring the successful fulfillment of historic tasks to be set forth by the current congress. In particular, our diplomatic work must become an active and positive front in the struggle to frustrate the policy of the big-power Chinese hegemonist expansionists in collusion with the bellicose U.S. power, trying to weaken and annex our country. In the immediate future, we must strive to defeat the multifaceted war of sabotage waged by them. We must prevent their scheme of rekindling the war of aggression and consolidate peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

Loyal to their international obligations, our people are uniting with the revolutionary and progressive forces in the world and vigorously supporting the resolute struggle of the peoples in the world against the bellicose and aggressive policy of U.S.-led imperialism for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

Dear comrades, tightening the bonds of friendship and developing the relations of cooperation with the fraternal socialist countries on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism is a primary task in our party and state's foreign policy. Our people are very pleased with the fine development of the militant solidarity and relations of cooperation between our country and the Soviet Union since the two countries signed the treaty of friendship and cooperation in 1978.

As Vietnam's strongest and firmest ally, the Soviet Union is determined to stand side by side with our people and has promptly and generously met our needs in the task of consolidating national defense. The Soviet Union has provided our national economy with those technical materials and goods which are most essential to our people's production and life. It has aided us in building a series of major projects, thus creating the initial material and technical bases of socialism in our country. The Soviet Union's cooperation with us and assistance to us in the cultural, scientific and technical areas and in the training of cadres and skilled workers have been increasingly expanded and strengthened. The exchange of goods conducted by the two countries every year through barter trade is favorably developing.

Solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union has always been the cornerstone of our party's and state's foreign policy. In the interests of the peoples of the two countries, from now on we will continue even more vigorously to develop the militant solidarity and all-round cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union. We regard this as a guarantee for the success of our people's cause of national defense and socialist construction as well as for the consolidation of national independence and the establishment of socialism on the Indochinese Peninsula. This is also an active contribution to the consolidation and strengthening of the socialist system and the strengthening of the struggle for peace and socialism in the world.

Remaining closely attached to and promoting all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union are a principle, a strategy and a manifestation of revolutionary sentiments. Our party is dutybound to educate various generations of the Vietnamese people to grasp this principle firmly and to master this strategy thoroughly and to translate these things into a powerful driving force so as to bring our revolutionary cause to total victory.

This year the USSR will celebrate its 60th anniversary. Our people send sincere wishes to the fraternal Soviet people that, under the great CPSU leadership, they will score new outstanding achievements in implementing the historic 26th CPSU Congress resolutions to greet their glorious festival.

The Vietnam-Laos-Kampuchea militant solidarity has entered a new stage of development. It has brought about unprecedented changes in the revolutionary situation in the three Indochinese countries. We welcome the Lao People's Democratic Republic -- a stalwart and loyal comrade in arms -- for its outstanding achievements in economic restoration and development along the socialist line and in national defense. We welcome the People's Republic of Kampuchea -- the courageous Kampuchean people's sole, genuine and legal representative -- which has scored great victories in reviving the nation and in the struggle to defend its independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The friendly relations on the state level and among the peoples and the economic, political and cultural cooperation between our country and the two fraternal countries have developed well. Trade has increased with each passing day.

Implementing the treaties of friendship and cooperation between our country and the LPDR and the PRK, our party, state and people have devoted all their efforts to supporting and assisting the two fraternal countries wholeheartedly and in the spirit of proletarian internationalism. Each of our national defense exploits and each of our socialist construction achievements are closely linked to the valuable support of these two fraternal countries. This attachment to one another through love, mutual assistance and by sharing weal and woe has been manifested all the more clearly in life and has deeply imbued the feelings of the people of each country.

The special Vietnam-Laos-Kampuchea relationship is an evolutionary law of the revolution in the three countries. It is a matter of survival for the destiny of the three nations. For generations to come, our people must preserve the pure friendship and the traditional solidarity among the three nations by constantly consolidating and strengthening the special relationship and militant alliance among the three countries and by resolutely defeating all the plots and acts of sabotage, division and aggression of the common enemy -- the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists -- which is colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries. We consider it to be a firm guarantee for the protection of independence and freedom and the success of socialist construction in each of the countries on the Indochina Peninsula. This is a very important factor of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Based on the principle of respect for one another's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and for mutual legitimate benefits, and with equality and mutual confidence in each other, we will constantly devote all our thoughts and efforts to fulfilling our international obligations to the two fraternal countries. At the same time, we will closely cooperate with the two countries and will comprehensively help one another ever more effectively to support the consolidation of national defense and security and the economic and cultural development of each country.

The militant solidarity and fraternal cooperation between our country and other countries in the socialist community has taken a new step of qualitative development since our country became an official member of CEMA. We have received strong support and multifaceted assistance from the fraternal countries. Pursuant to the treaties of friendship and cooperation and the agreements concluded between our country and these fraternal countries, the political, economic, cultural, scientific and technical cooperation has been accomplished with encouraging progress and results.

In the years ahead, we will do our utmost to cooperate with these fraternal countries within the framework of bilateral treaties and agreements, and we will promote the development of these relations of cooperation in the process of coordinating plans and policies among the CEMA member countries.

We warmly support the correct and resolute measures taken by the Polish Military Council of National Salvation to defeat the subversive plots of reactionaries, restore security and order and resolve the economic and social problems of Poland. We vehemently protest the actions of imperialist forces, which have brazenly interfered in Poland's internal affairs in order to impede the process of reviving of socialist Poland. We affirm our unshakable solidarity with the Polish United Workers Party and the fraternal Polish communists and people. We are firmly convinced that the fraternal Polish people will certainly smash all of the reactionary forces, overcome all difficulties and preserve and develop their revolutionary gains. The Polish People's Republic will always remain a firm link in the world socialist system.

Our people resolve to side with the fraternal Cuban people and strongly support the Cuban People's Republic -- an independent and sovereign country, a member of the socialist community and president of the Nonaligned Movement -- which is struggling against the aggressive plots and offensive threats of the U.S. imperialists. The Cuban people, who rose up from a life of slavery, are fluttering aloft the banner of freedom and socialism for the sake of their national independence and their own happiness. They are heroic and indomitable people whom no aggressors can defeat. Hands off Cuba!

Our people unswervingly support the Korean people's just struggle to reunify their country peacefully without foreign interference.

We actively contribute to strengthening the unity of the international communist and workers movements on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism.

Through the victory of historic and epochal significance in the anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation and through the glorious victories in the two recent struggles for national defense and the present stalwart struggle against Chinese expansionism and hegemony, our party has contributed and is actively contributing to the struggle against Maoism to protect the purity of Marxism-Leninism.

Being a nation once oppressed by imperialism and having long struggled against the forces of aggression, our people totally support the struggle of African, Asian and Latin American countries to eliminate all forms of imperialism in the world, gain and protect national independence and build a new world economic order.

The Vietnamese people positively implement the line of developing cooperation between Vietnam and other members of the Nonaligned Movement and contribute to developing the active role of this movement in the struggle against imperialism and colonialism to protect world peace and the independence and sovereignty of all nations. Our people support the positive efforts of the nonaligned countries to turn the Indian Ocean into a zone of peace.

We warmly welcome the initiative of the Mongolian People's Republic concerning the signing of a convention of nonaggression and nonuse of force in the relations among the Asian and Pacific countries.

Our people highly evaluate the great role and increasingly high prestige of India in the Nonaligned Movement as well as its contributions to defending peace and stability in Asia and the world.

We are very elated at the fine development of Vietnam-India relations and are convinced that the friendship and multifaceted cooperation between the two countries will be increasingly consolidated and strengthened.

We resolutely support the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan Government and the fraternal Afghan people -- assisted by the Soviet Union and other socialist countries -- who are struggling against the undeclared war waged by the imperialists and international reactionaries to defend the gains of the April revolution.

Our people resolutely stand by the side of the peoples of Nicaragua and Grenada, who are struggling against the threat of U.S. imperialist aggression. We fully support the valiant struggle of the people of El Salvador against its fascist dictatorship and the U.S. interventionists. We strongly support the peoples of Chile and Guatemala in their struggle against the fascist rulers and U.S. imperialist intervention. We support the people of Panama in their struggle for implementation of sovereignty over the Panama Canal.

We condemn U.S. imperialism for using Israel as a shock trooper against the peoples of various Arab countries and encouraging it to launch barbarous attacks against Lebanon and Iraq, to invade and occupy Jerusalem and to annex the Golan Heights of Syria, thus creating an extremely dangerous situation in the Middle East.

We support any effort aimed at achieving a just and lasting peace in this region, on the basis of Israel's ending its occupation of all captured Arab territories and respecting the inalienable basic national rights of the Palestinian Arab people, whose sole legitimate representative is the PLO, including the right to found a state of their own.

We resolutely support the people and Government of Libya in their persistent struggle against the hostile policy of U.S. imperialism and for the maintenance of their sovereignty and the defense of their national independence.

Our people express profound sympathy with the warm support for the people of Namibia and other nations in southern Africa who are fighting against the domination of the South African racists and for independence, freedom and equality among nationalities.

We strongly condemn the banditlike attacks launched by South Africa against Angola and unreservedly support any measure taken by the latter to duly counter the aggressors.

With deep sympathy our people keenly follow the struggle movement of the working class and laboring people in the developed capitalist countries. For more than a year now, a broad and vigorous mass movement, unprecedented since World War II, has surged in nearly all Western and northern European and North American countries. This movement is against the belligerent and interventionist policy of the Reagan administration, which is stirring up international tension and causing the situation in Europe to become extremely dangerous.

Recent developments in the situation in a number of European countries -- such as France and Greece -- show that the banner of peace, democracy and social progress is capable of rallying the large mass of the working class and laboring people in the struggle to gradually push back state monopolistic capitalism and to achieve victory one by one, thus creating favorable conditions for continuously advancing the revolutionary cause of the peoples in these countries.

Our people hope that in the coming days the struggle movement of the working class and laboring people in the developed capitalist countries will score even greater victories in the struggle for peace, democracy and socialism.

The Vietnamese people advocate a policy of establishing good-neighbor relations with the ASEAN countries, being always ready to cooperate with these countries in coordinating efforts to build Southeast Asia into a zone of peace and stability. The present relations between Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries and the five ASEAN countries, however, are stumbling on the obstacles erected by Beijing and Washington to benefit China's expansionist and hegemonist policy and the U.S. imperialists' interventionist policy toward this region.

The so-called international conference on Kampuchea, which was staged by China and the United States, is a gross interference in the internal affairs of an independent and sovereign country to oppose the revival of the Kampuchean people and is the product of the hostile policy of China and the United States toward the three Indochinese countries.

We hope that for the benefit of their own basic interests and for the sake of peace and security in this region and the world, the ASEAN countries will agree to a dialogue and negotiations to resolve the problems in the relations between the two groups of countries in order to advance toward achieving a Southeast Asian zone of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation.

The Vietnamese people are resolutely struggling to defeat all plots of annexation and aggression which are concocted by the Chinese authorities against our country. Nevertheless, we will always preserve intact our friendly sentiments for the Chinese people and firmly maintain the policy of friendship and good-neighbor relations toward the Chinese people. We advocate the policy of restoring normal relations between the two countries on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence, respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and settlement of contentious matters through negotiation. We have repeatedly proposed the resumption of talks unilaterally suspended by China, but the Chinese side has always rejected our proposals.

The Chinese leaders have unswervingly and frenziedly pursued big-nation expansionism and hegemony. They have not renounced the scheme to put Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea within the sphere of Chinese control, considering the three Indochinese countries their primary target of annexation and aggression on the path of expansion into Southeast Asia. They are making new steps in colluding with the United States in order to implement this strategic scheme. This is the true cause of increasingly tense relations between the two countries. It is at the same time the factor which undermines peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The Chinese rulers must bear full responsibility for the serious consequences of this situation.

We advocate the policy of establishing and expanding the normal relations on the state level and in the economic, cultural and technological fields with all countries regardless of their political and social regimes and on the basis of respect for each other's independence and sovereignty, and of equality and mutual benefits. Such relations have been established between our country and many countries in Western and northern Europe, South America and other regions.

Due to Washington's hostile policy, our relations with the United States cannot be improved.

As a UN member, we maintain relations with many UN-sponsored international organizations.

Our people will always treasure the valuable support and warm feelings which the peoples and governments of friendly countries as well as many international organizations have given us.

We believe that in the future the relations between our country and the aforementioned countries and organizations will be maintained and even further developed for the sake of peace, friendship and cooperation among nations.

Part VI -- To Raise the Party's Fighting Capacity

Dear comrades, ours is a staunch revolutionary party. In the new, difficult and complex fight to transform the old society, build socialism and defend the fatherland, our party continues to enhance its revolutionary and scientific character. The general line of socialist revolution and the line of building a socialist economy laid down by the fourth national congress have been tested by life and proved to be correct. The party's unity and oneness of mind for the sake of the building of socialism, the defense of the fatherland, and a resolute fight against the aggressive schemes of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, have been increasingly consolidated. Through the implementation of the resolution of the fourth national congress, the party organizations and state management bodies have got more experience and new ability in economic and social management. Entering a new fight, the broad masses of party cadres and members have preserved their good revolutionary qualities, and their political standards, cultural, scientific and technological knowledge; and their capacities regarding leadership and management have been raised to some extent.

However, the realities over the past few years have also clearly shown the party's weakness and shortcomings in economic and social leadership, as manifested in deficiencies with regard to the implementation and concretization of the party's lines, in practical organizational capacity, in the style of leadership presenting features not suited to the requirements of the new stage. Qualities and shortcomings in the political leadership of the party are closely linked to the qualities and shortcomings in the work to build it ideologically and organizationally.

We have made efforts to unceasingly enhance the working class character, the vanguard character, the leading ability and fighting capacity of the party, to perfect its organizational system step by step from the central down to grassroots level, and to improve the quality of its cadres and members in combination with the strengthening of the state apparatus and the promoting of the role of the mass organizations. However, slowness in correcting the shortcomings in economic and social leadership and management, along with prolonged defects in the party's ideological and organizational work, especially manifestations of the decrease in revolutionary qualities, fighting will and sense of responsibility among some party cadres and members, including responsible cadres at various levels, in various branches, have reduced the effectiveness of the party organizatons' leadership, greatly hindered the implementation of the resolutions and directives of the party and the laws of the state, and adversely affected the party's prestige among the masses.

At present, the historic tasks incumbent on the party are very heavy. The struggle for the building of socialism and the defense of the socialist fatherland is going on with an acute and complex character. Our people's enemies of all kinds at home and abroad are spearheading their attacks against our party, trying by every means to wreck it ideologically and organizationally. The situation in the party, the historic tasks incumbent on it, the new circumstances of the struggle bring further into the limelight the particular importance of party-building work: It is necessary to bring about at any cost a strong turn for the better in the quality of the party's leadership and in its fighting capacity. The key task in the building of the party now is to continue enhancing its working class and vanguard character, build it into a politically, ideologically and nationally strong party with a view to ensuring a successful implementation of its lines, enhancing its capacity to lead the building of socialism and the defense of the fatherland, ensuring that it constantly maintains its revolutionary and scientific character and remains a really pure party endowed with a high fighting capacity and entertaining close connections with the masses. To this end, it is absolutely necessary to renovate the party-building work.

The raising of the party's leadership capacity and the effectiveness of its leadership now has the following contents: The responsible party and state bodies must have a thorough comprehension of the party's lines, concretize in time the lines and the resolutions of this congress, and on the basis of the party's lines and resolutions, work out correct plans, policies and measures both on the building of socialism and the defense of the fatherland; enhance their practical organizational capabilities, change the inappropriate forms of organization and methods of work, build in all branches and at all levels a mechanism for the party's leadership, people's mastery and state's management; choose and appoint cadres who have good moral qualities and who are equal to the tasks of the new stage, primarily to key leading and managerial posts in important branches and establishments; organize and mobilize the masses into a buoyant revolutionary movement. The raising of the leading capacity as mentioned above must be the overall result of a thorough comprehension of the party's lines, especially the grasping and applying of the laws governing the advance to socialism in our country as reflected therein, the drawing of sound lessons from experiences at home and abroad, a required knowledge of management, science and technology, a scientific method of thinking, and constant responsiveness to the new, a good method of organization to go deep into practice, to get a timely knowledge of the requirements and aspirations of the masses to detect and enhance their creative experience.

The party's leadership must be strengthened in an all-round manner, but special importance must be attached to economic leadership: The entire party must go deep into the economic front, improve the style of leadership over the economy, enhance its capacity and efficiency in leading the economy.

To improve the quality of economic leadership and concretize the party's lines, it is necessary to continue reviewing the economic work over the past period, and bringing out advanced models in agriculture, industry, capital construction, communications and transport, distribution and circulation. From these lessons and practical experiences, we shall work out correct policies, find appropriate specific forms from the organization of labor, the management apparatus to the organization and mode of business operations, and so on. Without detailed research and organization work to achieve the above concrete task it is not possible to translate the party's economic line into reality.

In economic leadership, we must, on the one hand, commend those localities and establishments which have shown great initiative and creativeness in implementing the party's lines and the policies of the Central Committee in keeping with local conditions, and which have managed to lay down correct policies and measures to increase labor productivity and economic effectiveness, develop production, and improve the people's livelihood. It is necessary to encourage those cadres who are responsible to the new and who can consider problems from the new point of view; detect at an early date what has become obsolete in the old policies, forms of organization and management; and know how to care for the young shoots newly arising in life. On the other hand, we should overcome and prevent such deviations as liberalism, parochialism, sectionalism, violation of the principle of democratic centralims, loosening the struggle between the two paths, departure from the party's line of socialist construction and socialist transformation.

While going deep into the tasks of economic and cultural building, transformation and development which are still very new tasks, our party does not relax, even for a minute, the task of consolidating and strengthening national defense, maintaining political security, public order and social safety, a task requiring the party to enhance further its leading capacity and standards.

The party must strengthen and improve its ideological leadership. The basic task of the ideological work is to arm our entire party, people and army with a basic knowledge about scientific socialism, promote a staunch will, a firm determination and the required knowledge to fulfill both strategic tasks: to build socialism and to defend the fatherland.

The ideological work must give our party cadres, party members and people, first and foremost, the principal leading cadres in all branches, localities and establishments a profound comprehension of the general line of socialist revolution and the line of building a socialist economy in the transition period, and a resolve to strive for their implementation consciously, with the highest revolutionary ardor of collective masters. A weak point of the ideological work in the recent period is its failure to equip party cadres and members with the necessary knowledge, give them a thorough grasp of the party's line and policies, and make these lines and policies widely known to the people; to bring about a broad consensus based on full theoretical and practical grounds; to strongly criticize the views at variance with the party's lines, and to give timely answers to the practical and concrete problems which have arisen in the implementation of these lines.

The explanation of the lines does not stop at general views. It is necessary to give demonstrations with scientific arguments and vivid realities, to help everybody clearly and deeply understand the party's lines; to closely link the bringing about of a thorough comprehension of the party's lines to the explaining of the specific policies of the party and state; to explain the present situation of our revolution, affirming the great victories recorded on the national defense front and the achievements on the front of economic construction and cultural development, thereby instilling in everybody enthusiasm and pride at the same time, pointing out the difficulties, clearly analyzing the causes of those encountered in production and life; to severely criticize the shortcomings in leading and managerial work, and clearly indicate the orientations and measures to overcome difficulties. We must make clear that the struggle for socialist construction and socialist transformation is an arduous, complex and protracted class struggle between the two paths and bring everybody to a firm socialist stand in this struggle.

The ideological work must enable everybody to see clearly without the least confusion that the direct and dangerous enemy of our nation is the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists who are colluding with the U.S. imperialists. It must give a clear realization of their aggressive and disruptive schemes and acts against our country, enhance vigilance, secure a thorough grasp of the party's lines, bring about a constant state of combat-readiness and a will to fight in a self-sacrificing spirit to defend the fatherland. It is necessary to enhance the sharpness and organizational coherence of the struggle to rebuff the psychological warfare contentions of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, the imperialists and their agents; to popularize the party's views; and to ensure success at every hour, every minute. To concentrate on criticizing and condemning Chinese expansionism and hegemonism is the main content of our current struggle against Maoism.

The ideological work must be strongly oriented at enhancing the revolutionary qualities of the party cadres and members, combating individualism and opportunism in all forms, and resolutely eliminating manifestations, including political degradation, organizational indiscipline, degradation in the way of life, bureaucratization in the style of work and conservatism in the approach to things. In this question, it is necessary to closely combine ideological education, self-criticism and criticism with organizational measures, increased control, strict enforcement of party discipline; and to combine ideological education within the party with the struggle against negative manifestations in state bodies and in society.

After the fifth national congress, a deep political education drive is to be carried out in the entire party, with the study of congress documents being taken as a source for educating party cadres and members on the party's lines and policies, carrying out serious self-criticism and criticism, criticizing wrong thoughts, enhancing the revolutionary will and sense of responsibility by the communists in the face of the new situation and tasks.

It is necessary to achieve a good organization of scientific-technological and especially economic studies for party cadres, party members and ordinary people, party cadres and members to be educated in a style of economic leadership, characterized by both ardent, diligent revolutionary spirit and practical businesslike considerations of effectiveness and aptitude to detect and turn to account the potential of the country.

In ideological work, it is necessary to enhance combativity, to carry out a deep study, analysis and criticism of manifestations of the petty bourgeois ideology, resolutely to oppose the bourgeois ideology, the leftovers of the neocolonialist culture and the vestiges of the feudal ideology. The struggles against these nonproletarian ideologies must be carried out in an organized way, with various measures, under concrete guidance, and in constant, close connection with the implementation of the tasks of socialist construction and socialist transformation.

The vitality and effectiveness of ideological work lie in its revolutionary and scientific spirit. Propaganda must be truthful: Tell the people the truth, what has been done and what has not, the advantages and difficulties, the achievements and shortcomings. Only through ideological work carried out on a scientific basis, free from subjectivism, onesidedness, superficiality and oversimplification will it be possible to wage a sharp and effective struggle against all erroneous, hostile ideologies.

The mass media must be put to better and more effective use. At the same time, it is necessary to strengthen and improve the political and ideological work carried out on a regular basis by party cells. Every party member, every party cadre is dutybound to explain the party's lines and policies, dispel the misgivings of the masses, expose in time hostile distortions, defend the party's lines, promote and maintain the confidence of the masses in our country's revolutionary cause.

Marxist-Leninist education must be broadened and improved in order to gradually provide our party cadres, party members and people with a scientific world outlook, a revolutionary conception of life, and a systematic knowledge about the new achievements in theoretical work of ours and the fraternal parties, with an eye to active participation in the working out and creative application of the party's lines. It is necessary to carry out an all-round reform of the theoretical and political education work in the schools of the party, the state and the mass organizations with regard to the contents and methods of teaching, and the training of lecturers.

To strengthen the theoretical work and improve the quality of social science research, closely linking them to the study, working out and popularization of the lines and policies of the party and state; to bring into play the role and potential of political science in the education of working people in socialist ideology and in the study of the question of how to improve economic and social management. In the forthcoming period, it is necessary to undertake profound studies on the laws governing the period of transition from small production straight to socialism, on the party's economic strategy for the next 10 years, on the system of socialist collective mastery, on the mechanism of party's leadership, people's mastery and state's management, on party building in the context of a ruling party, on a number of international problems such as the new developments of three revolutionary currents, the present global strategy of the U.S. imperialists, criticism of Maoism and other anticommunist ideologies.

To actively train theoreticians; perfect the institute of Marxism-Leninism, the Nguyen Ai Quoc party school and the existing theoretical institutions; build a number of research institutes; and achieve a close coordination of the scientific research institutions of the party and state in the carrying out of theoretical research programs.

The party must especially strengthen organizational leadership, a decisive link for the successful implementaton of its lines and policies. First and foremost, it is necessary to exercise good leadership over the building and consolidation of the socialist state, because today the party leads the revolution mainly through the state. In the mechanism of the party's leadership, the people's mastery and the state's mangagement, the leading capacity of the party organization is manifested in not relaxing leadership over important questions of lines and policies, while avoiding to get involved in concrete managerial business or to encroach on the powers and responsibilities of state bodies. The party organization in a locality or a grassroots unit should know how to correctly select the affairs belonging to the party's leadership to improve the methods and forms of leadership of the party organization over the state bodies in all branches, at all levels.

The party must devote great efforts to the building of the contingent of party and state cadres; first of all, leading and managerial cadres. The quality of the cadres is a decisive condition for successful leadership. The leading and managerial cadres of the party and state must have good political qualities and their knowledge and capacity for work must be equal to the requirements of the new tasks. On the economic front, the cadres must be able to implement the party's economic line and successfully to carry out the economic and social targets laid down by the fifth congress of the party.

In cadre work, it is necessary to make correct choices and rightly assign key cadres at all levels, in all branches. A cadre must not be given many jobs concurrently; a correct combination must be made of good and capable cadres in different age groups. Young cadres, women and national minority cadres, who are good and capable and who have grown to maturity in the revolutionary movement of the masses should be actively brought into the leading bodies of the party and state. In assessing cadres, we should overcome the tendency to one-sided emphasis either on past work and family background or on academic diplomas and degrees.

The promotion and employment of cadres must go along with their planned training. Recently, we have had a lot of deficiencies in the training of the party's leading cadres at various levels; we have failed to lay down specific qualifications for leading cadres at each level; we have been slow in improving the programs for training leading cadres. Many leading cadres have not been given timely, systematic and good training. With regard to leading cadres of the party, especially the key leading comrades of party committees, the knowledge of political theory and the general knowledge must be turned into a scientific method of thinking, a broad political outlook and the capability of sagaciously and accurately analyzing the facts happening in life, of organizing and running the apparatus, of persuading and mobilizing the masses.

It is urgently necessary to consolidate the existing contingent of cadres; to strengthen the training of leading and managerial cadres; to renovate the contents and methods of teaching and learning in the party schools and the managerial schools of the state; to raise the scientific standards in the study of cadre policy and speedily work out programs of training leading cadres at all levels in all branches, in districts and important economic establishments.

The party must organize good control work, one of its main functions of leadership. In the recent period, control work has not been given due attention, has not been well organized, and has not become a strict regulation. There are party committees which have adopted decisions, then stopped there without organizing and controlling their implementation. As a result, many works have been conducted with delays, correct decisions have not been fully implemented and misconceptions have been slow to be corrected. Now more than ever, it is necessary to strengthen control work and to increase its effectiveness. Control should be exercised over the implementation of the party's lines and policies at all levels, in all branches; over the preservation of the revolutionary qualities and over the activities of the party cadres, party members and employees in the state apparatus. We must defend good, capable and promising cadres; quickly detect new factors; correct deficiencies in time so as to ensure concrete and sagacious leadership at all times.

Pursuant to the guiding principles for party building laid down by the fourth party congress, we have achieved important results in raising the quality of the party membership; strengthening the primary party organizations and consolidating the party's leading apparatus at all levels.

At present, our party has 1,727,784 members, as of 1 December 1981, working in 35,146 primary organizations. In the new development of the revolution, the great majority of party members have clearly shown the revolutionary quality and creative capacity of the communists. On the fighting front to defend the country, maintain political security, public order and social safety; on the front of building, transforming and developing economy, culture, education and science; as well as on the diplomatic front, tens of thousands of party members have set examples of sacrifice and dedication to the fatherland and the people, and fulfilled their duties in an outstanding manner. The political and cultural standards of party members have been raised. Over one million party members have been given a chance to make political and theoretical studies according to various programs. At present, our party has nearly 500,000 members who have graduated from secondary general education school, and over 200,000 members who have graduated from institutions of higher learning or from secondary vocational schools.

However, at a time when the entire party, army and people are staunchly striving for the lofty cause of the fatherland and of socialism, a number of party members have failed to preserve their revolutionary quality, have lost their fighting will, have deserted their duties, and have violated the policies of the party and the laws of the state. Such persons have in fact estranged themselves from the party and the revolution, and have damaged the prestige of the party. Over the past five years, our party has removed from its ranks corrupted, degenerated party members. We are right to remove from the party in this way those persons who do not meet the requirements of party membership. However, in many places where party cards have been issued, not a few party members have not been allowed to receive their cards. There are persons who clearly do not deserve to be party members, but the party branches have not firmly removed them from the party.

With a view to keeping the party's ranks pure, it is necessary after this congress to resolutely bring out of its ranks as soon as possible all opportunists, persons with paralyzed revolutionary will, exploiters, traffickers, speculators, embezzlers, bribe-takers, bullies. Those party members whose political consciousness is too low and who make no progress in education by the party organization are also to be removed from the party. This must be done with great firmness and a high sense of urgency, but under a close guidance of the Secretariat and party committees, in order to guard against misconceptions.

All party committes must base themselves on the requirements regarding the quality and capacity of party members in the new period and strive to raise their quality. Every party member, whatever his or her job, whether as a worker, a public servant, a cooperative member, or an army or security fighter, must have the virtues and capacity of a communist militant.

The virtues and capacity of a party member are now primarily manifested in the spirit of revolutionary offensive, a firm confidence in the victory of the socialist revolution and the cause of defending the fatherland, an unswerving attitude in face of difficulties, a persevering endeavor of every instant to make practical contributions to socialist construction and socialist transformation, to the development of production, the stabilization and gradual improvement of the people's living conditions. On the national defense front, party members must show not only a spirit of valiant fighting on the frontline, but also high vigilance against the Chinese expansionists' and hegemonists' disruptive actions in the political, economic and ideological fields. They must not adopt an indifferent or evasive attitude nor content themselves with enumerating or complaining about negative manifestations; on the contrary, they must take an active part in the struggle between the two paths, the fight against negative manifestations and tendencies to spontaneous capitalism to defend the people's right to mastery, consolidate and strengthen the positions of socialism, and safeguard the purity of the party. Every party member in whatever office must review his or her style of work, get in close touch with the masses, go deep into the mass movement, listen attentively to the views of the masses and accept their creative experiences, constantly show a high sense of discipline and organization, preserve the unity and oneness of mind within the party, oppose wrongful views, defend the truth and the party, maintain a healthy, honest life, and resist the temptations of a luxurious, depraved way of life.

The virtues of party members are also manifested now in a passion for studies, a thirst for knowledge, and strenuous efforts to increase their knowledge of socialism, the party's lines and policies, and the laws of the state, and enhance their expertise in the their current jobs. Conceit, failing to study, wasting time and failing to constantly strive to raise one's standards in all fields also constitute for a party member a serious manifestation of moral degeneration.

The work of educating, steeling and supervising party members must be linked to the revolutionary movement of the masses, the tasks and powers entrusted thereto, the implementation of the party's lines and policies, the observance of the laws of the state, the improvement of the organization and management of enterprises, cooperatives, offices or units. Giving the masses an opportunity to recommend candidates for party membership, to make suggestions on removing from the party those elements not fulfilling the required criteria and to criticize party members and supervise their activities constitutes a very precious lesson in party building. It must be summed up adequately and applied widely on a regular basis in all party organizatons. The enhancing of the activeness and leading effect of party cells and party members cannot be separated from the amending of irrational policies and regulations, of unsuitable managerial organizations. On the other hand, it is necessary to raise the quality of the political education given to party members, renovate the way party cells conduct meetings, and to carry out serious self-criticism and criticism.

In five years, the party has recruited over 370,000 new members, 85.9 percent of whom are members of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union. These are very good young men and women who have been made the subject of the observation of the masses and recommended by them for admission into the party. This class of new party members has rapidly brought into play its action and given the party a new vitality.

Our party's reserves are very abundant. Hundreds of thousands of prominent young workers, collective peasants and socialist intellectuals have unceasingly appeared in the revolutionary movement of the masses. It is necessary to broaden the ranks of the party and to recruit many new, good party members. Attention is to be paid to those places where there are still too few party members, such as the provinces of Nam Bo. More importance is to be attached to the recruitment of party members of worker stock. We should not be narrow-minded and close the door for fear of difficulties. If we carry out good work in recruiting new members and bring into the party prominent elements who are conscious of the party's ideals, and who have been trained and tested, and who furthermore possess political, cultural, scientific and technological knowledge, the quality of the party organization will be raised. We should not lower the standards for party members. The utmost efforts are to be made to prevent opportunist elements from infiltrating into the party.

Over the past few years, the party committees at provincial, municipal and district levels have paid great attention to consolidating the primary organizations of the party, have been in close contact with the grassroots and sent more cadres to the grassroots level. As a result, the number of strong grassroots organizations has been on the increase and that of weak ones, on the decrease. What is cause for rejoicing is the apparition of more and more primary party branches in the countryside and in enterprises, which are very good at leading production, struggle and organization of the people's life, and which have brought into existence outstanding models, having the effect of boosting the general movement in the whole country. However, there are still no small number of primary branches which have failed to improve their leadership and to bring about a revolutionary movement of the masses, and which have been working in a slow, passive manner. There are provincial, municipal and district party committees which are still guiding the grassroots in a constraining, rigid way, and attaching no importance to enhancing the primary branches' initiative, creativity, or their role as masters. On the other hand, there are also provincial and district party committees which fail to supervise closely and on a regular basis the activities of the grassroots. With a view to enhancing the effectiveness of the primary branches' leadership, it is necessary to define a mode of activity for each kind of primary branch; to perfect the system of guidance for primary party organizations to fit with the new situation, actively train secretaries of party committees of primary organizations and cells on the method of leadership.

Special importance is to be attached to the consolidation of party cells; the party cells must do a good job in alloting work to, supervising and steeling each party member, carrying out propaganda and education work with each nonparty individual. To amend the content of the meetings of party cells to conform to the party's position and responsibility of political leadership, it is not allowed to bring down the meetings of party cells to the level of meetings of a mass organization or a production organization. Each party cell must take specific steps to educate and enhance the quality of every party member, to ensure that no party member indulges in corrupt actions, bullies the masses, acts at variance with the party's lines and policies, and violates the laws of the state.

To strengthen the party committees, the leading core of party organizations at all levels, is a very important task of party building. The party committees must be able to work out correct, sagacious decisions, giving correct answers to the problems raised by life. To this end, they must strive to raise their standards in all fields, especially to get a deep insight into economic and cultural questions, and those concerning the organization of the people's life. In addition, they must organize the successful implementation of the policies already laid down. This requires that they raise their organizational capacity, know how to build and run the apparatus, bring into play the managerial effectiveness of the state bodies, and carry out good work in mass mobilization, to improve the forms and methods of work in keeping the increasing requirements of leadership, and to do away with the small producer's thinking and handicraft-like mode of work.

Party committees must have a rational size and composition to ensure an all-round leadership over all sectors of activity. Their composition must be a combination of politically mature cadres and cadres versed in economics, science and technology and having organizational and managerial capabilities. However, party committee members must meet the required standards in moral quality and leading capacity; they must be cadres absolutely loyal to the revolution and the party's lines, quite capable of discussing and deciding policies together with the committee and organizing a good implementation thereof. Party committees must not be turned into coalition bodies. A number of key comrades in party committees must concentrate on party work, ensuring party leadership and control, and undertake no administrative work.

Party committees must care for the building and perfecting of the party apparatus: Choose and assign good and able cadres to strengthen its commissions, put to good use and enhance the capacity and strength of the apparatus. To renovate the method and work regime, first and foremost; to improve the information work of the party with a view to making it possible for its leading bodies to have at all moments a timely and accurate knowledge about the actual situation; to renovate the method of preparing and issuing decisions; and to achieve strict compliance with the regulations about organizing their implementation. Party committees must promote among the cadres a planned, methodical style of work which consists in abiding by the mandatory functions and regulations, showing constant concern for effectiveness.

Since the fourth national congress, in face of the new trial of the revolutionary struggle and the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists' disruptive and divisive schemes and tricks, our entire party, from the Central Committee down to party cells, cadres and ordinary party members, has tightened its ranks, strengthened its unity, and preserved its unity of will and action. The party's unity and oneness of mind have been clearly manifested in the activities of the Central Committee. The correct resolutions and decisions of the Central Committee and the Political Bureau are precisely the product of collective intelligence, of the unity of will and action in the entire party.

The unity and oneness of mind of our party rely on a firm basis, namely, Marxism-Leninism, the party's correct political lines and the principle of democratic centralism in the organization and life of the party. Therefore, to preserve and strengthen the party's unity and oneness of mind, in all branches, all levels, it is necessary to deeply grasp at all times the party's lines and policies, to have a full and accurate appraisal of the actual situation; to make a clear analysis of the qualities and shortcomings in the party's leadership; to promote democracy and highlight discipline to carry out serious self-criticism and criticism in all party committees and cells; and to fight individualism, indifference and irresponsibility.

Our entire party, every party branch, every party cadre and member are resolved to do their utmost to preserve and enhance the tradition of unity and oneness of mind of the Communist Party of Vietnam, to carry into effect President Ho Chi Minh's behest: "Unity is an extremely precious tradition of our party and people. All comrades, from the Central Committee down to the cells, must preserve the unity and oneness of mind in the party as the apple of their eye." We are resolved to enhance our vigilance, to smash all disruptive schemes and tricks of the enemy, to bring about an increasing unanimity of view within the party, to mobilize the strength of our entire party and people in the new fight to successfully carry out the new tasks laid down by this congress.

Dear comrade delegates, The fifth congress is a new milestone in our party's struggle for national independence and socialism, a struggle which is protracted and arduous but also full of exploits. The new period confronts our party and people with tremendous, complicated and heavy tasks. We have full confidence and strength to successfully carry out these tasks.

We have overcome the perplexity which is hard to avoid when entering the new stage. We have made more concrete and rich the revolutionary lines laid down by the party's fourth congress. We have gained a deeper comprehension of our country and people. We have identified the enemy and clearly seen the obstacles on our path. We have gained a more accurate and more concrete appraisal both of our possibilities and strong points and of our difficulties and weaknesses. The lessons of experience drawn from the practice of building socialism and defending the fatherland over the past five years are very useful to us. All this, which we could not have had five years ago, constitute our most valuable revolutionary equipment as we enter the new stage of struggle.

At present, our people's material and moral forces are growing ceaselessly; the revolutionary prospects are bright and good. But there are still many difficulties ahead. The requirements with regard to the people's living conditions, the defense of the country, the building of a material-technological basis for the march forward, are particularly pressing and great.

However, our party has been steeled in the fight against difficulties and has never balked at them. It has all the required strength to overcome all difficulties, and fulfill all revolutionary tasks in the new period.

That is the strength of the traditional unity and oneness of mind within the entire party and the strength of the unshakable unity between the party and people. The resolutions of this congress will surely consolidate further the unity of the party and strengthen further the flesh-and-blood ties between the people and the party.

That is the strength of the international solidarity which has linked and will always closely link our party and people to the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the fraternal Soviet people, the revolutionary vanguard of our times; to the People's Revolutionary Party of Laos and the fraternal Lao people; to the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea and the fraternal Kampuchea people; to the communist and workers' parties and peoples of the other fraternal countries in the socialist community; to all communist and workers' parties and to the three revolutionary currents in the world.

With such a party, such a people, such international relationships, we shall fulfill any task, overcome any difficulty, and defeat any enemy.

To successfully build socialism in a country predominantly of small production, to defeat all schemes and acts of expansionism and hegemonism on the part of the Chinese reactionaries acting in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, to defend national independence and peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia, is a very heavy, yet very glorious mission that history has assigned our people and party. We are resolved to level all difficulties, march forward with enthusiasm and pride, and fulfill our duty to our nation and to the revolutionary cause of the world's peoples.

Under the party's invincible banner let our entire party, people and army eagerly march forward!

Long live the heroic Vietnamese people!

Long live the glorious Communist Party of Vietnam!

The great President Ho Chi Minh lives forever in our cause!

All for the socialist fatherland, for the happiness of the people!

Our lofty cause will triumph!

BRITISH REQUEST FOR ARGENTINE SANCTIONS DENIED

[Text] Tokyo, April 12 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Monday told his British counterpart, Mrs Margaret Thatcher, that his government cannot impose economic sanctions on Argentina as sought by Britain, government sources said.

The Japanese stand was clarified in a message Suzuki sent to Mrs Thatcher, in reply to her request that Japan cooperate with Britain in taking punitive economic measures against Argentina including restrictions on imports and suspension of export credits, the sources said. The message was to be handed to the British Foreign Office by Japanese Ambassador in London Tsuyoshi Hirahara, the sources said. A copy of the message was handed to British Ambassador to Japan Sir Hugh Cortazzi by Kaichiya Kato, director general of the European and Oceanic Affairs Bureau of the Foreign Ministry.

Contents of the Suzuki message were not divulged. But the sources said the message also conveyed to Mrs Thatcher the Japanese desire that the British Government would cooperate with U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig's mediation efforts and that the Falkland dispute should be settled at the United Nations.

Diplomatic observers said that Japan's refusal to go along with the British request was motivated by the fact that Japan has been maintaining friendly relations with both Britian and Argentina and thus cannot take sides with London. At the same time, the observers added, Japan now must refrain from taking action liable to offend Latin American countries prior to Suzuki's planned visit to Latin America scheduled for mid-June.

SAKURAUCHI DISCUSSES DEFENSE OF SEALANES

[Text] Tokyo, April 12 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Monday he takes Japan's defense of sealanes up to 1,000 nautical miles off Japan to be a de facto "public pledge" made by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki to the United States.

Sakurauchi was speaking in answer to a question raised by Taku Yamasaki, a Liberal-Democrat, in a session of the House of Representatives Special Committee on Security Affairs. He said the prime minister's speech referring to Japan's defense of sealanes had weight since it was "made on an important occasion." Suzuki made the speech at a National Press Club meeting in Washington following his summit meeting with U.S. President Ronald Reagan last year.

Sakurauchi's remarks ran counter to Suzuki's recent answer at the House of Councillors Budget Committee that he had never committed himself to Japan's defense of sealanes. He also said Suzuki's speech reiterated Japan's policy on defense and that it was not a question whether the speech constituted a public promise or not.

When Yamazaki questioned about recent changes in international situations after the national defense program outline was worked out in 1976, the foreign minister said he recognized no sharp changes in international situations in these six years.

FISHING TALKS WITH USSR TO OPEN IN MOSCOW 13 APR

[Text] Tokyo, April 9 (KYODO) -- Japan-Soviet negotiations to decide the 1982 catch quotas for salmon caught in the northwestern Pacific will start in Moscow next Tuesday, the Fishery Agency announced Thursday night. The annual negotiations originally were scheduled to start in the Soviet capital on April 7 but was postponed at the request of the Soviet side.

The Fishery Agency plans to conclude this year's talks in time for the start of salmon fishing operations on May 1.

Kiichi Inouye, director of the agency's Oceanic Fishery Department and government delegate to the negotiations, is due to leave Tokyo for Moscow on Monday.

MINISTRY TO RAISE ROK COMMODITY CREDITS OFFER

[Text] Tokyo, April 10 KYODO) -- The Foreign Ministry has decided to add from dollar 0.1 to 0.2 billion in commodity credits to its offer of dollar 4 billion in loans to South Korea in a bid to settle the long-standing dispute between the two countries over aid, ministry sources said Saturday.

The decision marks a shift in Japan's policy of refusing South Korean requests of dollar 2.5 billion in commodity credits as part of a dollar 6 billion aid package requested from Japan. The ministry decided on the move as a result of the strong South Korean stance on the aid issue reported by Toshikazu Maeda, Japanese ambassador to Seoul, now in Japan for consultations, the sources said. The ministry will start coordinating the views of government agencies on the new policy next week.

The ministry now expects Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi to be able to reach a settlement with South Korea on the aid issue when he visits Seoul in May, the sources said.

Maeda will meet Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, Cabinet ministers in charge of economic affairs and ruling Liberal-Democratic Party executives next week to brief them on South Korea's position. However, the sources said they have no confidence South Korea will agree to the new Japanese proposal, which is still far short of the dollar 6 billion aid package demanded by Seoul. There has been some speculation that the aid issue will not be settled until the Versailles summit of the major industrialized democracies in June.

EXCHANGES TO MARK ANNIVERSARY OF PRC RELATIONS

[Text] Tokyo, April 11 (KYODO) -- Japan and China are to conduct a variety of cultural, sports and personal exchange programs in coming months to mark the 10th anniversary of the normalization of Sino-Japanese relations.

With agreements on air traffic and shipping and the peace and friendship treaty signed since the normalization of diplomatic relations in 1972, Japan and China plan to further promote friendly relations, especially on a private level, with increased activities.

Among cultural activities are performances by the Beijing Opera, now underway, and the Shanghai Museum exhibition scheduled for September in Japan. Japanese arts including calligraphy and traditional music and Japanese movies will be introduced to China.

A Chinese table tennis team is expected to come in September to challenge Japanese counterparts, while a Japanese mountaineering party is to attack a 8,611-meter mountain in China in early August.

The Japanese Government plans to support such private-level activities with some yen 70 million (dollar 286,000) earmarked by the Japan Foundation. Government officials expressed the hope that these activities would promote increased understanding among people of both countries.

Aside from these activities, mutual visits of premiers of the two countries are to highlight the 10th year of diplomatic relations. Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang is scheduled to visit Japan in late May and Prime Minister Zenko Suzuko plans a trip to China in September.

VRPR REPORTS ANTI-U.S. LEAFLETS FOUND IN SEOUL

[Text] A great number of anti-U.S. and antigovernment leaflets were scattered on the campuses of Seoul universities in recent days. Denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan clique for suppressing and arresting the patriotic masses under the pretext of the fire incident at the American Cultural Center in Pusan, the leaflets said:

The United States forced the aggressive, slave-like, unequal Korea-U.S. friendship and commercial treaty on us, has occupied our country for 37 years, ruled South Korea and plundered it for a very long period, forced on us continued division and war and stood behind the massacre of people in Kwangju. This proves that the United States is neither our friendly ally nor our friend, that it is a most brutal aggressor and a source of all the misery and pains suffered by our masses.

The fire at the American Cultural Center in Pusan was an explosion of the Korean people's firm will not to endure anymore misery and unhappiness under the enslavement of the United States and their will to remain free. We assert that the United States, admitting that the fire at the American Cultural Center in Pusan was an inevitable result of the U.S. fascist colonial rule of South Korea, should stop suppression of the patriotic masses and cease its colonial rule of South Korea.

Condemning the flunkeyst and treacherous acts of the Chon Tu-hwan clique, which is going to celebrate the centennial of the establishment of the aggressive and slave-like Korea-U.S. friendship and commercial treaty, the leaflets continued: All the events in recent days show that the Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial group is an unprecedented pro-U.S. flunkeyst and treacherous group. The flunkeyst and treacherous Chon Tu-hwan clique should look squarely at the trend and public sentiment and immediately abandon the plans to celebrate the anti-popular, antinational and antihistoric centennial of the establishment of the Korea-U.S. friendship and commercial treaty.

At the same time, the Chon Tu-hwan clique should stop suppressing the patriotic masses under the pretext of the fire incident at the American Cultural Center in Pusan and release all the students and citizens unjustly held.

The leaflets asserted as follows:

1. The U.S. imperialists should leave South Korea right away.
2. The United States should stop intervening in the political affairs of South Korea.
3. The United States should not support Chon Tu-hwan.
4. The United States should not tolerate human rights abuse in South Korea.
5. The flunkeyst and treacherous Chon Tu-hwan clique should step down from power.

NODONG SINMUN HITS CHON MILITARY ACADEMY REMARKS

[Text] Pyongyang, April 11 (KCNA) -- Traitor Chon Tu-hwan showed up at graduation ceremonies of the puppet army, navy and air force academies to raise a hue and cry over the fictitious "threat of southward invasion." Branding this as a fabrication designed to flout public opinion at home and abroad and a habitual outcry for justifying the U.S. troops occupation of South Korea and concealing the sinister plot of his clique for a war of northward invasion, the daily NODONG SINMUN today in a commentary titled "Tricky Row for Getting Out of Fix" says: The cry of traitor Chon Tu-hwan that "national power must be fostered" and "predominance is strength" be attained for "peace and "unification" is nothing but an outcry for maintaining confrontation with us to the bitter end.

It continues: The South Korean puppets are loud-mouthed about "peace" and "unification." But, in actuality, they are stepping up arms buildup, disturbing peace with war rackets and aggravating the situation by inciting North-South confrontation. This is fact. But the Chon Tu-hwan clique are raising outcries over the fictitious "threat of southward invasion," speaking ill of us who are making all sincere efforts for peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification, while keeping mum about their own war provocation manoeuvres. This, indeed, reminds us of the old saying about a thief crying "Stop thief!"

The U.S. imperialists and their South Korean puppets are habitual liars who invent day and night such lies as "southward invasion," "infiltration," and so on, and, when they do not work, invent others, and when they are rejected within, come outside, in an effort to bolster up their colonial fascist rule now in crisis.

The South Korean people know only too well that the Chon Tu-hwan cliques clamour about "southward invasion" and "infiltration" and the like is a sophism aimed at justifying their fascist suppression and concealing their criminal war provocation moves and a foolish artifice to lull the anti-U.S., anti-puppet fighting spirit of the people and whip up North-South confrontation and thereby foster division in a bid to prolong the days of the tottering fascist dictatorial "regime."

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must not run riot but behave itself with discretion, clearly seeing that its policy of anti-communist and "showdown of strength" will lead them to self-destruction.

S. KOREAN REPORT ON PUSAN ARSON SUSPECTS NOTED

[Text] Pyongyang, April 12 (KCNA) -- The fire at the "American Culture Centre" in Pusan in March struck the Chon Tu-hwan clique of flunkeyist-traitors faithful to U.S. imperialism with fear and uneasiness. According to an announcement of the fascist clique, all the participants in the recent anti-U.S. struggle in Pusan are young people embraced in the "Morning Star Society" organized in December last year. The "society" has over 20 members, students of the Koryo Theological College and two other colleges in Pusan.

They valiantly scattered anti-U.S., anti-"government" leaflets in Pusan five times this year before they set fire to the "American Cultural Centre." They greatly encouraged people by boldly hanging placards denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan military hooligans in front of the Tonga University and the window of a tea house in Taechong-dong, Central District, Pusan, on March 2 and 12. In the wake of these struggles, in the daytime of March 18 they, on detailed partial charge, scattered leaflets reading "Let us hold the torch of anti-U.S. struggle by setting fire to the American Cultural Centre," "Yankees, go home" and so on and set fire to the "Cultural Centre," a tool of the U.S. imperialist aggressors for ideological and cultural invasion.

According to the "whole results of investigation" made public by the fascist clique, members of the "Morning Star Society" waged their struggle in close liaison with the anti-fascist forces of all strata and enjoyed their active encouragement.

When a young man named Mun Pu-sik and other members of the "society" were planning the anti-U.S. struggle, Kim Hyong-chang, participant in the Kwangju popular uprising who stayed in Wonju, South Korean Kangwon Province, and other people had relations with them and actively encouraged their struggle.

Kim Hyon-chang told members of the "society" that they should fight, putting up the slogans "Pusan citizens, hold torch of anti-U.S. struggle," "Oppose South Korea-Japan economic cooperation," "Oppose 1988 Olympiad," etc. and widely expose the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist cliques completion of preparations to invade the North.

It is said that Kim Hyon-chang hid himself in Wonju area, not yielding to the frantic suppression by the fascist clique after the Kwangju incident and made anti-U.S., anti-Japanese and anti-fascist explanatory material, vigorously conducting activities to awaken students.

Religionists in Wonju area, too, expressed deep sympathy with the anti-U.S. struggle of students. It was reported that priest Choe Ki-sik, head of the Wonju Catholic parochial school, not only protected those young men hunted for by the puppet police but also provided them with funds.

[Speech by DPRK President Kim Il-song at 10 April banquet for Guinea-Bissau President Joao Bernardo Vieira in Pyongyang -- read by announcer]

[Text] Esteemed Comrade President Joao Bernardo Vieira, guests from Guinea-Bissau and comrades and friends: We joyfully greet Comrade Joao Bernardo Vieira, secretary general of the African Party for Independence of Guinea-Bissau and Cape Verde and president of the Revolutionary Council of the Republic of Guinea-Bissau, who has come to our country with warm friendship and solidarity.

I warmly welcome you as an envoy of friendship who is pioneering a new history in the development of the relations between Korea and Guinea-Bissau. At this first significant meeting with you, we recall the fact that you expressed a firm stand to newly expand and develop the relations between the two nations and your willingness to visit our country immediately after you took the supreme position in the party and in the nation of Guinea-Bissau.

As I heard about the amicable feelings of comrade president toward us, I hoped to have an opportunity of meeting you to deepen the friendship and to exchange views on questions of mutual interest. I wish to express my thanks to the esteemed comrade president for visiting us despite much work as a result of work the implementation of the decisions of the first emergency meeting of your party held last year.

The peoples of our two nations have maintained close relations as amicable friends in the course of the common struggle for the victory of the cause of anti-imperialism and for independence. Ever since the people of Guinea-Bissau waged armed struggle for the nation's independence and freedom, we sincerely supported and encouraged their struggle, considering it as a part of the common cause for anti-imperialism and for independence. We constantly developed the relations as comrades in arms.

Through a long bloody struggle, the courageous people of Guinea-Bissau finally achieved the nation's independence and founded the republic, thus opening up a new era in their history. Today, the struggle to consolidate the party and carry out tasks put forward by the first party emergency meeting is being vigorously waged in Guinea-Bissau in accord with the principle and lines advanced by Amilcar Cabral. The Korean people actively support your just cause and sincerely wish you greater successes in the struggle for its victory.

The leaders of many countries are visiting us on the occasion of my birthday. It is a great pleasure to have an opportunity, during our first meeting, to exchange views on mutual cooperation in achieving the cause of anti-imperialism and of independence. Today, the international situation is very complex. It is of great significance for the leaders of many countries who struggle for sovereignty, independence and socialism to frequently meet with one another, to solidify their common views and to discuss and seek the measures for strengthening the unity among the nonaligned nations and the countries of the Third World.

Our experience shows that the leaders of the developing countries can firmly unite all developing countries based on the lofty idea of anti-imperialism and independence, even though their own situations are different from one another and the steps for implementing the revolutionary tasks are different.

Comrade President, we always trusted the revolutionary comrades and the people from the days we rose in the struggle for the liberation of the fatherland down to present. We gained strength from them and the people indomitably struggled, trusting us. Thanks to the ideological unity and cohesion based on revolutionary principle, we won the brilliant victory in the arduous revolutionary struggle by overcoming all trials and difficulties. We enjoyed lofty support and encouragement from the international friends in the course of the revolutionary struggle. This served as a source of great strength for us.

Comrade President; the party, the government and the people in your country are invariably supporting our people's struggle for national reunification. We deeply thank you for this. We assure you of our more active efforts to strengthen friendship and unity with the people of Guinea-Bissau. We consider that strengthening the friendship and unity between our two nations not only complies with the interests of the peoples of the two nations but also serves as a contribution to strengthening and developing the Nonaligned Movement and intensifying the unity of the world's peace-loving people. Today, I am pleased to have an opportunity to meet comrade president and to deepen our friendship as brothers and comrades comrades in arms.

I now propose a toast to the friendship and unity between the Korean people and the people of Guinea-Bissau; to the development and prosperity of the Republic of Guinea-Bissau; to the unity of the peoples of the Third World; to a long life of the esteemed Comrade President Joao Bernardo Vieira; to the health of the guests from Guinea-Bissau and to the health of all comrades and friends participating in this event.

TEXT OF YUN KI-CHONG BUDGET REPORT TO SPA

[Report by SPA Deputy Yun Ki-chong on fulfillment of 1981 DPRK state budget and on 1982 DPRK state budget at first session of Seventh SPA held in Pyongyang on 5 April -- read by announcer]

[Text] Dear comrade deputies: Today we marked a shining victory in the election of deputies to the Seventh SPA of the DPRK. We will discuss the results of the fulfillment of the 1981 state budget and the 1982 state budget of the DPRK at the historic SPA session being held amid our people's great expectations and concern.

The morning session of the first day of the SPA, reflecting our people's collective will and ardent aspirations, invariably held in high esteem the respected and beloved leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song as the president of the DPRK -- the man who created the immortal chuche idea, achieved the historic cause of the fatherland's liberation by organizing and leading the heroic anti-Japanese armed struggle, established in this land a chuche-type party and a people's revolutionary regime, turned our country into an independent, self-supporting and self-defending socialist power and provided our people a boundlessly rewarding and happy life.

The fact that the session invariably held in high esteem as state president the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has been dedicating himself to the sacred revolutionary cause and has scored immortal achievements on the glorious road traversed by our party and the DPRK, is a manifestation of our people's absolute support for and trust in the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and an expression of our people's unanimous, strong will and burning loyalty to accomplish the revolutionary cause of chuche under the leadership of the great leader.

Through the election of deputies to the Seventh SPA of the DPRK and through the historic SPA, our people vigorously demonstrated their invincible unity and cohesion, rallied around the KWP and the government of the republic led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and consolidated the political foundation of our revolutionary power led by the KWP, opening a bright future for our revolution and republic.

Greeting this auspicious pan-national revolutionary event, the people in the country are teeming with joy and are renewing their determination to struggle for the revolutionary cause of chuche, looking with boundless national pride and revolutionary confidence to the bright future of our fatherland. By more vigorously accelerating the revolutionary struggle and construction work, relying on the revolutionary enthusiasm of the people, we should advance the historic cause of remodelling society on the chuche idea.

By correctly discussing the 1982 state budget and making plans for its execution at the SPA, we should consolidate the financial foundations of the republic and effect new upsurges in socialist construction. Authorized by the government of the republic, I am about to report on the results of the fulfillment of the 1981 state budget and on the 1982 state budget.

On the Results of the Fulfillment of the 1981 State Budget

Dear comrade deputies: 1981 was a year of rewarding struggle in which we began a historic march toward the accomplishment of the grand programs of socialist construction set forth at the historic Sixth KWP Congress. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: By vigorously carrying out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural -- under the uplifted militant banner "Let us make an all-out advance toward implementation of the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress," our heroic working class and people, who are boundlessly loyal to the party and the revolution, made a great advance last year in remodelling society on chuche.

Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, last year our people accelerated the general march for implementation of the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress, achieving a brilliant victory in accomplishing the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule and realizing the new prospective goals of socialist economic construction. By carrying out a vigorous struggle with boundless loyalty to the party and the revolution and revolutionary zeal, our heroic working class and people brought about rapid development in production, erected many monumental creations at places around the country. As a result of new socialist construction and rapid development of the national economy, last year's state budget was carried out with success.

Thanks to the active measures taken by the government of the republic to increase the revenue resources of the state budget, the plan of the state revenue last year was overfulfilled by 1 percent. This means an 8.1-percent rise above the revenue of 1980. Thus, the state budgetary revenue last year reached 20.684 billion won, surpassing the level of 20 billion won. This means that our state revenue has grown at a very high rate of 11 percent every year in the 7 years since 1974 when it surpassed the 10 billion won level.

Today the rapid development of our finances ensures in only 7 hours as much revenue as the amount in 1946, though commodity prices have been systematically reduced almost every year and taxation has been completely abolished.

The state budgetary expenditure last year amounted to 20.333 billion won, 99.3 percent of the plan. This is an increase of 7.9 percent above the 1980 figure. As a result, last year's state budget was successfully fulfilled with a large sum of financial reserves amounting to 351 million won after fully meeting the needs for funds in the first year of the general march for implementation of the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress.

The brilliant achievement scored in the execution of the state budget is a proud fruition brought about by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who provided the firm financial foundation of the country, set forth the unique policy of self-supporting financial construction to solve all financial matters by ourselves and led our people in the struggle to carry out the policy. This shows the justness and vitality of the chuche financial policy of the KWP and the government of the republic which continuously increase revenue resources by mobilizing the creative labor of our people and the internal resources of the country. This manifests the power of our country's self-reliant national economy and the incomparable solidness of an independent financial foundation based on it.

With the successful fulfillment of the state budget, our finances last year positively helped advance socialist economic construction and cultural construction, raising the people's living standards and increasing the defense capabilities of the country.

Last year the government of the republic increased the outlay of funds for the nati nal economy by 9.3 percent above 1980 in order to fulfill the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule and attain the 10 prospective objectives of socialist economic construction along the main direction of the socialist economic construction indicated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

To accelerate the work of making the people's economy chuche-oriented and to solidify the country's power base, a key in placing production on the right track, the government of the republic appropriated a huge sum of funds, an increase of 1.3 times compared with 1980, to the power industry sector. While building large-scale lockgates and medium and small hydraulic power stations to implement the policy for the construction of the chuche-type power industry set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, construction workers in the power industry sector accelerated expansion of the Pukchang thermal powerplant and successfully guaranteed the operation of power generating equipment. They not only increased power-generating capacity but also gained great successes in implementing our party's nature remodelling policy for properly handling water, preventing damage from floods and beautifying the national territory. Last year workers and technicians in the power industry sector increased power production to the maximum and smoothly met the demand of the people's economy for electricity by vigorously struggling to more correctly maintain and augment existing power stations, improve the maintenance of equipment and operate all power-generating equipment to full capacity. Thus, they successfully contributed to an overall upsurge in socialist economic construction.

Last year the government of the republic appropriated 33 percent of its funds for industrial construction to the extraction industry and continued to concentrate on developing the coal and mining industries. Thanks to the government's positive measures and the dedicated labor struggle of workers and technicians in the extraction industry, large collieries and mines, including collieries in the Anju and Tokchon Districts and the Kudok mine, which had large deposits and which were provided with good mining conditions, were reconstructed and expanded on a large scale and the introduction of large, high-speed mining equipment, its modernization and the overall mechanization of pit work were vigorously advanced. Through the positive struggle to strengthen geological survey work to tap prospective mining sites and develop new collieries and mines, a more solid foundation was laid to rapidly increase the production of coal and minerals.

While making efforts to place priority on power and extraction industries and utilize the existing capacity of industrial production to the maximum, the government of the republic appropriated a vast sum of funds for basic construction, an increase of 15 percent compared with 1980, to the industrial construction sector last year.

Last year construction workers in the metal industry sector successfully carried out the project of reconstructing and expanding blast furnace No 2 and the sintering furnace at the Kim Cheak steel mill and that of building the cold rolling workshop of this steel mill. They completed the project of expanding the steel workshop at the Songjin steel mill and introduced steel production equipment and metallurgical methods using our domestic fuel, expanding the country's metallurgical base and strengthening the chuche nature of the metal industry.

To rapidly develop the chemical industry, the government of the republic appropriated a huge sum of funds, an increase of 1.2 times compared with 1980. With vigorous pan-national support, construction workers of the chemical industry sector expedited the expansion of the 7 July chemical plant and brilliantly completed the construction of the sulphuric acid workshop of the Hangnam fertilizer industrial complex. They performed great labor feats by successfully carrying out the project for modernizing the carbide production process at the 8 February vinalon industrial complex and by building the movilon mill, a chuche-type chemical fiber production base, in a short time of 1 year or so.

The establishment of the new chemical fiber production base and the modernization of the carbide production process, which is very important for development of the chemical industry and reinforcement of the material production bases of light industry, are proud monuments that have been created by the warm, fatherly consideration which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had given to upgrade the living standard of our people and to provide more modern and sanitary living conditions.

In addition, last year the expansion projects of the heavy machinery plants, including the hydraulic workshop of the Nagwon machinery plant, the the extractive equipment plants were accelerated; the construction of the 1 August cement plant, a large modern cement production base, and the rolled glass workshop of the Nampo glass plant was successfully completed; and the construction projects of many other modern plants were brilliantly carried out.

Displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle and overcoming all difficulties and obstacles, last year our heroic working class and construction workers built many grand monumental edifices in different parts of the country and completed the construction of 2,470 objects in the industrial sector alone to adorn the first year of the general march with proud success in construction.

Last year the government of the republic also allocated a great amount of state funds for the achievement of the modernization and scientization of the national economy through the acceleration of the technical revolution and the development of scientific work. Upholding the policy of the technical revolution set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our workers, technicians, scientists and three-revolution team members, boundlessly loyal to the party and the revolution, vigorously carried on the mass technical innovation movement. They devised and manufactured many modern machines and equipment of new type and put forward a large number of worthy scientific inventions and innovative proposals conducive to developing the national economy and improving the people's living. As a result, 60,370 inventions and innovation proposals were introduced into production last year in the industrial sector alone and the technical revolution was actively carried out, winning innovative achievements in equipping our industry with new technology and bringing it to a scientifically and technically higher stage.

As a result of the allocation of state funds to the industrial sector and the vigorous promotion of the industrial construction and the technical revolution, last year our industry was perfected, developed and strengthened into a powerful chuche-oriented industry with a solid foundation for a new advance. Uninfluenced by a serious global economic recession, our industry has developed at a rapid pace and reached a new higher stage in terms of production and technology. It is confidently moving toward the great economic targets of the 1980's. This is a shining fruition of the chuche-based line of industrial construction put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and proof of the validity of our party's financial policy of directing the finance of the state preferentially for the development of industry.

Last year a big success was made in agricultural production, too, with the powerful assistance of industry. For continued innovations in agricultural production, last year the government of the republic allocated a huge amount of funds to the rural economy and vigorously forged ahead with the rural technical revolution and construction. Through the devoted labor and struggle of the irrigation construction workers, last year the construction of the large 18 September reservoir and the project of changing the flow of the Potong River, which will supply abundant water to the Yonbaek Plain and the tideland of the west coast which is to be reclaimed, were completed. The construction of other reservoirs and drainage projects was actively pushed ahead. As a result, the irrigation system of the country has been perfected. In addition, through the struggle to acquire new land, which the working people waged in response to the appeal of the party, the areas of cultivated land were further expanded.

With the disbursement of huge state funds, the state sent tractors and various kinds of modern farming machines to the countryside and increased the supply of chemical fertilizers and agricultural medicines last year to make new strides in realizing the comprehensive mechanization and chemicalization of agriculture. With the material and technical foundation of the rural economy, which was being strengthened and expanded with each passing day, the agricultural workers and helpers in the countryside successfully overcome unfavorable weather conditions and farmed in a scientific and technical way, as required by the chuche farming method to reap another bumper harvest last year.

At a time when the world constantly suffers poor harvests because of the influence of the cold front and many countries are plagued by a food crisis, we reap a great bumper harvest every year, achieving self-sufficiency in grain supply with a small area of cultivated land and maintaining a certain level of grain reserves. This is a miracle. All the proud achievements in the agricultural production of our country are a shining fruition of the outstanding and tested leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who put forth theses on the socialist rural affairs of our country and encouraged our agricultural workers and other working people to promote agricultural production. At the same time, they are a powerful manifestation of the agricultural policy of our party. Last year witnessed a new brilliant success in the development of fisheries. In accordance with the great leader's teachings, last year the government of the republic allocated 1.2 times more funds than in the previous year and increased state support for the fishing industry to strengthen its material and technical foundation and to more properly prepare for the winter fishing operations.

With the vigorous support of the nation, the workers of the fishing industry, boundlessly loyal to the party, established a 15- or 20-day ship-repair system to finish the repair and maintenance work before the winter fishing season. They built many new vessels, bolstered the technical facilities of the fishing ports and increased the fish-unloading capacity by 1.6 times more than in the previous year. As a result of vigorous fishing operations, last winter over 330,000 more tons of fish were caught than in the corresponding period the year before. Thus, a heroic exploit of creating an unprecedented miracle in the development of the fishing industry of our country was performed. In addition, over 37,000 square meters of modern fish processing plants were built at the fishing stations on the east coast and other fish processing bases were established to do indoor fish processing in the winter. As a result, an unprecedented innovation was established in fish processing.

As a result of the successful implementation of the economic construction policy of the KWP and the government of the republic, last year the chucheization, modernization and scientization of the national economy were implemented. The self-reliant socialist national economy of our country has been strengthened and developed as a powerful and viable economy relying on its own power, fuel and material bases and able to more properly meet the great material demands of the overall economic construction of the country, its defense construction and the people's living.

In order to defend the security of the country and the gains of the revolution, last year the government of the republic appropriated for national defense 14.8 percent of total state expenditures, thereby creditably ensuring the struggle to implement our party's military line of self-reliance in national defense.

Last year a great success was achieved in the socialist cultural construction and the improvement of the people's living. Last year the state appropriated 7 percent more social and cultural funds than in the previous year.

The government of the republic spent 7.6 per cent more than in 1980 for educational work to thoroughly implement the thesis on socialist education put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. As a result of vigorous construction of schools through a mass movement, over 5,500 classrooms were built, conditions improved and the material and technical foundations for education consolidated.

Last year the Nampo Naval Engineering College, the Tonghae Static Engineering College, the Chongsan Agricultural College and other new colleges were built and the study-while-working higher education system was consolidated along with the full-time regular one. The number of workshops, work teams and sub-work teams receiving higher education under the study-while-working higher education system, following the outstanding model of the workers of the Kumsan pit of the Yongyang mine who study in colleges after having graduated from higher professional schools, upholding the program of intellectualizing society, is increasing with each passing day.

The cultural revolution in our country, which began with the work for eradication of illiteracy after the 1945 liberation, has reached the highest level today by eliminating the difference between spiritual labor and manual labor through the intellectualization of society. All of the people are studying to their hearts' content and becoming intellectuals. Sons and daughters of ordinary workers and peasants have outstandingly grown up as able scientists, technicians, writers and artists and are fully demonstrating their talents. This vividly shows the superiority of the socialist system and the socialist education system in our country provided by the great leader Comrade

Kim Il-song. More theaters, cinemas and houses of culture were set up in towns and rural and fishing villages and many revolutionary literary and art works of high ideological and artistic value were produced last year. As a result, our chuche-oriented literature and art were brought into fuller bloom.

Last year the government of the republic alloted a huge amount of funds for an increase of 8 per cent over the previous year in public health work to protect and improve the health of our people. As a result, medical treatment and preventive organs were expanded and medical services for the people were improved through the implementation of the preventive medical care policy of our party. Thus, the law on the people's health provided by the great leader was enforced.

Last year the government of the republic appropriated a huge amount of funds for an increase of 16 per cent over 1980 to more properly build urban and rural areas and to provide more modern dwellings for the working people. As a result of the great concern of the respected and beloved leader and the labor struggle of construction workers of the capital and their supporters, the Grand People's Study House, a seat of learning of epochal significance in the development of science, technology and culture with a floor space of 100,000 square meters; a modern ice rink covering 25,000 square meters which will greatly contribute to sports development, the Chongnyu Restaurant, Pyongyang No 1 Department Store and other projects were beautifully built in a brief span of time to suit the national will and sentiments.

The Moranbong Stadium took on a new look, showing an unprecedentedly rapid construction speed. One more grand fun fair was built in historic Mangyongdae. The construction of the Munsu Street, as large as a large town, has been successfully accelerated following the completion of the modern Changgwang Street. Last year the KWP and the government of the republic splendidly erected the Tower of the Chuche Idea and the Arch of Triumph as grand monumental edifices in the age of the Workers Party, reflecting the unanimous desire of our people to highly praise the immortal revolutionary idea and revolutionary exploits of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Thanks to the heroic struggle of our construction workers and supporters, many grand monumental edifices have been built at unprecedentedly rapid speed. As a result, Pyongyang City, the capital of the revolution, has changed its appearance.

Last year countless modern dwelling houses were built in towns and rural villages to meet the demand of the working people for housing. More modern cultural and welfare establishments were built in all provinces, cities, counties and workers' districts to enhance the level of the cultural life of the working people. Local construction was actively promoted to make local towns and rural villages more beautiful.

Last year the state disbursed a large sum running into several billion won to successfully ensure communist measures such as the compulsory free education system, the system of nursing and raising children at state expense, the universal free medical service system, the paid leave system, the system of accommodation at health resorts and holiday homes at state expense and the system of supplying food and fuel at state expense.

Thanks to these communist measures taken by the KWP and the government of the republic, our people have become a happy people enjoying an ideal life of future communist society in various fields of social life, though they are now living in a socialist society.

Thanks to the concern of the fatherly leader, our people today are enjoying an independent and creative life to their hearts' content without worry about jobs, food, clothing and housing, children's education, medical treatment and taxes. Thus, our people's happiness is growing with each passing day. The constant improvement of the living standard of our people and its enhancement to today's level under the situation in which the country is divided and the people have to carry out the revolution and construction, confronting the U.S. imperialist aggressors, are a result of the warm love and fatherly concern of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has found infinite joy in the happy life of the people and who has spared no effort to promote the people's welfare. All these great changes in the material and cultural life of our people evince the incomparable superiority of our socialist system, in which the people are the masters of everything, all things in society serve them and the state ensures their material and cultural life, and the genuinely popular character of our socialist economy in which the money earned by the people is spent for their welfare.

Indeed, by staging a heroic struggle, upholding the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, last year our people established a more powerful economic foundation for the prosperity of the fatherland and achieved a new great victory in the fields of enhancing socialist cultural construction and the people's living standards. All the proud achievements our people won in socialist construction and the execution of the state budget last year are a shining fruition of the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who, with outstanding wisdom and scientific insight, illuminated the way to implement the decision of the Sixth KWP Congress and has led our people in carrying out the cause of the chucheization of society.

On the State Budget for 1982

Comrade deputies: Reflecting the urgent demand of our revolution and construction, the state budget for this year was worked out as a mobilizing and correct one to accelerate the socialist construction of our country to the maximum.

The state revenue and expenditure for this are scaled at 22.546 billion won. The state revenue for this year will increase by 9 percent compared to last year, along with the rapid increase in production and increased spending in all fields of the national economy. The state expenditure for this year will increase 10.9 percent over last year on the basis of a rapid increase in state revenue. The government of the republic envisages an 11.5 percent increase over last year in outlays for the national economy to accelerate the chucheization, modernization and scientization of the national economy, make a decisive advance in carrying out the second 7-year plan and lay a solid basis for attaining the new long-range goals of socialist economic construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The most important socialist construction task facing us this year is the nature-remaking work. At the historic fourth plenum of the Sixth KWP Central Committee, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who had brought about a great change similar to the creation of heaven and earth by putting forth and implementing the great nature-remaking work as a strategic task for the construction of a prosperous and powerful fatherland, unfolded a new grand blueprint for carrying out the four major tasks of nature-remaking for the eternal prosperity of our fatherland.

Reclaiming 300,000 hectares of tideland, acquiring 200,000 hectares of new land and constructing the Nampo lock and Taechon power station to solve the problem of water in the reclaimed tideland, unveiled by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, is nature-remaking work to extend the national land and change the fatherland to a more beautiful paradise for the people. They are glorious and rewarding struggles to glorify further the socialist system of our country and expedite the final victory of socialism and national reunification.

When the four major tasks of remaking nature unveiled by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song are fulfilled, new wide and open fields and land will turn up and grand and beautiful locks, large man-made lakes, modern and tidy farm villages and a circular railway along the west coast will come into being. Thus the nation will have a new aspect and the nation's scenery will be more beautiful.

Production of grain, fish and various crops will be epochally increased and the principle of communism to supply food in accordance with demands will be brilliantly realized.

This year the government of the republic will direct several hundreds of million won in the state budget to successfully ensure the battle to carry out the four major tasks of remaking nature of weighty significance in attaining the 10 long-range goals of economic construction in the 1980's and accelerating socialist and communist construction.

The state budget this year will ensure with priority production and supply of various modern machines, facilities and material so that tasks of remaking nature can be vigorously carried out. The state budget will vigorously ensure technical and material support for the four major constructions in all domains of national economy.

All constructors and supporters, who courageously rose in carrying out tasks of remaking nature upholding the great leader's call, will mark brilliant exploits in all construction sites cherishing lofty pride and honor in participating in the rewarding struggle to raise immortal creations for prosperity and development of the fatherland and displaying the spirit of self-reliance and will again vigorously demonstrate our people's heroic spirit.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forward militant tasks to wage vigorously the struggle to fulfill the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule in all domains of national economy. This year the government of the republic will firmly ensure the fulfillment of the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule by normalizing production at a high level in all sectors and accelerating further the chuche-orientation, modernization and scientization of national economy.

It is of great significance in rapidly developing light industry and rural economy and in promoting the people's living to a higher step to hit the chemical targets. This year the government of the republic will increase investments in the chemical industry by 20 percent above last year to implement thoroughly the teachings of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song on directing primary efforts to the struggle for hitting the chemical target.

In the chemical industry this year existing production equipment will be repaired and readjusted to operate at full capacity and, at the same time, nitric ammonium fertilizer, caustic soda and sulfuric acid shops will be built at some chemical factories and medium- and small-size chemical factories actively developed. All workers in the chemical industry sector will increase this year production of consumer goods by registering a new turning point in production of overall chemical goods, including chemical fibers, chemical fertilizer, plastics and various other subsidiary material with vigorous nationwide support. They will also develop the agricultural production system, thus contributing greatly to upgrading the people's living.

This year's state budget envisages a large allocation of funds, 12 percent greater than last year, to the domain of the metal industry in accordance with our party's policy of directing efforts to this industry. Workers in this domain will hasten the reconstruction on an expansion basis of metal factories including the Kim Chaek iron works and the Hwanghae iron works, while directing efforts to the maximum utilization of existing metal production equipment, and complete the construction of a new smeltery at an early date so that production of steel, rolled and various nonferrous metals be markedly raised this year.

Giving priority to the power and mining industries, while normalizing production in the sector of the processing industry, is an important task to which we should adhere this year.

In order to meet fully the rapidly growing need of the national economy for electric power, fuel and raw materials this year, the state envisages disbursement of a colossal amount of funds, 13 percent larger than last year, to the power and mining industries.

The power industry will speed up the construction of hydroelectric power stations including the Wiwon, Namgang and Maekjon locks power plants while using the existing generating facilities to the maximum extent, and continue to go ahead vigorously with the expansion project of the Pukchang thermal power plant to increase markedly the generating capacity.

In order to increase the production of coal and minerals, the mining industry will reconstruct on an expansion basis the big coal and ore mines including coal mines in the Anju District, Sunchon District and Tokchon District and the Musan and Komdok mines and positively push ahead with the development of new promising coal and ore mines with favorable production conditions.

By giving priority to stripping, tunneling and digging mine pits at coal and ore mines and by supplying them with much modern plant machinery, including integrated mining equipment, the state will accelerate making the extraction equipment large-sized and modern and will positively realize the comprehensive mechanization and automation of underground work.

We will have the workers in the power and mining industries, who have been leading in the van in the industries this year, create a big upsurge in production in all sectors of the people's economy by having them more assiduously manage the country's bases of power, fuel and raw materials through exhibiting their high revolutionary zeal and by having them markedly increase the production of electric power, coal and various kinds of minerals.

This year, we will readjust existing machinery plants, supplement those processes which are nonexistent, raise the proportion of the introduction of press forging and stamp forging and start a revolution in welding and (?casting), thus further developing the machine-building industry in accordance with the demands of the technical revolution at a higher stage.

Therefore, by producing and supplying modern plant machinery on a large scale, including mining plant machinery, generating facilities, plant facilities, farm machinery and transportation facilities which are necessary for the realization of comprehensive mechanization and automation, we will further raise the standard of technology and equipment of the people's economy and vigorously accelerate nature-remaking projects.

This year, the chuche-oriented bases of power, fuel and raw materials will be more assiduously managed and heavy industry will be further developed. Thus, the foundation of the country's self-reliant national economy will be further consolidated; our heavy industry will firmly support the rapid development of all sectors in the people's economy and will better serve people in raising their living standard.

Strengthening transportation work is one of the important tasks arising from the socialist economic construction this year.

While repairing and maintaining well the existing rotary presses and effectively utilizing them, the railway transportation sector will increase the production of electric locomotives and freight cars, vigorously push ahead with the new railway construction works on various railway sections and make transportation means modern, (?heavy-duty) and high-speed ones, thus further increasing railway transportation capacity. Along with this, transportation by automobile and ship will be further developed.

By improving the transport organization and command and achieving new innovations in transport work through thoroughly accomplishing the three-point transport policy -- concentrated transport, containerized transport and joint transport -- and the three-fold transport system, the transportation workers will, this year, more smoothly meet the increasing demand for transport from the people's economy.

Endlessly increasing the people's living standard is the constant policy of the KWP and the government of the republic and is one of the basic tasks to which we should firmly adhere in socialist economic construction.

Today economic foundation and production potentials in our country are very enormous. If we utilize them for the nation, we can smoothly meet the demands of the rapidly growing people's livelihood and markedly upgrade their living standard.

This year the government of the republic will devote great efforts to the development of light industry, fisheries and rural economy and will build more houses, thus solving more smoothly the problems of food, clothing and housing.

In order to bring about a new change in the production of mass consumption goods by rapidly developing the light industry, the state will direct much funds to this domain.

All workers in light industry will thoroughly implement the party's policy for parallel development between central industry and local industry for production of mass consumption goods and will increase the quantity and kinds of production of consumer goods by fully mobilizing all reserves and potentials. They will brilliantly implement the great leader's teachings on bringing about a new change in the production of mass consumption goods by vigorously waging the struggle to promote the quality of consumer goods.

Increasing marine products by developing fisheries is an important measure for upgrading the people's living. In the fisheries domain this year existing fishing boats will be speedily made modern and universal, ship-repair bases and fishing-tool production bases firmly built and fish catches further raised.

Along with this, the capacities of existing freezing factories will be used to the maximum and more processing facilities built to freeze, store and process more fish, thus supplying sufficient good-quality fish and processed fish goods to the people in all seasons.

Good farming is one of the most important tasks for upgrading the people's living and accelerating socialist and communist construction. The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song, putting forward a slogan, "Rice is socialism" at an early date, again put forward the slogan, "Rice is communism" in accordance with the demands of the new development of socialist construction in our country. He advanced programmatic tasks for continuously directing great efforts to agricultural development. Contained in the slogan, "Rice is communism" are the lofty intention and profound plan of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who stressed the high place of grain as a most important issue in socialist and communist construction, striving to achieve the principle of communism which stresses work in accordance with individual's capability and supply in accordance with demands of each individual, including the question of food.

The government of the republic will increase the allocation of funds to the agricultural domain by 12 percent above last year so as to thoroughly implement the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's agriculture-first policy and effect a new change in grain production.

A vigorous drive to enlarge further the area under cultivation will be waged and the comprehensive mechanization and chemicalization of agriculture actively promoted this year.

The state, encouraging the maximum utilization of existing agricultural machines and tools, will supply modern agricultural machines and tools, including tractors, threshing machines and (?rice seedling) machines to farms by directing a large amount of state funds and will accelerate the comprehensive mechanization of the rural economy.

The state will increase the supply of chemical fertilizers, dusting powder and agricultural medicines and will actively step up the chemicalization of the rural economy by establishing a scientific fertilizing system.

All agricultural workers and their supporters will bring about a new change in production of grain by upholding the great leader's programmatic teachings and again effect an epoch-making turn in all domains of agricultural production. Thus they will mark this year -- a significant year -- with unprecedentedly rich harvest.

To construct more modern dwelling houses and build towns and villages better this year, the state will spend 9 percent more funds than that of last year.

This year we will accelerate and complete the construction of Munsu Street in Pyongyang and build more multistory residential houses in Nampo and other residential houses and cultural and welfare facilities in cities and rural areas through a mass movement. We will improve the supply of commercial goods to workers with the increase in the production of people's consumer goods; supply subsidiary foods to workers districts, such as mines, collieries and forestry villages; supply many more commercial goods; establish more supply and utility service networks and improve the operation of these networks to afford workers everything needed in their daily life.

Thanks to measures to be taken by the KWP and the government of the republic this year, the living standards of our people will improve and the genuine superiority of our country's socialist system, in which the people are masters of the country and everything in the country serves them, will be shown to make our people's daily life more affluent and civilized.

To accelerate the cultural revolution and meet workers' social and cultural demands, the government of the republic plans to increase social and cultural expenditures by 5 percent compared to last year. To implement theses on socialist education set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and more correctly manage the education system, the government will appropriate 6 percent more education funds than last year. While concentrating on improving the compulsory education system, the education sector will increase the number of freshmen at universities and vocational colleges and strengthen higher education work. This year the government will build thousands of classrooms by forging ahead with the construction of school buildings, correctly maintain school laboratories, produce and smoothly supply school equipment and improve the contents and methods of education to help our new generation study under favorable circumstances to their hearts content and develop into chuche-type communist revolutionaries.

Opening a way for sons and daughters of the compatriots in Japan to receive democratic national education and showing benevolence to them, the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song sent a huge sum of education aid and scholarship funds amounting to 31.512 billion yen in Japanese currency by the end of last year on 72 different occasions. This year, 25 years after the respected and beloved leader sent education aid and scholarship funds to compatriots in Japan during the difficult period of implementing the First 5-Year Plan, the government of the republic will send a vast sum of education aid and scholarship funds to them, conveying the great leader's lofty intent and warm solicitude. The great solicitude shown by the great leader to sons and daughters of the compatriots in Japan will encourage the 700,000 compatriots in Japan and help them develop into reliable workers of chuche Korea and true inheritors of a patriotic cause.

This year the government of the republic will develop scientific research work, literature, public health and sports to meet the practical requirements for socialist construction in our country, which has entered a new, higher stage, by increasing the appropriation of funds to the scientific, cultural, public health and sports sectors, by solidifying the scientific research base, by supplying modern experimental equipment and research tools and by correctly providing cultural, public health and sports facilities.

In addition, in the state budget for this year is envisaged a colossal appropriation of funds to more correctly implement various communist policies for the benefit of our people. Thanks to all these popular policies which the KWP and the government of the republic envisage, this year our people will receive more benefits from the government. Their material and cultural rewards will increase.

This year the government of the republic will appropriate 14.5 percent of the total state budgetary expenditure to national defense to firmly defend the socialist fatherland and safeguard the people's security.

The state budget for this year, which has been submitted to this meeting for review, is an independent one for economic construction, firmly guaranteeing financially the successful implementation of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's policy for socialist economic construction by tapping the country's internal resources. This budget is a truly popular budget correctly reflecting all policy measures for improving the people's living standards.

The task of successfully executing the state budget for 1982: Comrade deputies, our people are assigned the militant task of more vigorously accelerating an all-out advance movement to complete the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule and to achieve the new, magnificent goal for socialist economic construction by implementing this year's national economic plan and state budget. The struggle to successfully implement this year's national economic plan and state budget is a glorious one to accelerate the work of imbuing society with the chuche idea and make this year the most brilliant year in the history of the revolutionary struggle of our people.

All workers should successfully implement the national economic plan and state budget for this year by enacting a great upsurge in all sectors of socialist construction with ardent loyalty to the party and the revolution and a militant spirit. To enact a new innovation and advance in socialist construction, we should more vigorously carry out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural -- unfolded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The ideological, technical and cultural revolutions are a strategic task which the party of the working class in power should firmly grasp since it has embarked on the road of building a new society.

The three revolutions are a basic method for imbuing society with the chuche idea. Vigorously forging ahead with the three revolutions is a key to completing this year's militant task and the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule. By placing priority on the ideological revolution, we should above all establish a chuche-oriented ideological system in society.

The chuche idea -- the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great revolutionary ideology -- is the invincible, ever-victorious revolutionary banner of our party and people. All our functionaries and workers should prepare themselves as chuche-type communist revolutionaries who firmly arm themselves with the immortal chuche idea, staunchly believe in this idea, think and act at any place and any time in accordance with the requirements of the chuche idea and struggle to win the ultimate victory of the chuche idea.

All functionaries and workers should become honor-guard-unit and shock-brigade members who firmly arm themselves with the immortal revolutionary tradition developed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle period, show loyalty to the party and the leader under any adverse circumstances by learning from the endless loyalty to the leader and the revolutionary cause and the indomitable revolutionary spirit displayed by the young communists and devote themselves to the chuche revolutionary cause developed by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

All functionaries and workers should display the revolutionary spirit of implementing the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's instructions and our party's policies -- the materialization of these instructions -- based on the principle of absolutely and unconditionally following these instructions and policies. They should fully display endless loyalty to the party and the leader by thoroughly implementing our party's lines and policies.

All our guidance functionaries and workers should regard the great leader's idea on socialist financial management and our party's financial policy -- the materialization of this idea -- as the sole guidelines and absolute criterion in financial management and implement this idea and policy by evincing an indomitable fighting spirit.

We should effect new upsurges in all fronts of socialist construction by vigorously advancing the technological and cultural revolutions, while giving priority to the ideological revolution. It is the consistent policy of our party to assiduously manage all economic activities of the country by vigorously staging a struggle for a production increase and economizing in all sectors and units of the national economy. This is also important in successfully executing this year's national economic plan and state budget.

As taught by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, ensuring financial income through a vigorous campaign for production increase and economizing is a principle of socialist financial management. Only when we effectively utilize economic assets already available and vigorously wage a struggle for a production increase and economizing can we increase the internal stockpiles of the national economy, accelerate economic construction and promote the people's living standard.

Upholding the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we should eliminate waste in all sectors of the national economy, mobilize all available reserves and vigorously stage a struggle for a production increase and economizing on a massive scale. All sectors and units of the national economy above all should establish a routine repair and maintenance system of facilities, properly plan and organize production organizations, operate available facilities at full capacity and utilize all production capabilities already available. Along with this, upholding the party's militant slogan for the conservation struggle, we should economize on electricity, fuel, raw materials and materials to the maximum and, at the same time, vigorously wage a massive struggle to sparingly use each gram of coal, each watt of electricity, each piece of iron, each handful of cement and piece of wood.

We should scientifically establish and observe the norm of consumption of all materials, wage a struggle to lower it in a systematic way and properly and assiduously maintain and manage materials. By doing so, we should see to it that all valuable materials and assets of the country are effectively utilized in developing the national economy and promoting the people's welfare.

The conservation struggle is a struggle to lower the price of products through the proper management of the activities of enterprises. Therefore, all working people should recognize that lowering the cost of products is the source of increasing the internal stockpiles of the national economy, a factor in lowering prices of commodities and a condition promoting the people's material and cultural living standard, and should vigorously wage a struggle to lower the cost of products.

By doing so, this year all working people should lower the price of products by 4.1 percent and more in the industrial sector and by 5.3 percent and more in the capital construction sector. In order to successfully execute this year's state budget, the independent economic accounting system and the local budgetary system should be properly enforced, and mass control should be strengthened by enhancing the function and role of socialist finance.

Today's reality, in which socialist construction has entered a higher stage and a new brilliant prospect is unfolding before our people, demands that through the enhancement of the function and role of socialist finance, our finance should more actively contribute to constantly improving the activities of plants and enterprises, to systematically increasing the state stockpiles and to firmly ensuring great speed in the development of the economy.

Above all we should enhance the function and role of socialist finance for the correct enforcement of the independent economic accounting system. By doing so, we should see to it that plants and enterprises properly conduct their economic management activities.

The independent economic accounting system provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a unique management method of socialist state-run enterprises which makes it possible to properly maintain the relative management independence of enterprises and correctly combine the political and moral incentive and the material incentive in the management of enterprises, while maintaining the principle of state planning and management in conformity with the essence of socialist society and its character. It is also a powerful means which makes it possible to increase state stockpiles and accelerate socialist economic construction.

By recognizing the importance of the independent economic accounting system in socialist economic construction, all functionaries should manage enterprises in accordance with the unitary planning of the state and correctly utilize the morphological function of the law of value in their management activities. They should enhance the creative zeal of the production masses by correctly combining the political and moral incentive and the material incentive, thus rationally managing plants and enterprises.

In order to rapidly develop the local economy and culture, to enrich the material and cultural life of the people and to more vigorously accelerate socialist construction, the local budgetary system should be constantly strengthened. The local budgetary system provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the superior socialist budgetary system which makes it possible for the local organs of power to manage local economic activities independently in a responsible manner, mobilizing all locally available raw material resources.

Thanks to the superiority and the great vitality of the local budgetary system provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the function and role of the local organs of power have been incomparably strengthened in managing local activities. As a result, today all provinces have been able to match the revenue and expenditure of their budgets, and all cities and counties have been able to ensure expenditures with their own revenues.

All local functionaries should ensure that all local plants normalize production at a high level by improving the guidance and management of local industries and firmly building local raw material bases. At the same time, they should properly establish public food supply networks and service facilities and improve their management. By doing so, they should increase the revenue of local budgets while actively administering the people's daily conveniences and more rapidly develop the local economy and culture.

In order to successfully execute this year's state budget, finance management and control should be strengthened and finance discipline be strictly established. An important task arising in strengthening finance management and control and in establishing finance discipline is to thoroughly observe the principle of the unitary management system in finance management. All functionaries and working people should strictly observe the principle of the unitary management system in the finance management provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. All plants and enterprises in all sectors of the national economy should strictly observe the discipline of finance and follow finance control.

All management functionaries of plants and enterprises should bear a high sense of responsibility in executing the state budget and should improve the management of enterprises so they can correctly execute the state budget and make efforts to ensure more benefits for the state.

Along with this, they should thoroughly eliminate violations of the finance discipline and waste of the state finance by conducting both the state and local financial inspections on a regular basis.

An important method of strengthening finance management and control at the present time is to conduct a substantive financial summing-up in all units. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has opened a road of revolutionary turn in financial management by brilliantly embodying the revolutionary mass line in the field of financial management, setting forth a unique financial summing-up policy and establishing an orderly financial summing-up system in all units, ranging from workshops and work teams of enterprises to committees and ministries. All state organs, enterprises and cooperative organizations should see to it that functionaries and working people have a correct view of the financial summing-up, conduct the financial summing-up daily, weekly, biweekly, monthly and quarterly without fail and in a substantial manner and demonstrate the superiority of the financial summing-up system.

All functionaries at the financial and bank organs should possess high awareness of being masters of state economic activities, make all efforts to increase the revenue of the state budget further and strengthen mass control so that organs and enterprises can overfulfill the national economic plan and accelerate socialist economic construction by spending state funds correctly.

For the successful execution of the state budget for this year and for a new upsurge in the socialist economic construction, the Taean work system must be more thoroughly implemented and the superiority of the new industrial guidance system fully displayed. The Taean work system established by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a powerful tool for economic management which should be firmly adhered to in the course of socialist and communist construction. At the same time, it is a firm guarantee for the acceleration of the historic grand march of our people. The Third Plenum of the Sixth KWP Central Committee, which summed up the achievements won in the implementation of the Taean work system and improvement of plant management, has shown us that the great Taean work system is the best form of socialist and communist economic management and that its thorough implementation can guarantee continued advances in the overall economic guidance and management.

Our functionaries must plan the industrial management more meticulously in accordance with the requirements of the great Taean work system and responsibly conduct the economic guidance work. By so doing, they must enact an even greater upsurge in production and construction.

The sectors and units of the national economy must intensify party and political guidance over the economic management in accordance with the Taean work system and implement the mass line. By so doing, they must fully mobilize the revolutionary zeal of the production workers to successfully accomplish the given revolutionary mission.

At the same time, in accord with the requirements of the Taean work system they must establish a unified and intensive production guidance system, more properly implement the system of unified and detailed planning and more meticulously plan the facility, equipment, manpower and financial management. By so doing, they must conduct the economic management and operation in a scientific and rational way.

What is important in the implementation of the Taean work system is to display the superiority of the new industrial guidance system. Based on his scientific insight into the requirements of the socialist economic construction, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song established provincial economic guidance committees last year to ensure that guidance is rendered over the industry in accordance with the prevailing situation. Thus, he has taken the epochal step of establishing a unique industrial guidance system under which the provincial economic guidance committees exercise jurisdiction over the industry of each province under the unitary guidance of the central government and the unified state plan.

The new industrial guidance system established by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a most superior industrial guidance system of our own style which helps in the implementation of the Taean work system by intensifying party and political guidance over the industry and correctly meshing the unified guidance of the central government with the creativity of the local government.

In accordance with the requirements of the new industrial guidance system, we must see to it that the provincial economic guidance committees are fully aware of the situation of their plants and enterprises and establish a complete system to assume responsibility for and exercise unified control over overall plant management and operations ranging from the planning work to facility management, material supply, manpower management, cost analysis and financial reviews. At the same time, we must enhance the function and role of the state economic guidance organizations. By so doing, we must enact a new turn in the socialist economic management and economic construction.

To fully display the superiority of the new industrial guidance system, the working method of the functionaries must be improved in accordance with the requirements of the new system. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song created a chuche-oriented theory of leadership and has brilliantly implemented it in the course of victoriously leading the Korean revolution for more than half a century. By so doing, he has set a great model of revolutionary leadership.

The working method of the great leader is a chuche-oriented and revolutionary one calling for the guidance functionaries to go deep among the people -- the first-line handlers of the revolution and construction -- share bitter and sweet with them and ensure the people maintain their stand as the masters of the revolution and construction and properly play the role of masters.

We must remember that the mobilization of the boundless creativity of the people guarantees victory in the revolution and upsurges in socialist construction.

At the same time, we must study and learn the chuche-oriented leadership theory and the revolutionary work method of the respected and beloved leader and consider it an inviolable principle to work in accordance with its requirements. The functionaries must go down to plants and enterprises to live with production workers, give priority to political work among them, turn economic guidance into work with the people and actively mobilize the revolutionary zeal and creative wisdom of the people. By so doing, they must encourage them to even greater upsurges and collective innovations.

Comrade deputies, under the wise leadership of the great leader of the revolution Comrade Kim Il-song, our people have always been victorious along the road of carrying out the glorious chuche revolutionary cause.

Soaring high in the skies is the revolutionary spirit of our people who are speeding the advance toward socialism and communism under the banner of the chucheization of society. The future of our revolution is endlessly bright.

Nothing can stop the grand march of our people, who are vigorously moving forward to the heights of socialism and communism under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the banner of the KWP. We will certainly succeed in the execution of the national economic plan and state budget for this year.

Let us all firmly rally around the KWP Central Committee headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the government of the republic and vigorously struggle for the final victory of socialism, the independent reunification of the fatherland and the achievement of the cause of the chucheization of society.

PRESIDENT CHON CALLS FOR PEACE THROUGH STRENGTH

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan called strongly for the establishment of an impenetrable defense posture to discourage the enemy from infiltrating into territorial waters yesterday, pointing out that the significance of the sea was increasing these days more than before in the military field.

"A reason that many countries are engaging in the sharpest-ever competition to maintain naval supremacy lies herein," he said. He said that the mission of the naval forces to frustrate North Korea's never-ending infiltration on the sea was as important as defending the truce line.

In an address during the 36th commencement ceremony at the Korea Naval Academy, which was held in Chinhae, Kyongsang-namdo, the chief executive said, "The significance of the sea in terms of economy also has increased more and more as a result of ever-increasing demand for marine transportation to meet the expansion of trade worldwide." He said that the formation of national strength would be determined by the accumulation of a steady and modernized political capability, simultaneously with solid economic and military power enough to restrain war, based on national consensus.

"If efforts for the cultivation of national strength continue more vigorously, the gap between the South and North in national strength will widen," he said. He went on, "It is my firm belief that the North Korean communists will be compelled to give up their adventurism and confrontation scheme in the long run when the difference of power between the South and North becomes outstanding."

Noting that Pyongyang had refused to accept various peace formulas, including the Jan. 22 overture he had proposed this year, President Chon said that North Korea had perpetrated various provocative acts against the South since the armistice and even at this moment, it was making desperate efforts for war preparations.

"Under these circumstances, peace cannot be realized in this land only with one-sided will and efforts for it. Accordingly, I believe that only strength will guarantee peace," he added. He then stressed the need for the cultivation of national strength essential to materialize peaceful unification through dialogue.

MINISTER VIEWS ANTITERRORIST FORCES, PUSAN ARSON

[Text] Home Minister So Chong-hwa revealed yesterday that the police had organized anti-terrorism task forces to counter the new style of crime by possible city guerrillas strengthening their strategic posture inland. Answering questions by lawmakers in a meeting of the National Assembly Home Affairs Committee, he said that the task forces were undergoing rigorous training, including field firing at night.

He said that North Korea was propagandizing through its mass media that the arson at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan was a patriotic act for anti-Americanism and anti-imperialism, instigating a second and third arson. He also said that violations of the law committed under the color of academic study in the course of studying ideology would not be tolerated.

Earlier in the session, the minister said that the arson at the American Cultural Center was premeditated and organized communist-style terrorism, committed by left-leaning ideological circles on campuses at the instigation of impure elements. In a report on the arson case, he said that the suspected arsonists aligned themselves with the North Korean line, which aimed, among other things, at alienating Korea from the United States.

He said flatly that religious circles could neither be the sanctuary of criminals nor any clergymen be given immunity from responsibility. "Therefore, the churches can be sanctuaries only within the bounds of religious conscience such as confession before priests," he added.

Further Report

[Text] Seoul, April 10 (YONHAP) -- Home Affairs Minister So Chong-hwa, commenting on Thursday's arrest of a Catholic priest in connection with the recent arson at Pusan's American Cultural Center, has made it clear that the church should operate within the boundaries of the nation's constitution.

In an appearance before the National Assembly Home Affairs Committee Friday, So said he believed that the arrest or investigation of Catholic priests in the police probe of the March 18 fire would not be seen as a confrontation between the state and the church. He added, "I hope that the church will pursue its development within the boundaries of the nation's laws."

Rev. Choe Ki-sik, 39, was formally placed under arrest Thursday on charges of harboring suspects in the case. A dozen other priests were also questioned about the fire, which claimed the life of a Korean college student and injured three others.

In separate testimony before the assembly committee, An Ung-mo, director of the National Police Headquarters, said that police have found no link between North Korean authorities and Kim Hyun-chang, who was arrested Thursday on charges of plotting the fire.

COMMUNIQUE ISSUED ON VISIT BY HUNGARY'S PUJA

[Text] Phnom Penh, 9 Apr (SPK) -- A joint communique issued in Phnom Penh today at the end of a 4-day visit to Kampuchea by Hungarian Foreign Minister Frigyes Puja, member of the Hungarian Socialist Workers Party [MSZMP] Central Committee, reveals that the ministers of foreign affairs of the two countries were unanimous in considering that the principal cause of tension in Southeast Asia is the expansionist-hegemonist policy of the Beijing rulers in collusion with U.S. imperialism.

During the talks he had with his Hungarian counterpart, Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs of the PRK, laid emphasis on the urgent need of the countries in the region to cooperate in easing the climate of tension in Southeast Asia on the basis of the proposals made by the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries, and clarified that the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea does not threaten the security of any other state. It is the result of mutual agreement between the governments of the PRK and the SRV to cope with the menace of Beijing expansionism-hegemonism. When this menace disappears, the PRK and the SRV will agree on the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea.

The Hungarian minister expressed his support for the realistic initiatives full of good will made by the three Indochinese countries during their fifth conference in Vientiane. He added that these initiatives constitute the sole means for turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability and cooperation.

The two ministers rejoiced over the victories won by the fraternal Vietnamese people in checking the acts of aggression of the Beijing expansionists-hegemonists, in rebuilding their country and in accomplishing their internationalist obligation. They hailed the revolutionary achievements of the Lao people in the construction of socialism and the defense of their country.

Examining the problems of Europe, the two ministers were deeply concerned about growing tension in the continent, the consequences of which are harmful to mankind. They hope that the Madrid meeting on security and cooperation in Europe will be crowned with success and that it will help implement the Helsinki spirit.

The two ministers noted that the failure of the latest Soviet-U.S. meeting in Geneva is due to the fact that the United States, with its warlike policy, does not take seriously the discussion of realistic problems and interferes in the internal affairs of Poland.

They energetically supported the effective and timely measures taken by the Polish People's Republic to bring an end to the destructive activities of the reactionaries who seek by all means to destroy the revolutionary gains of the Polish people.

The two sides vehemently condemned the warlike and confrontationist policy presently pursued by the Reagan administration aimed at reviving the cold war, ensuring military supremacy and setting off a nuclear war.

They heartily acclaimed the peace initiatives of the Soviet Union at the 26th CPSU Congress and at the 36th session of the UN General Assembly and the initiative put in concrete form by Comrade Leonid I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU, during his visit to Bonn, and resolutely supported the efforts made by the Soviet Union for the reduction of medium-range nuclear arms in Europe and for improving the world situation.

The two ministers unmasked the recent perfidious maneuvers of the reactionary ruling circles of the United States on the use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea, Laos, and Afghanistan, maneuvers which serve only to divert public opinion from the massive production of this kind of weapon in the United States -- an activity which is being widely encouraged by Reagan.

The two ministers also examined the problems in other regions. They were unanimous in noting that the tension which prevails in the Caribbean, Central America, the Middle East, the Indian Ocean and southern Africa is caused by U.S. imperialism. They expressed firm support for the just struggle of the peoples of these regions against the interventionist menace, dictatorship, colonialism, neocolonialism, racism, Zionism and apartheid for national independence, democracy and social progress.

Regarding their own countries, the two ministers expressed unshakable confidence that the relations of friendship and close all-sided cooperation between the PRK and the Hungarian People's Republic, founded on the principles of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, will continue to strengthen and develop in the spirit of the Hungarian-Kampuchean joint declaration signed in Budapest on 27 November 1980.

The two ministers briefed each other on the results of the construction tasks in their respective countries in the implementation of the resolutions of the latest congress of their respective parties.

On behalf of the party and government, the minister of foreign affairs of the PRK expressed his gratitude to the MSZMP and the Hungarian Government and people for the fraternal aid and support they brought to the PRK in its hard times of struggle against famine and against the perfidious maneuvers of the Beijing expansionist-hegemonists, the U.S. imperialists and international reactionaries in order to normalize the lives of the Kampuchean people.

The gratitude of the Kampuchean people and the achievements accomplished during the past 3 years, he said, are due to the concerted efforts of fraternal socialist countries and other international organizations, first of all, Vietnam, Laos and the Soviet Union.

The Hungarian ministers hailed the achievements and great successes won by the Kampuchean people during the past 3 years.

The achievements reflect a stinging defeat for the Beijing expansionist-hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries in their perfidious maneuvers to create a hotbed of war and tension in Southeast Asia, he stressed.

He regarded the UN resolutions on the maintenance of the Kampuchean seat in favor of the Pol Pot criminals and on the so-called Kampuchean question as an unjust act which tarnishes the prestige of this organ and vindicates the genocidal crimes of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang which were unheard of in the history of humankind.

The Council of Ministers of the PRK, elected by the National Assembly in conformity with the constitution, is the sole representative of the Kampuchean people, he reaffirmed.

The talks proceeded in an atmosphere of cordiality, mutual understanding and resulted in a complete unanimity of views.

Frigyes Puja expressed his gratitude for the warm welcome accorded him during his stay in the PRK and invited Hun Sen to pay a friendly visit to the Hungarian Peoples Republic at a convenient date. The invitation was accepted with gratitude, the communique stressed.

AFP: KPNFL SAYS SON SANN TO PROPOSE SUMMIT

NC111142 Paris AFP in English 1107 GMT 11 Apr 82

[Text] Paris, 11 Apr (AFP) -- Cambodian anti-communist leader Son Sann -- a former prime minister of Prince Norodom Sihanouk -- is about to propose a summit of the three movements opposed to the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia, his Paris-based Khmer People's National Liberation Front announced today.

A spokesman for the group said Mr Son Sann, who is currently in a part of Cambodia that is controlled by his forces, would make a statement on the subject after consulting "the people and friendly government." The statement in Paris today came in response to a suggestion made in Bangkok by Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila for a new conference of the three Cambodian resistance movements: Mr Son Sann, the Khmer Rouge who still represent Cambodia in the United Nations, and the National Liberation Movement of Prince Sihanouk.

In a telegramme yesterday to AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE in Beijing, Prince Sihanouk, who is now visting Pyongyang, North Korea, said he supported the idea of a summit in China, North Korea or a member country of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations: Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore or the Philippines.

The Khmer Rouge have not yet reacted to the summit proposal.

Mr Son Sann's group stressed here that if the summit were held it would be "convened at the initiative of Mr Son Sann and nobody else."

Prince Sihanouk recently met the Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan in Beijing, but Mr Son Sann refused to take part in the talks. He subsequently made clear that he rejected an agreement concluded by the prince and Mr Khieu Samphan, leader of the Khmer Rouge, especially regarding the legal status of Democratic Kampuchea -- the Khmer Rouge regime that was toppled in 1979 by the present Vietnamese-backed regime of Heng Samrin.

Mr Son Sann has opposed the Khmer Rouge, which he has said was responsible for thousands of deaths while it was in power.

U.S. OFFICIAL DENOUNCES USSR ON TOXIC CHEMICALS

BK111225 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 10 Apr 82

[Text] Gary Crocker, a high-ranking official of the U.S. State Department, gave a press conference in Bangkok on 8 April. He denounced the Soviet Union, which has been accused -- together with Vietnam -- of using toxic chemical weapons to kill the Kampuchean, Lao and Afghan peoples, for interfering in and impairing the UN investigation team's work to probe the use of toxic chemical weapons by the Soviet Union and Vietnam.

He stressed: (Ustinov), a Soviet national who was the deputy secretary general of the United Nations and his two assistants from East European countries undermined the world of the UN investigation team. This is why this UN team did not investigate the areas affected by the Soviet-Vietnamese toxic chemical weapons, particularly in Kampuchea, despite the fact that the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampchean Government were ready to give cooperation.

COMMENTARY URGES DEFENDING COUNTRY AGAINST PRC

[Unattributed editorial: "Let Us Hold Aloft Our Glorious Just Cause in the Task of Defending and Safeguarding Our Country"]

[Text] After scoring victory in the arduous national liberation struggle through the great sacrifices of our army and people against the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen, the Lao people have no other aspirations but to live in peace with genuine independence and freedom in order to build our own country. Nevertheless, the Beijing ruling clique in collusion with the U.S. imperialists have stepped up the implementation of their big-nation expansionism and hegemonism. They have frenziedly implemented a hostile policy against our country by using ultrarightist Thai reactionary lackeys and exiled Lao reactionaries to carry out provocative acts along the border areas and to create distrubances in some localities in our country. They have deployed their troops to openly commit provocations and violations against the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Laos. For example, between 18 and 20 March 1982, they sent a company of Chinese troops to attack Lao security forces stationed at Ban Houai Vai Village, Bokat Canton, Samphan District, Phong Saly Province, and penetrated 9 km into Lao territory. One Lao security official was wounded in the attack by the Chinese troops. In addition the Chinese reactionary ruling clique continues to implement their dark scheme of waging a war of destruction against us in various fields and making preparations to invade our country. On the military front they have mustered a large number of troops along the northern Lao border to threaten, provoke and nibble at our territory, and have smuggled spies into Laos to carry out sabotage activities and disturbances among our people.

The prevailing situation along the border clearly indicates that defending and safeguarding our country is the duty and the glorious and just task of the entire party, army and masses. Our army and people must profoundly understand the true reactionary nature of the enemies, constantly heighten revolutionary vigilance, increase the national defense forces, and resolutely remain prepared to smash all dangerous schemes of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists and the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen.

The Lao people have never harbored ill feelings toward the Chinese people. Once we fought together to defend peace and national independence. We always aspire to restore and enhance the time-honored friendship with the Chinese people. As studious and hard-working people who used to coordinate with our people to carry out the struggle against the colonialist imperialists, the Chinese people have never had any ill feeling toward the Lao people. It is the traitorous reactionary clique in the Beijing ruling circles which has alienated and forced the fraternal Chinese people to go the battlefields, and has used the property and lives of the Chinese people to wage an unjust war against Laos and to destroy the revolutionary fruits of the Chinese people themselves in the factional power struggle among the Chinese leadership. In fact, the Chinese people have fallen victims to the expansionist and hegemonist policy of the ruling circles in their country.

Therefore, while resolutely struggling to defend our country, we must fully realize the difference between the Beijing ruling clique and the Chinese people. We must maintain a high sense of viligance to carefully identify friend from foe. The most important task of our armed forces is to constantly heighten the sense of combat readiness in order to thwart all military acts of provocation by the enemies and to smash their other sabotage schemes. At the same time, we must try in every way to convince the Chinese people to clearly understand and sympathize with us in carrying out our just and glorious tasks, to clearly understand the crimes of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, and not to fall for their hegemonist ambition.

Our armed forces, particularly those stationed along the northern border, aside from carefully making combat preparations and fighting well, must organize our combatants and people living along the border to popularize our just cause. In addition, we must strictly implement the party's humanitarian policy toward enemy elements who are caputred or who have defected to our side. We must carefully inspect and observe (?to identify) the Chinese people who have been oppressed by the Chinese reactionary clique and fled to our side. We must implement lenient measures toward them.

In the meantime, we must be prepared to give assistance to enemy and bad elements who are captured or have defected to our side. We must adopt appropriate and correct measures to deal with them. However, we must be careful and aware of their insincerity. In adopting humanitarian and amnesty measures toward them, we will help them gradually realize the truth. If we are able to effectively carry out this propaganda work among them, upon returning home they will tell the truth about the dark schemes and crimes of the Beijing reactionary clique both in Laos and in China itself. The truth about our just struggle will help convince the Chinese people who are their friends and who are their foes. After realizing this truth, they will turn against their real enemies -- the Chinese reactionary ruling clique -- and turn to support our just struggle.

To resolutely and securely defend our country, we must hold aloft the spirit of fighting, make effective combat preparations at all times, vigorously promote construction in the political, economic cultural and military fields, and step up diplomatic activities. At the same time we must know how to use propaganda work as a beacon illuminating our just cause, exposing the wicked schemes and acts of the enemies, and exposing to the Chinese people and armymen all the interference, distortion and crimes of the Chinese reactionary ruling clique. We must resolutely do everything to smash all acts of the enemy, thereby contributing to the task of defending and safeguarding our beloved country.

We are determined to defeat the enemy on both of the battlefronts with our boundless military strength and with our glorious justice.

PREMIER'S OFFICE ISSUES NEW YEAR INSTRUCTIONS

[Instruction issued by Thongsavat Khaikhamphithoun, minister at the Prime Minister's Office, on organization of traditional Lao New Year celebrations -- dated 7 April 1982]

[Text] To all ministries, ministerial-level committees, provincial and municipal administrative committees, and mass organizations: In the next few days, the old year will be over and the new year will begin. In the outgoing year the Lao people of all nationalities have concentrated their efforts on scoring numerous glorious successes in the tasks of defending and building the country,for example by carrying out national defense and public security work, promoting production to improve their living conditions, building material and technical foundations, fulfilling their duty in paying agricultural tax and selling surplus rice to the state and engaging in political and ideological study. The current campaigns carried out by the Lao people to score achievements to welcome the third congress of the LPRP are also being conducted with great enthusiasm and confidence.

The celebration of the traditional Lao New Year this year is extremely significant as it is being held at a time when our entire party, army and people throughout the country are striving energetically to score achievements to welcome the third congress of the LPRP.

To welcome the traditional Lao New Year in accordance with our fine tradition and to enhance the significance of the country's political life, all state and mass organizations at all levels must pay attention to fulfilling the following tasks:

1. Attentively guide the people in political and ideological study so as to further increase their revolutionary vigilance and to encourage them to resolutely and promptly thwart all enemy schemes, hold aloft the spirit of revolutionary enthusiasm, persist in fulfilling all the tasks entrusted by the higher level, and launch campaigns to score more achievements to welcome the third congress of the LPRP. First of all, in the immediate future they must make preparations and organize labor for the forthcoming production of industrial and handicraft factories in order to increase production output to improve the living conditions of cadres, combatants and people of all nationalities, and continue to fulfill their obligations in selling rice to the state. At the same time they must pay close attention to carrying out national defense and mass security work, smashing all schemes and acts of the enemies, maintaining public peace and order so as to bring peace to our society; and be prepared ideologically and mentally to welcome and translate into reality the policies and line adopted at the third congress of the LPRP.

2. Mobilize the masses to create a new joyous and revolutionary atmosphere and launch sanitation campaigns to clean up all localities, hospitals, schools, temples and other public places.

3. All Buddhist believers must be allowed to perform traditional religious activities under the guidance of the Unified Lao Buddhist Association so that those functions conform to the contents of the new regime. All Buddhist monks and novices must unite to educate and teach Buddhist laymen to strictly adhere to Buddhist principles, to love their kin, to be more determined in fighting the enemies to defend our country and just cause, and to have faith in the policies, line and correct leadership of the LPRP -- the organization which leads the country to prosperity and growth.

4. Certain measures must be strictly observed in celebrating and greeting the new year. For example, the celebration must be held to promote unity, mutual love, joy, thrift and revolutionary purity among the people. No dirty water should be thrown when celebrating this festival. Efforts must made to refrain from causing damage to public property. All offices, organizations and units must organize orderly celebrations within their own compounds. No official vehicles will be used in the water-throwing festival. Traffic regulations in urban areas must be strictly observed during the celebration.

5. To allow the people to celebrate the new year, the Council of Ministers has agreed to observe two official holidays on 15 and 16 April 1982.

6. During the new year celebrations, particularly on 15 and 16 April, all offices, organizations, units, state factories and other state agencies must maintain high revolutionary vigilance and be prepared to cope with any untoward incidents caused by the enemies. They must take turns to patrol and guard their respective premises.

Upon receiving this instruction, all ministries, ministerial-level committees, and provincial and municipal administrations must study and map out measures to correctly implement it.

KAYSONE SPEECH AT SAVANNAKHET PARTY CONFERENCE

BK041111 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1100 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Speech by Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee, delivered at the Savannakhet provincial party committee conference on 11 March 1982 -- read by announcer]

[Text] Beloved comrade representatives of the entire party committee organization of Savannakhet Province, distinguished guests, beloved officials.

Today, I am very pleased to attend a conference of the cadres in the entire provincial party committee of Savannakhet -- the birthplace of hero Pho Kadouat, a heroic land of the heroic Lao nation, a land of the military, political and economic strategies, and a strategic area of the three Indochinese countries.

This is the place where, in the sacred cause of struggle of the entire Lao people against the U.S. imperialists for national salvation in the past, more bombs were dropped by B-52's than in any other province throughout the country. On the average, tons of U.S. bombs were dropped throughout this province. The people of this province, particularly those in the former liberated areas, had to fight a serious war of destruction. The United States used its aircraft to destroy thousands of our houses. Not even the poles of the houses could escape destruction. Hundreds of thousands of cattle were killed with U.S. bombs. Hundreds of thousands of hectares of forests were destroyed by U.S. bombs and toxic chemicals.

Our army and people of Savannakhet Province, however, did not surrender. Instead, our army and people coordinated and joined with the fraternal Vietnamese volunteers in fighting and defeating the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their henchmen. The U.S. imperialist aggressors and their henchmen were shamefully defeated in several combat operations.

Our army and people have scored many praiseworthy achievements. Worthy of note were the achievements scored in the Lamson-719 operation during which the names of mountains, forests, rivers and waterways, villages and cantons -- such as Houai Taki, Sepone, Ban Dong and others -- became well known all over. These achievements have been recorded in the golden pages of the glorious history of our nation. They, like our precious heritage, will be forever engraved on our memories and preserved by us and by our next generation.

Our people of Savannakhet Province have also had an honor to score achievements contributing to the defense and building of the historic trail -- the trail under the name of great Comrade Ho Chi Minh, the trail which led our three Indochinese nations to march forward to the achievement of complete victory over the U.S. imperialist aggressors. It is this trail where all of the pictures and profound vestiges of the militant solidarity between the armies and peoples of our two fraternal countries of Laos and Vietnam have been engraved. Savannakhet is also a province which has worthily contributed to building outstanding cadres for the nation and the revolution of Laos.

The Central Committee highly appreciates the glorious revolutionary tradition of the party committee and you comrades of Savannakhet Province, and is convinced that this tradition has not only been maintained effectively, but also been vigorously promoted and expanded further in the new stage.

Beloved comrades, attending this conference, I myself am elated to have a chance to see various senior comrades who are former members of the Indochinese Communist Party -- comrades who participated in the two periods of national salvation struggle against the imperialist aggression. In this conference, I have also met young comrade cadres who have grown up in the movements of defending and building the socialist country. Also attending this conference are outstanding representatives of various heroic units and localities, various nationalities and tribes, workers, farmers, students, intellectuals of both sexes who have come from several areas, from the mountains of the Truong Son Range down to the plains along the Mekong River.

I am elated to meet with the representatives of the families of those who have scored meritorious deeds in the revolution, the officials and intellectuals who have supported and assisted the revolution and who have served as the basis of the revolution during the period of underground activities. The LPRP has always remembered your great meritorious deeds for the nation and the revolution. With elation and pride, on behalf of the party Central Committee, I would like to express wholehearted salutations and commendations to your provincial congress. Through this conference and through you, comrade representatives, allow me to convey the warm love and best regards of the party Central Committee to comrade members of the party, various organizations and all people of all nationalities throughout the province.

Beloved comrades, since the second national congress of the party in 1972 until the present, there have been great changes in several fields in our country unprecedented in the history of our nation. Under the LPRP's leadership, our people have accomplished the national-democratic revolution, doing away with colonialism and feudalism and then leading our country to advance to socialism bypassing the period of capitalist development. It is a great honor for our country to become a member of the socialist community. All three of our Indochinese countries have become the forefront of the socialist camp in Southeast Asia.

We have scored great achievements during the past 6 years of safeguarding and building the new regime, thus drawing faith and respect from all progressive mankind and bringing consternation to the imperialists and reactionaries. The stand and strength of our revolution have in all respects been vigorously consolidated and developed. The prestige and influence of our party and government are rising in the international arena. The party Central Committee is proud to see that included in the overall victory of our nation are the achievements of the army and people in Savannakhet Province. The fruits of the revolution and the overall victory have not only been securely safeguarded but have also been incessantly enhanced in this important strategic province. They have brought profound changes to our society in various fields.

Under the old regime, Savannakhet Province was severely plundered and exploited by the reactionary henchmen of the U.S. imperialists, including, for example, Boun Oum, Phoum Nosavan and other stooges. They claimed private ownership of ponds, fish resources and vast tracts of land, forests, mountains and rivers which belonged to the people in order to enrich themselves. Moreover, they also promoted prostitution, hooliganism, gambling and other vices to poison our youths and society. In the meantime, they were living a happy life on a heap of the people's bones. They monopolized the import and export of foodstuffs and fuel and transport services. They operated banking businesses and controlled other economic aspects of the province.

After the complete liberation of the country, the old rotten regime was toppled and the U.S. imperialists and their traitorous henchmen were driven out of the country by our people. Subsequently, the situation underwent a historical transformation. Under the leadership of the LPRP, the laboring people have become the genuine masters of their own country -- the countryside, farms and all the land of this country. The ownership of these properties by feudalists and capitalists has been largely abolished. All forms of exploitation in the countryside have been drastically dismantled. The role and influence of the oppressors and exploiters have been gradually smashed. In the urban areas, most of the comprador-bourgeois capitalists who had influence and committed crimes against the people have fled helter-skelter to foreign countries. They were sentenced by the people's court to various degrees of punishment and their properties officially confiscated.

In the past 4 or 5 years, a number of elements have sought to confuse the situation in the country and carry out trading businesses to enrich themselves. In general, however, the state has managed to take control of the main artery of the national economy and all important economic branches. We have sufficient strength for the dictatorship of the proletariat to concentrate efforts on developing all branches of our economy along the path of socialism, thereby gradually creating favorable conditions for production and the improvement of the people's living conditions.

The most glorious and greatest victory of this province has been scored in the area of national defense and public security work. As you know very well, Savannakhet Province is an important strategic region straddling the southern and central regions. The U.S. imperialists, the Beijing reactionaries and the exiled reactionaries have implemented a long-range scheme to sabotage this province in all fields in the hope of reviving their influence and overthrowing the new regime in Laos.

In the past, profoundly aware of this scheme, all cadres and people in this province have dealt effective counterattacks against the enemies in various areas by excellently coordinating attacks against them in the jungles and destroying their underground operations in the city. They have also mobilized the masses and built foundations for detecting and thwarting the enemies.

In 1981, several hundred misled people returned to their home towns in this province.

Through the appreciation, organization, application and implementation of the spirit and contents of Political Bureau Resolution No 51, since 1981 the public security work at the grassroots level has scored new achievements. Local administrations in various localities have effectively coordinated the task of attacking the enemies through the building of political foundations and have paid close attention to improving the people's living conditions. Several excellent achievements have been scored in this regard. For example, thanks to the mobilization, consolidation and building of political foundations, the people and guerrillas in Ban Song village, who were previously afraid of the enemies, have now obviously become more heroic by daring to attack the enemies and effectively maintaining public security in their locality.

I also see that in several cantons along the Mekong River and in Atsaphangthong and Outhoumphon Districts, local guerrilla and youth movements to attract volunteers to serve in the army are gaining momentum. In Nakham and Khanthabouli Cantons alone, over 70 youths volunteered to serve in the army at one time.

In other fields, I also see that you, comrades, have effectively implemented the party's and state's policies of amnesty, rehabilitation and construction. You have rehabilitated several thousand bad elements in society and transformed them into good citizens of the country. Some of them have taken up new professions to earn their living and have come to understand how to preserve their honor and value. Some of them have now further enhanced their value and capabilities by effectively serving in factories and state and army agricultural settlements.

Another outstanding fundamental achievement scored by Savannakhet Province in the past year was the consolidation of political foundations and the dictatorship of the proletariat at the grassroots level. Since the seizure of power, the party committees at various levels have paid close attention to carrying out the task of consolidating political foundations. For example, since the beginning of the implementation of Resolution 51 of the Political Bureau, the party committees at all levels have paid attention to guiding and organizing the popular movements, and sending outstanding party cadres and members to carry out protracted activities and to guide the work in all fields at the grassroots level and in various prominent cantons. The armed forces, political and economic forces, and volunteer forces stationed in various localities have closely coordinated and cooperated with one another, and have set up an organization under the unified guidance and leadership of the party committees at each level. This is the new direction and method in the leadership of your provincial party committee. That is why a change was recently effected at the grassroots level thanks to this development.

Another good procedure is that you, comrades, have appointed good party members in this province and various districts to the party committees, and sent them to carry out protracted guidance and leadership activities at the canton level so as to clean up the cantons, thus enhancing the party leadership in significant strategic areas and in areas where political foundations remain weak. This creative procedure was initiated in Atsaphangthong District where you, comrades, initially appointed four party committees to four important cantons. To date, you have set up an additional 36 party committees. The party Central Committee hails the decision of the provincial party committee and the district party committees as well as all party cadre and member comrades for understanding the strategic significance of the work of building political foundations. You, comrades, have volunteered to serve for a long period of time at the grassroots level. The party Central Committee hopes that all party committees and members will continue this good work so as to draw effective lessons for dissemination in other areas in the province and for the party Central Committee for dissemination throughout the country.

The third outstanding victory is in the economic branch, particularly in the agricultural field. After the liberation of our country, the people throughout the country, as well as in Savannakhet Province, were seriously threatened by the danger of food shortages. Under the old regime, several provinces along the Mekong River had to import Thai rice for consumption. In spite of serious successive natural calamities -- drought and floods -- in the past 6 years, however, you comrades have paid attention to mobilizing movements to reclaim abandoned rice fields, clear new land for farming, expand areas for rice cultivation, build irrigation facilities, set up intensive agriculture, and increase crop growing seasons for each year, thereby increasing ricefields by 10,000 hectares and reducing slash-and-burn farms by 5,000 hectares.

The acreage for dry season rice farming has also increased. In 1977, a total area of 331 hectares was set aside for this purpose. By late 1981, however, the area increased to 1,880 hectares. Rice production has also increased each year. In 1978, the total rice production in this province was 132,000 tons. In 1981, the production rose to 188,000 tons. In 1978, an average production per head was 306 kilograms; but the figure rose to 385 kilograms in late 1981. In Champhon District in particular, this figure rose to 450 kilograms. In certain cantons, such as Nong Gna Ma, Keng Phosi, and Yamong -- where people normally suffered food shortages in the past -- excellent rice harvests have been recorded this year with an average of 800 kilograms per head.

In the past 2 years, Savannakhet Province has basically become self-sufficient and self-reliant in food production. In addition, the fulfillment of its obligations in food production to the center is also improving. In each previous year, only 2,000 tons of rice were collected from the people as agricultural tax. In 1981, however, the collection of such taxes increased to 7,600 tons -- an increase of 96 percent -- over the targets. The state has also managed to buy up to 4,600 tons of surplus rice from the people in this province this year.

As for animal husbandry work, our province has made some rapid progress. There were 219,000 head of cattle in 1976. This figure rose to 425,000 by the end of 1981 -- an equivalent of 32 percent of the cattle population across the country. This shows the province's animal husbandry potential and capabilities to supply cattle to the central government and export them to foreign countries.

The initial success gained by Savannakhet Province on the agricultural front over the past 6 years proves that our province's agricultural capability is great and strong. The various expectations, objectives and directions set forth by the provincial party committee are sensible and attainable. We believe that you will certainly fulfill them.

Over the past 6 years this province has attentively assisted the refugees displaced during the war to return to their native villages to earn a living. Houses have been repaired and rebuilt in a more orderly manner than before. Parallel with its economic achievements, this province has made progress in the educational and public health fields. In addition to mobilizing the three-clean sanitation task of preventing diseases and maintaining good health, the province has eliminated illiteracy in 924 villages. A large number of children have attended school.

Regarding the primary education work, rapid progress has been achieved. During the past 6 years, the number of elementary students has increased by 160 percent while those of secondary and higher education students have increased by 330 and 750 percent respectively. The number of teachers at various levels has increased 150 percent.

These new changes in the countryside show the superiority of the new system and affirm that despite our country's underdeveloped economy and difficulties in many respects, we continue to struggle persistently and know how to bring into full play the people's strength to carry out the central direction of moving education one step ahead of other tasks.

In the field of building economic bases, the province has over the past 4 years obtained assistance from the central government and cooperation and assistance from its twin province of Binh Tri Thien. It has invested as much as 30 million kip in building the bases -- an equivalent of 26 percent of the local budget, excluding the funds provided by the central government for purchasing material, equipment and machinery for the province. Moreover, it has made efforts to build some new irrigation projects, factories and plants. It has repaired and built more than 200 km of communication lines, restored some factories and replaced their old parts and repaired and built hospitals, schools, clubs, wired radio networks, provincial and district offices and other places. All this is a commendable positive effort of the province.

In addition to the enterprises built by the province, you, comrades, have assisted and cooperated with the central government in building factories and plants and contributing to the installation of some new equipment and modern machines. Various construction enterprises and those engaging in mining and forest exploitation and geological and forest surveys, equipped with modern equipment and technology, are being built and are developing swiftly. These include the construction of Route No 9 -- a main route of strategic importance for our country and the province. Meanwhile, small and large bridges are being built along the route.

All this has strengthened the province's might and brought great changes to it. The people of various nationalities have been more confident in the new regime.

The province recently made great efforts in building and training cadres. It has organized courses for party members to study the party line and policies and the LPRP Central Committee's resolutions and instructions. For example, it has organized and begun an ideological movement within the party and for cadres and the people in accordance with the LPRP Central Committee Secretariat's Order No 146 in an enthusiastic and earnest manner. This has enabled a large number of party members and cadres to grasp the party line and policies more systematically than before. This has also strengthened solidarity and internal unity and absolute confidence in all party lines and policies, thereby contributing to consolidating the friend-and-enemy stand; safeguarding the quality, attitude and qualifications of party members and revolutionary cadres; and eliminating the feeling of discouragement that blocks the progress and development within the party and the ranks of cadres.

Most of the party members and cadres wholeheartedly welcomed the ideological movement launched by the party Central Committee and hailed it as a correct, timely and talented act.

Beloved comrades, the past 6-year period seems very short in a historical sense. Nevertheless, during this 6-year period we have managed to clearly display to the people the outstanding and excellent characteristics of the new regime. The party committees at all levels, and the army and peoples in Savannakhet Province have scored numerous great victories which have become a firm basis for all local potential to develop in all respects. The masses have been educated to improve their sense of political awareness. The party's policies and line have been increasingly disseminated among the masses. The armed forces and paramilitary forces have been rapidly consolidated and developed. The party members and cadres have been trained in actual deeds and have drawn more experiences from them. The leadership of the party committees at all levels has become more unified. The work pattern has been improved. This victory has become a firm basis for future vigorous growth and development for our province.

On this occasion, on behalf of the party Central Committee, I would like to hail all the achievements scored by the party committee and the people of all nationalities in Savannakhet Province. These achievements are their noble contributions to the overall tasks of the party and the nation.

Beloved comrades, even though this conference is held within a limited time frame, I can see that you comrades have already prepared the contents, direction and plans and have set targets for each branch of work. At the same time, you have also conducted considerably profound research and debates at this conference, and have thoroughly listened to and taken into account the opinions of low-level comrades. This was a good and correct method adopted by you comrades.

The political report and the review report presented by the provincial party committee at this conference sternly criticized the party committee itself in accordance with the principle of party development. Such a gesture clearly shows a high sense of responsibility of the provincial party committee toward the party. I believe that you comrades will constantly maintain and intensify the self-criticism system at every conference, launch an ideological movement for the party committees at all levels, and strictly implement all resolutions adopted at this conference.

On this occasion, I would like to present my views to identify more profoundly the fundamental problems of the various tasks of the provincial party committee in the coming year:

1. We must profoundly understand the all-round sabotage scheme of the enemies and strive to encourage the party committees at all levels to become more vigilant. The administrative committees at all levels and the armed forces must be prepared to smash all maneuvers of the so-called peaceful transformation, rebellious acts and enemy aggression. Savannakhet Province is a strategically significant region. In the immediate future and in many years to come, the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and other reactionary forces will try in every way to destroy our country.

Therefore, you, comrades, must pay close attention to firmly grasping the two strategic duties -- to defend and to build the country. To defend the country very well means to create favorable conditions for national construction. To build the country very well with an all-round strong economy will create adequate strength for the defense of the country. It is evident that the current situation calls for us to heighten our vigilance.

The task of national defense and public security must be carried out from the grassroots level. To carry out public security work at the grassroots level effectively, political foundations must be effectively consolidated. Thus, you must continue the task of mobilizing the masses to build political foundations, and pay attention to consolidating and building the proletarian dictatorship vigorously at the grassroots level.

In the past year, you paid close attention to guiding this task and created a number of good examples. Therefore, you must expeditiously study from these examples regarding the actual deeds and contents of this task carried out in each locality with diversified circumstances. At the same time, you must draw lessons on the training, utilization, selection and promotion of the role of local grassroots cadres, and send cadres from the province and the district levels to the grassroots level. This is aimed at, on the one hand, consolidating and developing the local movement, and on the other hand, drawing experiences for reporting to the center.

The district committees must pay attention to clearly evaluating and classifying the cantons, and subsequently plan to continue the consolidation of the work of earnestly solving problems. We must persist in fulfilling the four objectives as the people in Ban Sok village did in the recent past.

In the past, the enemies have tried to destroy and sabotage us in all respects. Therefore, we must deal a strong and all-round retaliation against them. We must know how to coordinate political work closely with public security, economic and internal defense work so that we will be able to safeguard our movement securely and strongly.

You, comrades, must not be content with the achievements you have scored. In my opinion, these achievements are only an initial success. In fact, you have only accomplished your tasks in some of the cantons. Some cantons are only starting initial changes, while others have yet to make any progress at all. We must regard these tasks as a protracted and significant strategic responsibility. Therefore, we must pay attention to encouraging party cadres to carry out this work earnestly. It may take 4 or 5 years until our movement becomes stable, strong and effective. You must concentrate efforts on carrying out this work in certain important strategic areas in the province, such as those along the Mekong River, Route 9 and Route 13, the areas in the vicinity of the provincial town of Savannakhet, and other adjacent areas. Subsequently, you can expand such work to other cantons, preferably three or four adjacent cantons in each locality so that they can support and promote one another. At the same time, you will be able to establsh successive field positions in the same locality, thereby creating a people's war posture for the people to resist readily all new enemy schemes.

As for the cantons in which this movement is favorably developing, you must organize the masses into mass organizations at various levels, and appoint capable persons to operate these organizations. In training core cadres at the canton level, first of all, you must aim at educating them to serve in the following main positions: The secretary of the party committee; the chairman of the canton administrative committee; members of the canton administrative committee who are leaders of the canton guerrilla units and public security forces; the secretary of the youth union; the secretary of the women's association; and the head of the canton agricultural cooperative. In addition to instructing them to study certain important documents, the province and the district must organize intensive short-term training courses on the roles, rights, duties, responsibilities and working procedures in detail for individual cadres concerned.

To ensure a thorough consolidation of the political foundations, the party committees at all levels and all services must continually attend to the grassroots level in earnest, and pay constant attention to inspecting, reviewing and solving remaining problems in all branches of work of the grassroots level. Do not simply inspect such problems for the sake of inspection. They should be looked into and solved. Do not act like an inspector who remains on horseback while inspecting a ricefield and refuses to dismount to help solve problems.

To build and strengthen the armed forces in all fields, in the coming year you must attend to consolidating their organization, providing intensive, strategic and tactical combat training to the regular forces, and enhancing the political awareness and sense of working with the grassroots level of those cadres sent to work at the grassroots level. You must pay special attention to consolidating and training local guerrillas and public security forces, particularly those commanding cadres in charge of public security work at the village and canton levels. You must establish a military training schedule for local guerrillas and armed units defending the district and rural area, and set up a timetable for inspecting the results of military training courses given to local guerrillas. It is very important to hold meetings on regional military affairs to draw lessons from and to select and publicize model cadres and guerrillas for their outstanding deeds in attacking the enemies and maintaining public security in the past 4 or 5 years. This is to provide effective guidance to the guerrilla movement in general and to hail the achievements scored by individual guerrillas or guerrilla units in the past in particular, thus further promoting the movement on regional military affairs.

It is very important that the party committee must pay attention to earnestly controlling the armed forces and paramilitary forces and providing strong guidance to them in all respects, for example by organizing ideological training courses for them, guiding their movement, being concerned about their well-being, and energetically implementing the party's and state's policy toward the armed forces and their families. In addition, you must pay attention to further enhancing and strengthening the combat coordination between the Lao armed forces and the Vietnamese volunteer forces. This task must be effectively executed not only in the province, but also in each district and locality. In each month and each period, you must set up a schedule to hold meetings together so as to draw lessons with a view to improving your movement in all respects.

2. It is necessary to exploit and develop local economic potentials and exert efforts to overfulfill the various objectives on economic development and transformation laid down by the party committee conference.

Savannakhet is one of the provinces that have abundant economic potential. This province is a cradle of rice and fish and is one of the provinces that have many cattle. In the [word indistinct] period, tens of thousands of cattle were exported to foreign countries each year. This province is also rich in valuable forests, mines and other natural resources and is capable of producing goods for export.

In its program of action, the province clearly set forth tasks and detailed objectives for economic development and transformation. These tasks and objectives have already been studied by you. For example, you will strive to fulfill these objectives from now until 1985: Each citizen in the province will produce approximately 430 kg of rice; each family will raise between 5 and 6 cows or buffaloes, 2 or 3 pigs and between 15 and 20 chickens or ducks; the number of cattle will be increased from 425,000 in 1981 to 500,000 in 1985; goods worth $4 million will be produced annually for export; mobilization campaigns aimed at encouraging the peasants to join agricultural cooperatives in rice cultivation areas will be basically completed; and all cantons must have state shops and trade cooperatives. Other objectives include efforts concentrated on completing some important enterprises for use in our economic development. For example, the construction of a road to (Thamoui) must be completed; modern ricemills must be constructed; and five irrigation projects must be completed. Illiteracy must be completely eliminated in the province by the end of 1983; compulsory elementary education must be enforced for the people, particularly for the cadres at the village and canton levels, party members and youth union members.

I would like to hail and praise you for adopting your overall objectives and expectations for implementation. I also hope that comrades in the entire provincial party committee will lead the local people to overfulfill the objectives since that conforms with the party Central Committee's advancement direction. If these objectives are fulfilled, new, better changes will take place in Savannakhet Province.

Dear comrades, we are currently implementing the plans of the second year of our First 5-Year State Plan. In its seventh resolution, the party Central Committee emphasized the important role of the local economy. Each party committee at the provincial and district levels must take the initiative in seeking every way possible to promote and develop its local potential, first of all, land and labor potential, and make use of all means available in the localities and assistance given by the higher echelons to develop production and improve the people's living conditions. It must take the initiative in caring for the daily life, education and health of the people. First of all, it must respond to production in all respects and the local people's living conditions. Meanwhile, it must positively carry out its obligations to contribute to improving the overall living conditions of the entire people. It must oppose localism -- the idea of only saving one's skin and not caring for people in other areas.

Regarding the current situation in our country, in the next few years we must regard supply work as a primary task since it is a basic issue in improving the living conditions of the people, cadres and combatants. Then we will gradually proceed to pacifying other aspects of the economic situation and creating conditions for the advancement of the economic movement. The people's daily life concerns not only food and clothing but also consumer goods.

In the next few years, attention must be paid to the following two-way method -- to mobilize localities to concentrate all their capabilities on producing consumer goods for local consumption and ensure joint production among the state, cooperatives and the people; and to step up the exploitation of the sources of goods for export to foreign countries in order to acquire capital to import essential goods to serve production and improve the people's living conditions.

The party Central Committee has adopted a policy and will modify other policies to promote this issue effectively in localities. The Central Committee will [word indistinct] to respond to production and improve living conditions in localities. The Central Committee is studying policies toward the factories that have produced large quantities of goods for export. It will provide part of the financial funds for purchasing machines, spare parts and raw material to expand production. However, each locality must know how to coordinate agriculture with industry. A district must know what should be done. For example, it should have iron workshops for repairing farm tools, chemical fertilizers and insecticides and should use central agricultural equipment and machines effectively.

In conjunction with encouraging and mobilizing the development of production in all respects, the province must pay attention to the movement of frugally using material, equipment, machines, money, energy, labor and time. It must oppose all incidents concerning discouragement, theft, extravagance and destruction of public property.

What I want to further emphasize is that you, comrades, must attentively evaluate and seek detailed ways to overfulfill the objectives you have laid down. Comrade President Ho Chi Minh, our esteemed great leader, taught us: Objectives are given 10 marks, the ways to fulfill such objectives must be given 15 marks, and the determination must be given 20 marks. Each party committee, each comrade party member, each cadre and each branch must contribute positively to mapping out plans, design steps to be taken, organize the forces to implement them and seek effective methods to fulfill the objectives as expected. Another important thing is to organize, mobilize and encourage mass movements to take revolutionary actions to materialize the objectives.

Lessons learned in many areas show us that the adopted objectives and expectations correspond with the true situation in such areas. The results were not satisfactory, however, because the implementation of work was not effectively organized, because the determination was not resolute, and because the detailed methods to fulfill the objectives did not conform with the revolutionary movements of the masses.

Another important thing is that it is necessary to grasp the party's economic line and policies firmly in the transitional period. As a matter of fact, this line and these policies require us to apply and develop the five economic sectors which are beneficial to production and which serve the people's living conditions. It should be understood that in various economically underdeveloped countries that are advancing as our country is, socialist construction must pass through a period called the transitional period. This long period is a period of building new production forces and new production relations while simultaneously transforming the old relations. Therefore, we cannot suddenly eliminate the nonsocialist economic sectors.

Moreover, we must understand that our country's economy is an underdeveloped economy of small production. Therefore, in advancing to socialism we are lacking not only material and technical bases but also the capability to utilize machines or equipment. This is why Lenin said: In the initial stage of the transitional period, the best effective method is to apply the economic form of state capitalism, from technique to materials, equipment, other means, and the management experience of the capitalists. Lenin once allowed the capitalists to rent some state factories to carry out production enterprises. The state would obtain some income from them. Lenin also formulated the additional direction of encouraging and making it convenient for foreign capitalists to invest in production. We must realize that thanks to his great wisdom Lenin laid down this strategic line.

It is clear that such actions did not originate from the interests of the capitalists but from those of a socialist state. In our country, the party Central Committee recently adopted a line of using some capitalists to purchase rattan and some forest products for the state. Some comrades disagreed with the Central Committee and maintained that it still wanted to protect the exploiters. We can cite as actual deeds, however, the example of a Mrs Oui in Champassak Province who purchased as much as 750 tons of rice for the state in a month. She mobilized the use of all private transport means, including traditional transport means, to transport rice from the countryside to towns. During that period trade cadres of the state could not buy much. For this reason, our cadres must use private traders and must agree to learn from their trading lessons while knowing how to control them.

At present, many traders in Savannakhet Province want to invest in production and other business enterprises. However, they are still afraid that [word indistinct] and provincial and local cadres may defy the party's policy in dealing with them. If we implement a correct policy to promote and encourage them by providing facilities to them and allowing them the right to manage production for the next 10 or 15 years, I believe that we will be able to mobilize a large amount of capital resources to serve the interests of society. If we do not know how to make use of these traders, they may use such capital resources for illegal business transactions, hoarding and sabotaging our economy. I, therefore, would like you, comrades, to decide which is a better and more appropriate method.

Another important thing is that you must adhere to the cause of socialist revolution. In addition to adopting a correct policy in utilizing and making use of all economic components, we must strive to consolidate and promote the various components of the socialist economy, such as the state economy, the collective economy, various cooperatives, including agricultural and industrial production, trading business, communications and transport services. We cannot allow the private economy to take advantage of and take control of the socialist economy.

In the past, a large number of agricultural cooperatives were sometimes set up hurriedly in various localities without proper preparations and conditions, such as management cadres. After such cooperatives were hurriedly set up, the enemies always took the opportunity to wage propaganda campaigns to tarnish them. On the contrary, party committees and party members and cadres have failed to protect the conducive functions of such agricultural cooperatives and to refute the enemies' distortions. As a result, several party cadres and members have even now become discouraged and dare not carry out a campaign to mobilize the masses to set up model cooperatives.

It is obvious that a number of our cadres have developed a sense of hesitation, and have lost faith in and failed to implement resolutely the party's policy to set up agricultural cooperatives. Several of them have argued that the policy on setting up agricultural cooperatives is not suitable to the current reality in our country, and that the setting up of cooperatives will result in a decrease in production and a decline in living conditions. Regarding this matter, I would like to invite you to visit Phong Saly, Oudomsai, Xieng Khouang, and Sam Neua Provinces. Those provinces have basically completed the setting up of agricultural cooperatives. The movement of those cooperatives is not only becoming very stable, but is also developing favorably. The living conditions of peasants are rapidly improving. Profound changes in various fields are taking place in the rural areas in those provinces. The agricultural cooperative of Ban Don Dou village in Hatsaifong District of Vientiane Province, which was set up only 3 years ago, has achieved excellent production. All visitors to this cooperative wholeheartedly hail its success.

You must remember that a few days ago we discussed the situation in Poland. I would like to reiterate here once again the lessons we have learned from Poland. Because [the Polish party] failed to closely supervise and guide the establishment of agricultural cooperatives and to lead the countryside to march along the path of socialism, recent developments in Poland seriously threatened the existence and destiny of the new regime in that country. It was a painful lesson which I told you about a few days ago. Thus, it is important that you, comrades, must consider again the methods you should use to guide the countryside along the path of socialism.

3. I would like to discuss another key issue which is a matter of life and death in the revolution; that is, the issue of building the party and cadres. The building of various organizations of the party and the training of party cadres and members are aimed at ensuring the triumphant implementation of all policies and lines of the party. The great, stable and glorious victories scored by Savannakhet Province in the past were scored, first of all, thanks to the enthusiasm of party cadres and members. It can be said that such enthusiasm is a basic characteristic of our party cadres and members. However, they also possess some weak points and liabilities. According to an actual survey conducted by you, comrades, during the recent political study, since the seizure of power we have neglected for some time the work of building the party and party cadres, have failed to train and raise the standards of ability and knowledge of party cadres and members, and have paid little attention to the work of mobilizing the masses to build political foundations. These errors have originated from the leadership level, not from low-level cadres. The conferences of the party committees at various levels mostly concentrated on discussing and judging the work of the administrations at their respective levels, but remained indifferent to discussing the work of building the party and cadres as well as the work of mass organizations.

The party organizations at various levels neglected and failed to abide strictly by the code on the principles of party life. The execution of work by the party committees lacked democratic commonsense. Certain districts have not held a party committee conference even once in the past 3 or 4 years. Several cantons have neglected to hold a party unit conference for 1 or 2 years. Some party units held conferences merely to discuss their work but failed to draw any experiences from them. As a result, such conferences solved no problems. Some party committees superficially appeared to work in a collective manner, while in fact, only a few individuals had the power to make decisions. Some party committee members still tried to recruit their family members, relatives and friends to work for the party apparatus. Thus, they would not dare criticize one another. They were afraid of expressing views to criticize the higher levels for fear of being purged or (?persecuted under some regulations). [Words indistinct] some party members lost interest in voicing opinions within the party, and became indifferent to their work. They merely wanted to remain silent and inactive and to work only for vested interests. They worked very little, but complained a lot about various shortcomings or wages. A number of them became victims of the enemies' sugar-coated bullets. Some of them adopted an attitude of regionalism, narrow-mindedness and oligarchism, thereby posing a main obstacle to collective leadership. They only served the interests of their localities, not those of the country or the province. They would make it difficult for the province's trade service to purchase surplus rice and foodstuffs from the people in their respective localities.

The above-mentioned situation has developed from various causes as follows: wrong attitude toward the masses and class principles, and the inability to identify friends and foes. Our cadres and members became careless and lacked vigilance, and failed to improve their revolutionary qualifications consistently. The standard of their knowledge is low and limited, resulting in their inability to respond to the political requirements of the party in the new period. After the seizure of power, several comrades were assigned to duties in urban areas. They were provided with good houses and automobiles. Subsequently, they adopted a bureaucratic attitude toward the masses, became indifferent to the countryside and the masses, and lived a life which does not conform to reality. All this is because our cadres' and members' understanding of Leninism is still inadequate. On the basis of our standards of leadership, I think they pay less attention to carrying out the work of party construction and lack a sense of responsibility. Some party committees do not even have party members in charge of building the party and cadres. Mass organizations have not been consolidated. The system of management, education and inspection within the party has not yet been effectively executed. Our party cadres and members sometimes lack vigilance.

Beloved comrades, our party strictly adheres to Marxism-Leninism. Even though the party does not have many members from the workers class at present, it strictly adheres to the principles of the workers class and Marxism-Leninism as its ideological line in training and educating its members. When we became party members, we were willing to make any sacrifice. For the ideals of communism and for the well-being and happiness of the people, we must strive to learn from the good lessons taught by Comrade President Ho Chi Minh in instilling revolutionary qualifications and morale in the people. We must practice thrift and make sacrifices for the party and the revolution. The standard of our revolutionary qualifications as well as the ideological principles of party members are clearly stipulated in the six duties mentioned in the party law. All party members -- no matter in what capacities they may be -- must strictly abide by them. During the recent political-life campaign, you, comrades, already deeply studied them. I hope that you will place the interests of the party and nation above your own and strive to train yourselves to become leading party members. Each comrade party member -- no matter what his position -- must first of all know how to manage himself. At the same time, he must pledge to be under the management and control of the party committee. The party committees at all levels and the party units must pay attention to constantly carrying out the task of managing and controlling the party members.

Regarding the work of building the party in Savannakhet Province, I propose that you, comrades, pay attention to the following:

You must recruit new groups of party members. These additional party members must be qualified and youthful and must have a high level of culture and technical and specialized knowledge. Their standards of politics must be ensured. Positive and appropriate measures must be taken carefully with regard to recruitment in each canton; for example, in the cantons that have had strong leading party unity, in the cantons whose party units are weak in their leadership, in the cantons that have party members engaging in movements and in the cantons which are still weak and have had no party members. In some areas, you must rely on party units in carrying out recruitment. Some areas should rely on party units appointed and sent by the higher echelons. In some areas, this work will be directly carried out by the district party committee.

In areas where there are no party units, party cells or party members, party cells and nucleus cadres must be organized and assigned work to test them in order to groom them for admission into the party. At the same time, attention must be paid to nurturing the ranks of cadre successors with the purpose of increasing the number of party committees. The administration at various levels and various services of a province or a district must make plans many years in advance for this matter. This can be learned from Oudomsai Province. In this province, the party committees at all levels, for example, the party committee at the district level, selected some people, between 30 and 40 comrades, and made them alternate cadres. These alternate cadres were later sent to study culture, politics, specialized and other knowledge and assigned work for testing. They were gradually groomed and trained to know how to work, to be capable and to gain prestige from the masses. They were later assigned as members of district party committees. You should understand that the main difficulties are narrow-minded and selfish ways of thinking by local tribal chiefs and feudalists.

In the past, many comrades said that this idea was excellent. However, they hestitated to promote or assign tasks to young cadres. They wanted to hold back their promotions for fear that they would become superior to them, considering them youthful and having a low level of political thinking. As for female and nationality cadres, the old cadres said that these cadres are poor in their political thinking, incompetent and so forth. Moreover, they disliked those who questioned their ideas. Despite the fact that the young cadres' ideas are correct and reasonable, the older cadres consider them as their opposition. Only by resolutely struggling to eliminate the narrow-minded, selfish ways of thinking by local chiefs and feudalists can we have ranks of good nucleus cadres and promptly meet the requirements for the swift development of the revolution in the new period.

It is necessary to realize that cadres are born from movements. Once there are movements, we must try to select good cadres from such movements. A movement must be carried out by the local cadres; the work of a locality or a branch of service must be carried out by the cadres of such a locality and branch. Therefore, we must strive to build and make movements effective in order to select outstanding cadres to add to the ranks of leading cadres. Only by so doing can we have cadres growing from movements and from the actual work of a locality.

While attentively building the ranks of young cadres, you must pay attention to promoting and developing the value and heightening the role of the old cadres and senior party members who are responsible for various important tasks in party and state apparatuses. At the same time, the various policies toward cadres adopted by the party and state must be effectively implemented. For example, the comrades who have been in the revolution for many years and who are now old and whose health is poor must be permitted to retire and granted retirement pay. Regarding this matter, we must pay serious attention to assisting them in their material life and to their honor, prestige and good deeds.

Another thing should be clearly understood: For the sake of the revolution, the party occasionally appointed one comrade as a party committee member or assigned him a certain position in a service. Later, the party appointed someone new to replace him. This matter is common, not unusual. Some comrades have been assigned to a higher position and some to a lower position. Some comrades have been admitted to the party, and some have changed their nature and were thus dismissed from the party. This matter conforms with our rules and regulations. We should not mix the bad with the good and the right with the wrong. We should not think that the party is not grateful or betrays old cadres or party members.

Attention should be paid to internal unity, unity within our fine ranks, which constitutes our party's strength. To maintain unity within the ranks of party members, the standing committee of a party committee must first unite and must strictly observe criticism and self-criticism. Regarding this matter, the leading cadres must set examples concerning the spirit of revolutionary struggle and the spirit of studying and persevering to advance as well as the spirit of modifying workstyle. They must be models in self-criticism and grooming other comrades. They must be willing to encounter any common difficulties. Each comrade must know his or her responsibility and must make positive contributions to joining other comrades in surmounting such difficulties. One cannot evade responsibility in order just to save one's skin and later put the blame on higher echelons or others. Only by so doing, can we maintain our unity.

Comrades must take the initiative in strengthening international solidarity, first of all, our solidarity and cooperation with the Vietnamese comrades. Comrades must maintain close solidarity and cooperation with the twin province of Binh Tri Thien and solidarity with the Vietnamese volunteer soldiers. Comrades must maintain the spirit of proletarian internationalism, the spirit of comradeship and fraternity with the socialist countries and particularly the spirit of special Laos-Vietnam solidarity. This is to solve all problems. We must resolutely oppose the feudalists' narrow-minded nationalism. Comrades must maintain vigilance and pay attention to countering all enemy psychological, divisive propaganda campaigns.

During the past, our party has regarded promoting and safeguarding the special solidarity among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea as the law of development of the revolutions in the three Indochinese countries. This is a strategic issue deciding the fate of our three nations. International solidarity and our solidarity with Vietnam are the standard political conditions for our party.

With regard to special solidarity with Vietnam here, it means that you, comrades, must positively win the assistance and cooperation of the twin province of Binh Tri Thien in order to encourage our province's all-round movements. Particularly, you must assist and cooperate with this province in the economic sphere. For example, you can assist in surveying and designing economic resources, making plans, boosting industrial, agricultural and handicraft production and trade and in training technical workers and cadres. We must assist and cooperate with each other to produce goods by exchanging raw materials.

With regard to imports and exports, you must first cooperate and trade with the twin province of Binh Tri Thien and later trade with other provinces. In giving such assistance and cooperation, the principles of mutual benefit mst be ensured. Both sides should cooperate and assist each other so as to promote and develop the economy in all respects.

Dear comrades, the party Central Committee is very proud to see the growth and development of the entire provincial party committee and the great, glorious and firm achievements scored by you. In the provincial party committee cadres conference, you jointly assessed the achievements and victories won by the province and reached unanimity in this regard. You were aware of the weak points and shortcomings. At the same time, you discussed and adopted the direction, tasks and main objectives for the next few years in order to make the province's movements progress, grow and strengthen in all respects. Your provincial party conference will honorably contribute to preparing for the third nationwide congress of our party.

Following the conclusion of this congress, it is most important that the comrades assigned to the party committees at various levels and to various branches map out plans and detailed methods to turn the congress resolutions into true revolutionary deeds in localities, branches and units.

The party Central Committee firmly believes that the Savannakhet Province Party Committee will further strengthen your unity in the future, bring into full play your revolutionary traditions, resolutely lead the people of various nationalities and persistently struggle to fulfill splendidly the [word indistict] objectives set forth by the conference, thereby honorably contributing to the task of safeguarding and building socialism in our country.

I wish the comrade delegates success after returning to your localities and units and good health in order to implement and turn into practice the resolutions adopted by the conference.

I once again extend the party Central Committee's best regards through you to the organizations, cadres, party members, combatants in the armed forces and compatriots of all nationalities and tribes in the province.

SOUPHANOUVONG LECTURES VIENTIANE DIGNITARIES

[Lecture by Souphanouvong, president of the LPDR, chairman of the SPC and chairman of the LFNC, given at a gathering of dignitaries and intellectuals of Vientiane Municipality on 31 March -- recorded]

[Text] [Intercepted in progress] in the evolution of national defense and construction. Because of historical conditions in our Lao nation where the Lao people have always had to fight to defend their country, the Lao people must strengthen internal unity so they will always be prepared to defend their fatherland. This unity has become a fine tradition of the Lao people, as can be seen from the responsibility of each Lao citizen for the destiny of the country in face of any foreign aggressor. This means that all members of the big Lao family always cherish the spirit of patriotism and a close relationship among themselves, and that they always help and unite with one another in time of crisis. They regard danger to the country as danger to themselves. This sense of responsibility is imbedded in the hearts of the Lao people of all tribes. It has become a national tradition and a spirit of patriotism and undauntedness among the Lao people. The sense of responsibility among the Lao people is displayed, first of all, in their willingness to defend the common interests of the country. Their ultimate goal is to defend the national interest.

Under the administration of the imperialists and feudalists in the past, however, no such sense existed. Only when the national interest as well as those of the ruling oppressors and exploitors were threatened by foreign enemies would they request help and cooperation from the people of all tribes. By nature the ruling oppressors and exploitors only created divisions and antagonism among the people. In carrying out the revolutionary struggle to liberate our country and the laboring people over the past several decades under the leadership of the LPRP, the Lao people have constantly held aloft the tradition of unity and mutual assistance, and have tried to merge their interests with those of the country.

Following the complete liberation of the country, the goal of socialist transformation and construction in our country is to serve the interests of all Lao citizens, that is to meet their material and moral requirements so as to create conditions under which the Lao people of all tribes can become stronger in all fields. The Lao people are obliged to do everything within their power to bring progressive development to Lao society.

In a socialist society, the relationship between the individual citizens and the (?state) is centered on interests. This means that the vested interests must lie in and are only part of the common interest. When the common interests are ensured, the vested interests of individual citizens will prevail. The merging of the common interests and the vested ones in our country can be realized only through the process of consolidating and enhancing the effectiveness of the proletarian dictatorship, further enhancing the collective mastership of the laboring people, carrying out simultaneously the three revolutions, effecting the socialist industrial transformation, creating the system of socialist collectivity, building large-scale foundations for socialist production, and building new cultural foundations and new socialist men. The unification of common interests and vested interests also means the unification of the responsibilities and rights of all Lao citizens.

Of course, if our country is rich and strong, the happiness of all laboring Lao people will be guaranteed. Our party and state are absolutely concerned with the interests of the laboring people -- their well-being, living conditions, education, communication, leisure and health. To create favorable conditions for the party and state to effectively look after and to meet the requirements of the Lao people of all tribes, each Lao citizen must fulfill his obligations to society, heroically fulfill the tasks of building and defending the country, make appropriate contributions to the country, and strictly implement the policies and line of the party and state. As masters of our society we must maintain a high sense of vigilance toward our obligations in utilizing labor for production, defending the country and maintaining public security. This sense of obligation must be voluntary. We must hold aloft the ideological line of collectivity, and must fight against individualism.

After several decades of national liberation struggle and defending the country, the Lao people strongly aspire to live in peace and build a happy and plentiful life with genuine independence and freedom. However, such just aspirations have been threatened by the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the warmongering U.S. imperialists, who have implemented a scheme of swallowing our country and expanding into Southeast Asia. But the three fraternal independent and sovereign countries of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea, which are advancing along the path of socialism, are the main obstacles obstructing the implementation of the dark and cruel scheme of the Chinese reactionary clique. The latter, therefore, has tried in every way to sabotage and destroy the revolutionary struggle of our people by using exiled Lao reactionaries, Thai reactionaries and other reactionary forces to create political and economic crises coupled with military threats and to wage psychological warfare campaigns and use spies to slander and divide our people. In face of the hostile schemes and acts of the Beijing reactionary clique, our people in Vientiane and surrounding areas in particular must further strengthen our unity, heighten revolutionary vigilance, and strive to transform and build socialism and to defend securely the revolution fruits.

The current reality calls for us to increase vigorously the spirit of patriotism and the love of socialism, to enhance the tradition of revolutionary heroism, to hold aloft the tradition of struggling against foreign aggressors, to enchance the spirit of self-sufficiency and self-reliance, to extensively build the system of socialist collective mastership, to promote the tasks of national defense and socialist construction, to increase our strength in the economic and national defense fields and to smash all acts and schemes of the enemies.

In international affairs, we must strengthen solidarity with the fraternal socialist countries and all progressive mankind, resolutely fight against the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the imperialists, and brilliantly fulfill our international obligations, thereby contributing to the defense of peace and the purity of Marxism-Leninism and increasing the strength of socialism and national independence in Southeast Asia and the world. There has been no period in the past in which our country was as strong as it is today. It is the overall strength of an independent and unified country with a tradition of revolutionary struggle, undauntedness and heroism as well as a tradition of fighting against enemy aggressors, with the strength of the proletarian dictatorship, of socialist mastery and of the correct and creative leadership of the party, with the solidarity and unification in the entire party, masses and army, and with the strength of the solidarity between our country and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries as well as other revolutionary currents in the world. We will certainly be able to smash all dark and cruel schemes and acts of the Beijing reactionary clique and the imperialists.

The current situation in the world is extremely favorable to the revolutionary struggle of our people. The three epochal revolutionary currents have grown stronger and bigger and are surging ahead vigorously. The socialist system continues to develop at a rapid and firm pace, and has scored great exploits in various fields -- economic, cultural, technical and national defense.

The national liberation movements have made new advances and developments have become more energetic and vigorous in the close association with socialism. The struggle movements of the workers in various capitalist countries are developing vigorously. The capitalist system is increasingly suffering an immense crisis and is seriously deteriorating. The balance of forces between the revolutionary and counterrevolutionary elements in the world is tipping in favor of the revolutionary forces. In face of the current realities both at home and abroad, we will absolutely be able to fulfill the revolutionary tasks entrusted by the party.

It can be said that Vientiane Province and municipality is an important industrial city and the political and cultural center of the entire country. The immediate duty of the Vientiane municipal residents is to strive more vigorously to build new production foundations and to continue to transform and build this capital into a socialist city. At the same time, they must be prepared in every way to heighten vigilance and to smash all sabotage schemes of the enemies and hooligans, particularly during preparations for and the holding of the third congress of our party.

During the convening of the forthcoming third party congress, let our Vientiane City residents cooperate with the people of all nationalities to promote the patriotic and socialist campaigns, and be prepared to fight well in order to contribute ardently to the tasks of defending and building socialism in our beloved and cherished fatherland. I am convinced that you will strive to explore new creative means in executing the tasks under your responsibility, thus attentively contributing to the maintenance of peace and national security, and making the third congress of our party a glorious success.

In conclusion, I wish all dignitaries good health and success in advancing along the path of our new regime. [applause]

SUPREME COMMANDER: U.S. CONFIRMS SRV CHEMICAL USE

[Text] Cyanide and other poisonous chemicals have been used by Vietnam against the Khmer Rouge near the Kampuchean border, Armed Forces Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon told reporters yesterday. Speaking at the Central Security Command, Gen Saiyut said that the eight-man American chemical warfare team now visiting Thailand had provided him with concrete evidence that the poisons had been used. He said the evidence included samples of chemicals collected from areas where "yellow rain" and other chemical attacks were reported to have been made, interviews with alleged survivors of the attacks, and confessions from Vietnamese defectors, some of whom have said that they themselves fired chemical shells or dropped them from planes.

Gen Saiyut also said that Thai military authorities had checked the times when these attacks were supposed to have taken place, interviewed refugees at various holding centres, and found that attacks were indeed made at those times and yellowish chemicals had been used during the attacks.

As a precaution, Thai forces near the border have been issued with gas masks, and military and civilian scientists are studying the chemicals to learn how to guard against them and treat victims, he said.

Gen Saiyut said the U.S. team, led by defence, health, and intelligence experts, met him yesterday and produced the evidence, which he said included proof that chemicals had also been used in Laos and Afghanistan. There was also evidence that the Soviet Union developed and provided the chemicals used in those countries, Gen Saiyut said.

The U.S. team is here to present evidence and collect more information as part of their tour of nine countries in Europe, the Middle East and Asia, in an effort to create international pressure against the Soviet Union on the issue.

Gen Saiyut said Thailand must take measures in response to chemical warfare, and these may include cooperation with the U.S. in publicising chemical attacks and studying the chemicals being used.

FOREIGN MINISTER DENIES BORDER VIOLATION CHARGES

BK091534 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 9 Apr 82

[Text] Referring to the report by the VIETNAMESE NEWS AGENCY on 2 April quoting the report of the Heng Samrin regime saying that Thailand had violated the airspace of Kampuchea in March and Thailand has fired some mortar shells into Kampuchea including violations of the territorial waters of Kampuchea, Mr Chet Sutcharitkun, director general of the Information Department, in his capacity as the spokesman for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, denies all these reports as groundless. He said that in fact Thailand has been violated frequently by the foreign forces occupying Kampuchea which have fired some mortar and artillery shells into Thailand damaging houses and properties of the Thai people living near the border.

PRK Violations Alleged

[Text] According to the Supreme Command Information Office, at 1510 on 5 April a clash took place between Vietnamese-Heng Samrin and Khieu Samphan troops near the 6th km post camp in Poipet, Battambang Province, resulting in five artillery rounds landing in Thai territory at Ban Khok Sabaeng, Aranyaprathet District, Prachin Buri Province. The artillery rounds damaged six homes, five rice barns and some rice.

At 1700 on 7 April, Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops fired small arms and 10 mortar rounds from their positions atop a mountain at a border patrol police outpost at Chong Khao Wong, Khlong Yai District, Trat Province. Five Thai officials were wounded.

Thailand has evidence which can be shown to the world of violations of Thai territory by foreign troops on information gathering missions, shelling of Thai territory by heavy weapons and provocations by firing at Thai outposts. We are not making groundless allegations against any party as has been alleged.

Vietnam's attempt to portray the root cause of the conflict in Kampuchea as one of conflict between Thailand and the Indochinese countries has affected a neighboring country -- as is evidenced in the said violations of its territory -- and has created the refugee problem. [sentence as heard] In any event, the international community will continue to seek a just solution to the Kampuchean problem regardless of Vietnam's stubborness over the problem.

OFFICIAL DISCUSSES FALKLANDS, TALKS WITH SRV

[Text] Chet Sutcharitkun, Foreign Ministry spokesman, stated today that regarding the British-Argentinian confrontation over the Falkland Islands issue, as Thailand has enjoyed longstanding friendly relations with Great Britain and Argentina, the Thai Government strongly deplores and disapproves the use of force in disputes between nations, including the dispute over the Falkalnd Islands. Thailand calls on the parties concerned to exercise utmost restraint and to make all efforts to seek a peaceful solution in accordance with the purpose and principles of the UN Charter.

Asked if the dispute will affect the Thai prime minister's visit to the UK in late April, the spokesman said the dispute should not affect the planned visit. He said the invitation from the British Government still stands and the initerary has not been changed, as the aim of the visit is to promote and strengthen Thai-British relations further.

Regarding Vietnam's firing at and seizure of Thai fishing boats on 6 April, which resulted in a number of crewmen being killed and injured, and the seizure of six fishing boats by Kampuchean coastal boats, Chet said the Foreign Ministry is paying special attention to the two incidents. The ministry has inquired of the Fishery Department about the incident during which the fishery station in Samut Sakhon received radio reports from a Fishery Department boat. Chet disclosed that the six fishing boats which were seized by Kampuchean coastal boats have been released and are on the way back to Thailand.

Regarding the Thai boats which were seized by Vietnam, the Foreign Ministry has invited the Vietnamese ambassador to meet with the director general of the Political Department on 12 April, when inquiries will be made about the incident and the Thai side will express concern about the incident.

Chet noted that the territorial waters and exclusive economic zones of Vietnam and Thailand overlap and that Thailand and Vietnam have yet to negotiate their exclusive economic zones. To avoid violating a neighboring country's border, Thai fishermen are reminded not to venture close to another country's exclusive economic zone.

LE DUAN PRESENTED WITH GDR'S KARL MARX ORDER

Leaders Attend Ceremony

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 9 -- Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee, today received the Karl-Marx Order, the highest distinction of the German Democratic Republic, conferred on him for his 75th birthday. The honor was bestowed in recognition of his outstanding services to the workers' movement, his creative application of Marxism-Leninism and his contributions to the struggle for peace and friendship among nations.

Present at the ceremony held for this purpose at the presidential palace in Hanoi this morning were other Vietnamese party and state leaders -- Truong Chinh, Pham Van Dong, Vo Nguyen Giap, Nguyen Duy Trinh, Le Thanh Nghi, Tran Quoc Hoan, Van Tien Dung, Vo Chi Cong, To Huu, Do Muoi, Nguyen Duc Tam and Dong Si Nguyen.

G.D.R. Ambassador Klaus Zorn, empowered by Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany and chairman of the Council of State, pinned the order on Le Duan. He praised the recipient as a prominent Marxist-Leninist and international activist who had devoted himself to the happiness of his people and to the triumph of socialism and peace and who had rendered great services to the fraternal friendship and all-sided cooperation between the two parties and peoples.

Le Duan, after thanking the party and Government of the G.D.R., said that this great honour went first of all to the C.P.V. and the Vietnamese people, who, he added, would try their best to nurture their militant solidarity and fraternal cooperation with the G.D.R.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 10 -- The conferment of the Karl-Marx Order on Communist Party General Secretary Le Duan indicated a high valuation of the revolutionary cause of the Vietnamese party and people by the party, the government and the people of the German Democratic Republic, says NHAN DAN today.

In an article on this event, the paper notes: "The ardent comradeship manifested in the conferment of high distinctions on Vietnamese party and state leaders by the Soviet Union, Laos, Mongolia, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, Cuba, and the G.D.R. is a great encouragement for the entire party and people of Vietnam". It goes on: "By honouring General Secretary Le Duan with the Karl-Marx Order, the G.D.R. NGUYEN CO THACH INTERVIEW WITH WEEKLY DOC LAP

BK110520 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 10 Apr 82

[Excerpts from interview granted by Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to the Vietnam Democratic Party weekly DOC LAP "Following the Successful Fifth National Congress of the VCP" -- date not given; read by announcer in English]

[Text] [Question] Would you please tell us about the orientations and tasks of our foreign policy in the forthcoming period.

[Answer] The Fifth Congress of the VCP clearly defined two strategic tasks for the Vietnamese revolution, namely, to build socialism and firmly defend our socialist country.

Our diplomatic work must strive to secure favorable international conditions to help achieve these goals. It must contribute to defeating the policy of Beijing, which colluding with the United States, is conducting a many-sided war of destruction and attempting to weaken and annex our country. While striving for this goal, we also positively contribute to the world people's struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. In this struggle, the foremost task is to defend peace, international detente and foil the scheme of U.S. imperialism and international reaction to step up the arms race and cause tension in the world.

To accomplish this task, as stated by the fifth party congress, we should continue to grasp our party's foreign policy, namely, to constantly consolidate and strengthen the special Vietnam-Laos-Kampuchea relationship, a matter of vital significance to the destiny of the three peoples. We must strengthen our solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, the keystone of the foreign policy of our party and state, and unity with other nations, the nonaligned countries and other forces of peace and progress the world over.

[Question] In the 1976-78 period, fine foreign relations appeared between Vietnam and the ASEAN, which was generally regarded as a new chapter. But the relationship is now deteriorating. What is your opinion?

[Answer] It's true that current relations between Vietnam and ASEAN is bad, but much better than the period when the United States invaded Vietnam. In the past, several ASEAN countries, together with the United States, sent troops to invade Vietnam. Now there is no war between us.

China's war of aggression against Vietnam in 1979 and its collusion with the United States have opposed ASEAN to the Indochinese countries and sabotaged detente and peaceful coexistence in the region.

I've had the chance to make clear on the ASEAN countries that they have been caught in two Chinese traps; firstly, they have been incited by China to oppose the three Indochinese countries to cover up the real danger toward the ASEAN countries, which is China; secondly, they have been incited by China to support the Pol Pot clique against the Kampuchean people [words indistinct] of the support to the pro-China reactionaries in the ASEAN countries.

ASEAN has fallen victim to Chinese hegemonism. They should get rid of this dangerous trap the sooner the better.

The Indochinese countries are also victims of Chinese hegemonism, but they did not fall into China's trap. They are absolutely struggling against it. This is also beneficial to ASEAN.

[Question] Would you make clear Vietnam's present policy toward China and ASEAN countries?

[Answer] On the relations with China, we persist in the struggle against the Chinese leadership's expansionist and hegemonistic policy toward Vietnam. At the same time, we have always attached great importance to the friendship with the Chinese people and wish to restore normal relations between the two countries on the principle of peaceful coexistence, respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and settlement of disputes through negotiations.

We have made many peace proposals, including the proposed signing of a treaty of peace, [passage indistinct]. China's repeated rejection of our peace proposals and its continued armed provocations against our border areas show that it has benefited from maintaining tension in the region, and that China itself is the main threat to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

On the relations with Thailand, we, together with Laos and Kampuchea, have on many occasions affirmed our respect for Thailand's national independence sovereignty and territorial integrity.

We and Kampuchea have agreed that part of Vietnamese troops will be withdrawn from Kampuchea if Thailand stops its assistance to the Pol Pot remnants to oppose the Kampuchean people.

Recently, the three Indochinese countries declared their readiness to discuss with Thailand problems concerning the relations between Indochina and Thailand under any form suitable to Thailand. If Thailand really wants peace and stability in the region and has good will as it has stated, it must respond to those reasonable proposals.

On the relations with the ASEAN countries, the three Indochinese countries have put forth a 7-point proposal to solve the problems concerning the relations between the two groups of countries of ASEAN and Indochina and building Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability and cooperation. We are prepared to discuss with the ASEAN countries problems of peace and stability in the region at a regional conference on the basis of equality, respect for each other's interests, nonimposition of views on each other, and without outside interference.

PRESS WRITES ON VCP CONGRESS TASKS, RESOLUTIONS

NHAN DAN 6 Apr Editorial

[NHAN DAN 6 April editorial: "Guiding Thoughts for the Second Phase of Congress Preparation: Ascertain the Two Strategic Tasks"]

[Text] The socialist revolution is a campaign that is in accordance with the law of deve'-opment and within the historical process of the struggle between socialism and capitalism. This struggle has been carried out diligently on the political, economic and ideological fronts and even with violence.

Socialism cannot triumph in all countries at the same time. It can only triumph step by step through the smashing of each part of a country and smashing a number of other countries, thus forming two opposing social systems and finally enabling it to triumph over our entire planet. For this reason, a sharp struggle to resolve who will triumph over whom is now taking place.

Historical realities show that right from their birth the Soviet Union -- the first socialist state -- and other fraternal socialist countries have been compelled to cope with many wars of intervention or sabotage waged by imperialism. The protracted and continuous struggle of our people against the imperialist aggressors and international reactionaries for nearly 40 years has also reflected the fierce nature of that struggle.

Today, in addition to building socialism and communism, all countries of the socialist community are compelled to pay constant attention to strengthening their national defense potentials in order to carry out the complex struggle against the enemy's schemes and acts of provocation, encirclement, sabotage, subversion and armed aggression and for the preservation of national sovereignty and independence and the fruits of socialism.

It is a universal law of the socialist revolution to carry out national construction along with national defense. The fifth party congress has noted that our country is now in a quasi-peaceful state as we still have to cope with a multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, as well as to stand ready to deal with the situation in which the enemy could launch a large-scale war of aggression.

From the international background and situation in our country and thoroughly aware that national construction must be carried out along with national defense, the party congress has determined two strategic tasks -- to build socialism successfully and to remain combat ready to defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland firmly.

The multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Beijing reactionaries against our people is a perfidious and cruel war. Militarily, they have permanently deployed a massive force close to our northern border to carry out provocations and conduct landgrabbing operations regularly in hopes of occupying part of our territory to build fortifications, dig trenches and build additional airstrips in preparation for their war of aggression.

Politically and ideologically, they have stepped up their psychological warfare in an attempt to sow division among various nationalities, between our people and our party and within the party itself, as well as to inject the venom of decadent culture into our country. In addition, they have sent in their spies and scouts to establish contact with and rally the reactionary elements in the hope of creating opposqtion activities and rebellions.

Economically they have used their henchmen hiding in our country to sabotage various economic installations, undermine the currency system and disrupt the market. They have coordinated with the imperialists in pursuing an economic embargo against our country, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and international reactionary forces in plotting to isolate our country in the international arena. In addition, they have continuously launched campaigns, including the use of the UN forum, to slander, distort and tarnish our country's image, sow division between our country and other countries and entice the ASEAN countries to oppose our country and the other Indochinese countries.

The reactionary clique among the Beijing ruling circles is actually our people's direct and dangerous enemy while imperialism, headed by the United States, is our fundamental and long-term enemy. Our people's struggle against Chinese expansionism and hegemonism is a protracted, hard and extremely complex struggle. As long as the Beijing ruling circles continue to pursue a scheme to weaken and annex our country or carry out a policy of hostility against our people, we must remain vigilant and ready to defeat them in all types of wars. The two strategic tasks -- building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland -- are closely related.

By successfully building socialism, we will be able to make our country stronger in all aspects, constantly improve our people's livelihood, strengthen our regime and national defense capacity and maintain political security and social order and safety. Meanwhile, by strengthening our national defense forces and making our armed forces powerful, we will always be able to defend our country firmly and defeat the enemy in its multifaceted war of sabotage, thereby contributing significantly to the struggle to build socialism successfully.

Our country must remain strong, our people's livelihood must be further improved and the political and spiritual unanimity of our society must be consolidated. These are the material and moral conditions necessary for repelling the danger of a war of aggression and preserving peace.

The party congress has pointed out the need to implement these two strategic tasks fully so as to achieve new progress in the struggle for socialist construction and to create a combined and growing strength for the struggle to defend the country and maintain political security and social order and safety. These two strategic tasks must also be implemented fully and specifically by all localities, grassroots units, enterprises, villages, hamlets, organs, districts, precincts and provinces and cities, as well as by all sectors operating throughout the country. These are the guiding thoughts for the second phase of the congress and for all party organizations.

The party congress has affirmed that our people are fully capable of carrying out these two heavy tasks simultaneously. As pointed out by the congress, all is for the socialist fatherland and the people's happiness. That is the slogan of action for our entire party, people and armed forces. That is also the noble and sacred duty that our people, from this generation on, will have to shoulder in the face of the nation's history.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial

[Text] Integrating the collective wisdom of the entire party, the Fifth VCP Congress unanimously adopted the party Central Committee political report, the report on orientations, tasks and main targets in the economic and social fields for the 1981-85 and the 1980's and the report on party building and the amendment of the party statutes.

Over the past years we have further concretized the correct general lines of the socialist revolution set forth by the Fourth VCP Congress. The fifth congress resolutions are the main lines of action and the focal point expressing our people's uniform views and actions on striving to push our revolution further forward in the new state. From now on, organizing a comprehensive revolutionary movement and the implementation of the congress resolutions in order to turn them into lively reality are very great and important tasks for our entire party, people and the armed forces.

To carry out the congress resolutions triumphantly, first of all we must understand them thoroughly. This task requires scrupulous implementation in order to obtain concrete and best results. The resolutions must be clearly understood by the entire army, people and the armed forces so that everyone may understand his tasks and duty and firmly grasp the revolutionary line and various strategic positions and objectives set forth by the party congress.

The requirement for a thorough understanding of the congress resolutions is that we must firmly grasp the general problems of the national revolutionary cause in the coming years and the orientations and tasks of each individual locality, sector, unit and person.

To implement the congress resolutions satisfactorily, we must create an identity of views among the people on the nation's situation, the revolutionary line and tasks in order to form a uniform view that will lead to a uniform action. As a result, every locality, establishment and individual must have a program of action in order to carry out the congress resolutions triumphantly.

Regarding our army, along with efforts to study general problems, the army must enable all officers and combatants to understand the duty of the army in the new revolutionary stage. To understand the congress resolutions we must not only discuss related documents, but must also study the realities of the revolution and the armed forces so that we may correctly evaluate the situation, realize favorable and unfavorable conditions and understand our duties and tasks clearly in order to fulfill the set targets satisfactorily.

Each unit and each person must combine study with self-criticism and criticism in order scrupulously to review his thinking and evaluate his performances in carrying out his duty and function; correctly assess his finished, unfinished and unsatisfactory tasks, realize strong points that must be developed and weak points that must be overcome; and find out the root causes of subjectivism. This will help each collective and individual draw various useful lessons to improve their thinking and action in order to fulfill their tasks more effectively.

The implementation of the congress resolutions cannot be finished quickly or through one drive but must be carried out consistently and continuously on a long-term basis and in close association with the process of action. This task must be carried out repeatedly in accordance with the principle and through reality, struggle and evaluation in order gradually to grasp the resolutions firmly and profoundly, then implement them more creatively and more effectively.

Various leader and command echelons, party members, officers and combatants of our army are determined satisfactorily to organize the study of the congress resolutions in order to create a high identity of views in the entire army on the strategic line and basic viewpoints of the congress, especially on the further path of the revolution. This will enable all officers and combatants clearly to understand the duty and responsiblity of each unit and individual, encourage them to unite and strive to implement the congress resolutions triumphantly and turn these resolutions into real and concrete results, especially the task of building the army and units and in improving themselves in order to contribute most effectively to fulfilling the two strategic revolutionary tasks of building and defending the socialist fatherland.

He continued: "We hold that in the light of the resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress, the Vietnamese people will make more important advances in both socialist construction and national defence. The Fifth VCP Congress constitutes a great assistance to the struggle against our common enemy".

SUZUKI MEETS ROK ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION CHAIRMAN

[Text] Tokyo, April 13 [KYODO] -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday he was thinking of offering as much economic aid as possible to South Korea, even though Japan has not yet emerged completely from the second oil shock and tax revenues are falling faster than expected. He said he hoped for early settlement of a South Korean request for dollar 6 billion in aid for its five-year economic development plan which started this year.

Suzuki made the statement to Pak Tae-chun, chairman of the Korea-Japan Economic Association, when the latter called on the premier at his official residence.

Pak is here to attend the 14th joint private-level conference of the Japan-Korea and Korea-Japan economic councils which began a three-day session Tuesday.

The South Korean business leader asked for Suzuki's continued efforts on the economic assistance issue, saying that every Korean was watching the matter with keen interest.

In his briefing to Prime Minister Suzuki, Pak said the South Korean economy was gradually recovering from the worst situation in 1980, but no optimism was warranted. In reply, Suzuki said his Cabinet ministers concerned are now consulting each other over the Korean aid request.

Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, Finance Minister Michio Watanabe and Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa discussed the aid issue after the regular Cabinet session Tuesday morning.

The finance minister later told newsmen he had refused to accept the Foreign Ministry's idea to sharply increase economic aid to Seoul on a package basis. Watanabe said his ministry has not changed its position that Japan should double its economic aid to South Korea over five years from current fiscal 1982 beginning this month, compared with the previous five years, but that it should be dealt with on a project-by-project basis.

Watanabe said he would discuss the issue again this week with the two ministers, stressing a hope to settle the problem before Foreign Minister Sakurauchi's expected visit to Seoul in May.

The delegation led by Kang Keqing, president of the All-China Women's Federation, plans to exchange views with its Japanese counterparts during the tour.

The visit is in commemoration of the 10th anniversary of the normalization of the Japan-China diplomatic relations. The delegation will pay a courtesy call on Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki. It will also take part in meetings in both Tokyo and Osaka before returning home on April 23.

ARREST OF PRIEST IN PUSAN ARSON INCIDENT NOTED

[Text] Pyongyang, April 12 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique is stretching its tentacles of suppression to many religionists after the fire at the "American Cultural Centre" in Pusan, according to a report.

On April 5 the fascist clique walked to the police priest Choe Ki-sik, head of the Wonju Catholic parochial school in Wonju, South Korean Kangwon Province. The fascist clique searched the houses of Choe Ki-sik and many other believers and seized over 100 books. The fascist clique committed this outrage against the priest because he protected the safety of Mun Pu-sik and Kim Un-suk who set fire to the "American Cultural Centre" and enlisted in the school Kim Hyon-chang, participant in the Kwangju popular uprising, who had connections with them.

On April 6 the fascists also arrested and imprisoned Ho Chin-su, a religionist, who was first vice-chairman of the Federation of the Youth Societies of the Presbyterian Association in Pusan because he had connections with young people who set fire to the "American Cultural Centre." They also arrested and interrogated Chon Cha-sok, manager of the peasants society of the Chonju Catholic parish in North Cholla Province, O Pyong-kun, deacon of the Chonju Central Church, Kim Yun-sok, priest of the Chinan Catholic Church, Kang In-chan, priest of the Chongup Catholic Church, and Kim Pong-hui, secretary of the Chonju Catholic parish.

The fascist clique is extending the investigation to the Urban Industrial Missionary Association, claiming that Yi Chang-pok, a religionist, who was arrested together with priest Choe Ki-sik, head of the Wonju Catholic parochial school, had contact, while working as the manager of the Urban Industrial Missionary Association, with Kim Hyon-chang who had participated in the Kwangju popular uprising.

The Chon Tu-hwan military hooligans have launched a new vicious offensive against religionists because anti-"government" sentiments are running high among them synchronizing with the intensified patriotic action of students.

VRPR DENIES CHOE'S INVOLVEMENT IN ANTI-CHON PLOT

SK120112 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 11 Apr 82

[Text] The NEW KOREA TIMES, a newspaper published by Korean residents in Canada, carries in its 27 March edition the following statement issued by the Canadian Taekwondo Federation on 21 March:

1. We have been assured that both the president of the International Taekwondo Federation [Choe Hong-hui] and instructor Choe Chung-hwa had nothing to do with the plot to assassinate Chon Tu-hwan.

2. The world knows that the South Korean regime has been engaged in fabricating many plots since the Pak regime. Being assured that the assassination plot could be a fabrication, we denounce the fact that certain Taekwondoists, who have fallen into the murderous regime's plot and instigation, are indiscrete enough to release, in the name of the [taekwondo] association, false statements to newspapers. It is our hope that this will become an opportunity for them, persons of the martial arts, to reconsider their behavior.

3. Taekwondo is a pure sport. It should not meddle in politics. Nor should it be taken advantage of by politics. Accordingly, promoting the spread of taekwondo throughout the North has nothing to do with politics. At a time when taekwondo has made inroads in many places of the world, including the Western world and East European countries, it is granted that we promote the spread of taekwondo, a national martial art, in the fatherland.

4. With taekwondo gaining ground and possibly to be included in the Olympic Games, we should res. ore international confidence by demonstrating our unity in the spirit of the martial arts.

5. We should neither be used in the plot hatched by [word indistinct] political profiteers nor embroiled in a political show designed to curb the rising movements for the reunification of the fatherland and the unity of taekwondo organizations.

["Text" of mourning address of KWP Central Committee and DPRK Central People's Committee delivered by Yim Chun-chu at 11 April burial service for Choe Hyon -- read by announcer]

[Text] Today in great sorrow we bid farewell to the late Comrade Choe Hyon, a faithful revolutionary fighter and close comrade in arms of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The heart of Comrade Choe Hyon, which on the road of the glorious struggle for the victory of the Korean revolution beat so vigorously for the party and the leader and for the fatherland and the people, has stopped beating.

Comrade Choe, a strong revolutionary fighter who devoted his life to the struggle against class enemies and an able military commander who scored great achievements in the revolutionary wars against the U.S. and Japan se imperialists, has to our regret ended his noble life and left us without seeing the fatherland's reunification. At this hour of bidding farewell to Comrade Choe Hyon, we are very much grieved at the loss of an outstanding activist of our party and state who has remained boundlessly loyal to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song since embarking on the road of the anti-Japanese revolution and who the respected and beloved leader cared for so much.

Late Comrade Choe Hyon was born on 8 June 1907 to an independence-fighter's family and at an early age participated in the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, burning with hatred against the Japanese imperialists and class enemies. Though arrested by reactionary military men and imprisoned for 7 years and 9 months, he continued the revolutionary struggle.

Joining the glorious anti-Japanese armed struggle organized and led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, Comrade Choe Hyon courageously fought against the Japanese imperialists for 15 years and, holding important military posts, devoted himself to the struggle for the fatherland's liberation and sovereignty. In the days of the arduous anti-Japanese armed struggle, he defended and implemented chuche-oriented revolutionary lines and struggle policies advanced by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and worked hard to provide organizational and ideological foundations for founding the party and to expand and strengthen the united anti-Japanese front.

As a military commander he made outstanding exploits to ensure victory in the anti-Japanese war. Becoming an able military commander who took charge of a major unit, under the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, he demonstrated his boundless loyalty and devotion to the implementation of the respected and beloved leader's strategies and the commander in chief's orders and instructions. By defeating the enemies, who were superior in number and military skills, he always ensured victories in combat. In every battle against the Japanese imperialist aggressors, he was an iron-willed commander who was fearless in any situation and an able commander who always rendered severe blows to the enemies. Remembered in our people's historic victory in the anti-Japanese struggle are the exploits of Comrade Choe, who, seething with warm revolutionary enthusiasm, patriotism and the revolutionary spirit of persistence, dedicated himself to the struggle for the fatherland's liberation, bivouacking for a long period of time.

Upholding the line for founding the party, the nation and the army put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song after the liberation, Comrade Choe Hyon dedicated himself to the work of founding our party, the people's government and the People's Army and devotedly struggled for the fatherland's independence and sovereignty and construction of a new society. He staunchly defended and protected the party and the leader politically and ideologically at the risk of his life in the chaotic situation immediately after liberation. Holding the position of regimental commander of the training center for the cadres of the security forces and commander of the 3rd Security Brigade of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, Comrade Choe Hyon devotedly struggled to strengthen and develop our People's Revolutionary Armed Forces into a modern regular army and to defend revolutionary bases in the northern half from the enemy's repeated aggressions.

Standing in the first rank of the units advancing south during the first offensive in the fatherland liberation war, Comrade Choe Hyon drove the U.S. imperialist aggressors and the puppet army to the Naktong River by organizing and victoriously commanding a number of battles and greatly contributed to liberating the territory and the people of South Korea.

During the difficult period of the strategic retreat during the fatherland liberation war, he succeeded in building the second front in the broad area in the enemy's rear, surviving many life-or-death crises, by upholding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's ideas and plans. He organized and carried out fierce military and political activities even amid sieges by the enemy by overcoming trials, dealing repeated blows at the enemy from behind and creating faith in victory for the people in the rear areas. The activities of the reconnaissance units he commanded played a key role in surrounding and crushing the enemy, who sneaked into the northern half of the republic, and in reversing a temporary retreat into a new offensive. Comrade Choe Hyon, upholding the outstanding strategic and tactical policies of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, crushed the enemy's offensive by skillfully organizing and carrying out offensive and defensive battles on major fronts including Hill 1211, smashing the troops of the enemy, and crushed the enemys strategy. Thus, he made great contributions to expanding the effectiveness of the People's Army and winning the final victory of the fatherland liberation war.

Upholding the unique revolutionary lines and policy of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song after the war, Comrade Choe Hyon devoted his energy to the struggle to estalish a most advanced socialist system in this land by successfully implementing the socialist revolution and construction and to change our nation into a powerful socialist state enjoying independence, self-reliance and self-defense.

Thus, he made great contributions to defending our socialist fatherland and revolutionary gains from the aggression of the enemy.

He was elected member of the party Central Committee at the Third KWP Congress in April 1956, member of the Political Committee of the party Central Committee in October 1966 and member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and member of the Military Affairs Commission of the party Central Committee in October 1980. He remained a deputy to the Supreme People's Assembly [SPA] from the second SPA in 1957 to the present. He was elected a member of the Central People's Committee in 1972.

While holding responsible positions in the party and the nation, Comrade Choe Hyon dedicated his life to the struggle to strengthen and develop our party, consolidate the nation's social system and accelerate our revolution and construction. He tenaciously safeguarded our party's unity and cohesion from maneuvers by the enemies at home and abroad and energetically struggled to consolidate the political and ideological unity of the party and all the people, based on the chuche idea. Comrade Choe Hyon, following the road indicated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, actively tried to expedite the independent reunification of the fatherland and enhance the international position of our party and our republic.

The life of Comrade Choe Hyon is the life of a revolutionary fighter boundlessly loyal to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the life of an indomitable revolutionary and genuine communist who dedicated everything to the party and the revolution. Deeply cherishing the belief that holding in high esteem the respected leader was the primary duty of Korean Communists ever since he set out on the road of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, he staunchly defended and protected the leader politically and ideologically by holding in high esteem the great Comrade Kim Il-song with unhsaken loyalty to him. He uncompromisingly struggled against all maneuvers by the enemy. Firmly believing that the road indicated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the most correct way for the nation's prosperity and the victory of the revolution, Comrade Choe Hyon accepted the respected leader's idea and teachings and thoroughly safeguarded and implemented them based on the principle of absoluteness and unconditionality.

Treasuring the glorious title and lofty political life of a communist revolutionary fighter, he trained himself in a revolutionary manner and endlessly loved the people and the revolutionary comrades, unsparingly offering his all to them. Speaks at Nonaligned Meeting

[Speech by Ho Tam, vice-premier and foreign minister of the DPRK, at the 6 April ministerial conference of the Coordinating Committee of Nonaligned Countries on the Palestine Question -- read by announcer]

[Text] Saying that he was very pleased that the extraordinary ministerial conference of the Coordinating Committee of Nonaligned Countries on the Palestinian Question was held in Kuwait, Ho Tam expressed deep thanks to the government and people of Kuwait for making great and sincere efforts in preparing for the meeting.

Noting that the Zionists, under the protection of the U.S. imperialists, nave long been maneuvering to strangle the Arab and Palestinian peoples' struggle for the national liberation and to put the Middle East area under their domination, he denounced the Israeli aggressors for nakedly maneuvering to permanently make the occupied Arab territory their own.

Noting that every fact clearly indicates that the Zionists who are thirsty for territorial expansion are dreaming of setting up an Israeli empire in the Middle East, he said: We should no longer allow Israel to commit brigandish aggressive acts freely in the Middle East. The government and people of the DPRK scathingly denounce the criminal acts of the Israeli aggressors and the U.S. imperialists in intensifying their hostile policy toward the Palestinian people and other Arab people and increasing the danger of another war in this area. They are supporting and sending wholehearted solidarity to the Palestinian people's struggle to regain their legal rights and achieve their national liberation and independence and the struggle of all Arab people to safeguard their national dignity and territorial integrity.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the president of the DPRK, has taught: Our people will, as in the past, always stand by the brave Palestinian people, who are waging armed struggle to liberate their fatherland, and by the entire Arab people, who are firmly struggling against Zionism and against imperialist aggression. Our people will advance shoulder to shoulder with Arab people in the anti-imperialism and anti-U.S. struggle. Today, the Arab people are waging a vigorous struggle against the imperialists and the Israeli aggressors. This struggle by the Arab people is a just one waged to safeguard their national dignity and independence, to regain occupied Arab territories and to achieve the Palestinian people's cause for liberation.

We reaffirm that the Korean people will always remain a reliable comrade in arms of the Arab people in the courageous struggle against Zionism and imperialist aggression.

To solve the Palestinian question is, at present, one of the most urgent questions arising for peace and security in the Middle East and, furthermore, in the world. The Palestinian question is the key problem in solving the Middle East question and, for this reason, without solving this problem, we cannot think of any solution for the Middle East question.

For this very reason, today, all the progressive force and peace-loving people in the world unanimously hope that the Palestinian question will be justly solved and are positively struggling to this end.

The people's struggle against domination and enslavement and the struggle for independence and liberation are closely linked. To struggle for a fair solution of the Palestinian question is our common task to crush the policy of war and aggression of the imperialists and the Zionists in the Middle East area and to defend the national dignity, territorial stability and peace and security of the nations in this area.

Hoping that the conference will make another advance in removing all the obstacles to the liberation cause of the Palestinian people and in promoting the solution of the Palestinian question, the DPRK delegation considers that to substantially contribute to an early solution of the Palestine question and a fair settlement of the Middle East problem as a whole, the conference should sincerely discuss and decide upon practical measures with deep attention to the following points:

Firstly, to make Israel unconditionall dissolve the colonial settlements in Palestine and other Arab territories, completely withdraw from all occupied Arab territories, nullify without delay the illegal laws on annexing the Golan Heights of Syria and proclaiming Jerusalem as its capital and end all its aggressive and interventionist policies against the Arab countries;

Secondly, to make all countries of the world recognize the inalienable legal national rights of the Palestinian people, including the right to restore Palestine, their homeland, and return home, the right to self-determination and the right to found an independent state, and make them strengthen political, moral, diplomatic and material assistance, military assistance included, to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian people;

Thirdly, to make all countries including the United States discontinue any act of abetting the expansionist ambition of the Zionists and political, economic and military assistance to Israel in particular; and Fourthly, to make all the countries of the world respect the resolutions of the Nonaligned Movement on taking all-round sanctions against Israel and to completely isolate the Zionists on ths international scene.

Even though the dominating imperialist forces are now frantically struggling to maintain and expand their domination in every corner of the world, the people's struggle for freedom, independence, national dignity and sovereignty is greatly surging with each passing day and making an endless advance.

The wise and courageous Palestinian people, who have a long history and cultural tradition, are achieving great victories in their heroic armed struggle against the imperialists and Zionists to regain their beloved fatherland.

If all the Arab countries, with their brilliant militant tradition and vast potential, firmly unite and wage struggle, they will surely triumph in their sacred cause for regaining the Palestinian people's national rights, occupied Arab territories and will defend their national dignity.

NODONG SINMUN PRAISES COMRADESHIP OF KIM IL-SONG

[Text] Pyongyang, April 10 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Friday devoted one whole page to a political essay headlined "Great Comrade." In the beginning the essay says: The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song! He is a great leader and great comrade. Trust in and love for man and comrades are his life and character; his extraordinary and great character as a revolutionary, hero and leader is the greatness of comrade.

In the first part the essay says: Respected Comrade Kim Il-song -- This august name is that of the great leader, the great comrade who, finding himself always among his comrades for revolution in his whole life, deeply trusted in his revolutionary comrades and led them to bring about the most brilliant victory in the history of the revolutionary struggle of the working class.

The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song's faith in man, faith in chuche emerged victorious and the idea of independence which flared up as a spark is now furiously spreading all over the world as an irresistible trend of our time. Belief in comrades and faith in comradeship was the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great faith of chuche in the revolution and man and his unshakable will.

Numerous thorny paths the great leader covered crossing the death line before his twenties were a great course of history through which he tried to find out one by one true revolutionary comrades who, having the same idea, would share life and death on the road of the Korean revolution. The secret of success, the factor of all victories in the Korean revolution, lies not in any power or assistance from outside but in almighty strength, the invincible might of revolutionary unity based on the immortal chuche idea and comradeship.

The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song: He is, indeed, the greatest comrade ever in human history; he ushered in the great era of chuche, a new era of history in this land, regarding our people as revolutionary comrades and regarding comrades and revolutionary comradeship as revolutionary wealth more precious than gold, as a weapon.

In the second part the essay says: The bosom of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the great bosom of a peerless, great comrade for his boundless trust in and love for revolutionary comrades. As the trust of the respected leader in revolutionary comrades is a fathomlessly deep and great love, it is conveyed for ever in countless legends of deep love, and he who once enjoys it does not forget it in his whole life. Legends about the love of the respected leader for revolutionary comrades and his trust in them are innumerable like stars in the sky and the love is boundless both for those who are alive and those who are dead.

The whole life devoted by the great leader to the revolution is a life devoted to trust in revolutionary comrades; the whole life devoted by him to the struggle is a life devoted to love for man and comrades. The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song's trust in and love for revolutionary comrades is a complete and devoted trust -- not hesitating even one's life for man and comrades from the philosophical faith that revolution cannot be made without trust in man and without trust in comrades. It is the supreme love -- regarding lofty sacrifice for man and comrades as the mission and duty of his whole life from the firm faith that only those who are ready to die for comrades can have genuine comradely relationship.

In the last, third part the essay says: The great leader is always with us. In the bosom of the great comrade we could cover the most glorious road of revolution, display the high honour of being the vanguards, pioneers of our time in realising the independence of the popular masses and see in reality a flowering paradise of the people which mankind had dreamt of for a long time.

In the bosom of the great comrade all of us have become his proud revolutionary soldiers, revolutionary comrades carrying on the Korean revolution. Let us repay the fathomlessly deep trust of the great comrade with an eternal faith and the boundless love of the great comrade with the loyalty to hold him in high esteem generation after generation!

This is the unshakable will and burning pledge of our people who are now holding the great leader in high esteem and following the glorious party. We, who have advanced from victory to victory firmly trusting only in the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song and following him in the past, will as ever win victory through any storm and stress under the guidance of the leader and the great party.

GOVERNMENT UNCOVERS THREE N. KOREAN 'SPY RINGS'

[Text] Seoul, April 13 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's Agency for National Security Planning (ANS) has uncovered three North Korean spy rings and arrested 10 operatives, it was announced Tuesday.

The ANS announcement said that the agency has rounded up a total of 18 suspects but freed seven of them after "exhortation," and referred one to the Seoul Disttict Prosecutor's office. Among those placed under formal arrest are An Su-nyon, 51, An Song-ok, 47, Kim Kun-yon, 59, and Kim Ki-hae, 48. They all belonged to a 16-member spy ring which has operated in Seoul and in Andong, North Kyongsang Province, since 1961.

The announcement said the four suspects and another four collaborators provided shelter for North Korean spies, made them bogus identification cards as senior staff members of Korean companies and arranged their visits to major government agencies in Seoul for information gathering. In addition, Kim, who once worked as a local correspondent for a newspaper, abused his status as a newsman by using a police jeep to observe the night-time activities of coastline guard posts with North Korean spies, according to the announcement.

The suspects and their collaborators have received instructions and operation funds totaling about 39,928 U.S. dollars from North Korea over the years, the announcement said.

Two other arrested men, Kim Chun-po, 40, and Kim Sang-ho, 25, have operated on their own, the ANS said. Kim Chun-po was trained by North Korean agents in Japan in 1966 and 1968. Based in Pohang, a southeastern port city, Kim was provided classified military information to a North Korean operative in Japan.

Kim Sang-no is a former construction worker who was employed by a Korean firm operating in Singapore. He kept in touch with the North Korean Embassy in Singapore last year and returned to South Korea in late 1981 to work as a spy for North Korea.

DEFECTORS DISCUSS CONCENTRATION CAMPS IN NORTH

[Text] North Korea has imprisoned an estimated 105,000 persons in concentration camps as ideological offenders in an effort to strengthen the autocratic sytstem of its leader Kim Il-song and groom his son Kim Chong-il as heir apparent, it was learned yesterday.

According to defectors from North Korea and specialists in North Korean affairs, concentration camps scattered across remote mountain areas are surrounded by rings of iron fences, live barbed wire entanglements and mine fields. Among prominent persons confined in concentration camps are Kim To-man who once served as a secretary of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Korean Worker's Party; Yi Yong-mu, former director of the General Political Bureau of the People's Army; and Pak Kum-chol, former vice chairman of the Central Committee of the Korea Workers' Party.

Shortly after the ceasefire in 1953, the North Korean regime began building concentration camps in secluded mountain areas which were filled with those opposing Kim's policies beginning in the early 1970's, according to them. Included are those deemed as disloyal to the Workers' Party, those objecting to junior Kim's succession to senior Kim, families of defectors to the Republic of Korea and expatriates from Japan, they said.

Those ideological offenders are named antiparty, antirevolutionary or secessionists and many die of starvation or disease, they said. The concentration camps are off limits and districts for special autocracy are despersed in Onsong-gun, Hoeryong-gun and Kyongsong-gun in Hamgyong Pukto; Yodok-gun and Chongpyong-gun in Hamgyong Namdo; Yongchon-gun and Yongbyong-gun in Pyongan Pukdo; and Huichon-gun in Changang-do, they said.

The defectors and Pyongyang watchers said the number of prisoners is on the increase because of the so-called dangerous elements of those who recently opposed the establishment of the hereditary system for junior Kim.

The camps are surrounded by rings of iron fences, electrified barbed wire and a mind field. The inmates barely exist on potatoes and herbal roots, are deprived of medical care, and subjected to forced labor, they said. Specifically, the detainees are forced to work 12 hours a day, mostly in coal mining or land reclamation. The prisoners must find their own food by planting potatoes and maize inside camps guarded around the clock by soldiers armed with machine-guns.

Once ideological offenders are sent to concentration camps, they are usually interned there for life, and when a prisoner dies of starvation, sheer exhaustion or disease, his remains are never turned over to his family or relatives. Many inmates were shot to death in the summer of 1974 and 1976 while attempting to escape from a concentration camp in Onsong-gun, a North Korean defector said.

These allegations were substantiated by Kim Yong-chun, who defected to Seoul Jan. 7, after serving as one of the agents of the North Korean State Political Security Affairs Agency (secret police). The statements were also attested by Sin Yong-man, a North Korean espionage agent who defected to the Japanese police in 1977, and Kang Hyong-sun, a former officer in the North Korea secret police who defected to the republic in 1979.

The North Korean regime calls the concentration camps districts for special autocracy. North Koreans are educated to regard repression on "elements detrimental to the creation of a communist society" as just and proper, it is said.

The Kim Il-song regime, in a sweeping purge that began in December 1958, started executing, imprisoning or expelling those classified as antirevolutionary. In 1966, the regime classified North Korean residents into three categories and began to imprison the "dangerous elements" in the concentration camps. In 1973, the regime was found to begin to name concentration camps districts for special autocracy to detain ideological offenders. The communist regime classifies North Koreans into three categories: Core class, treacherous class and hostile class.

KACL Denounces Camps

[Text] The Korean Anti-Communist League (KACL) denounced North Korea yesterday for its inhuman acts against the northern brethren held in concentration camps, calling on Pyongyang to stop immediately such "intolerable" atrocities.

Issuing a statement, KACL accused North Korea of forcing more than 100,000 people to starve, freeze to death and suffer fatal diseases in the isolated camps.

Noting the increasing dissatisfaction of many northern brethern with the nepotism policy pursued by Kim Il-song, KACL said that Kim Il-song and his heir-apparent son Chong-il should repent their crimes publicly before the innocent people.

PROBLEMS CITED WITH KIM CHONG-IL SUCCESSION

SK130006 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 12 Apr 82

[Text] The North Korean puppets, who are concentrating on resolving the succession issue of Kim Chong-il, have issued an order to all members of the KWP Central Committee not to leave Pyongyang because of the resistance of some party members in connection with the recent Supreme People's Assembly session, it has been learned.

Correspondent Chong Yun-sok now reports from Tokyo on the details of this report: [begin recording] TONGIL ILBO, published in Tokyo today, reports that all members of the KWP Central Committee have been ordered not to leave Pyongyang. According to an expert on Korean affairs, the reason for such an order is to prevent continuation of serious resistance to Kim Chong-Il's succession.

The newspaper also reports that the Fifth Plenum of the KWP Central Committee convened 2 days before the convocation of the Supreme People's Assembly on 5 April and that such a sudden convocation of the plenum was believed to be a result of strong demands from lower echelons of the party.

Experts on North Korean affairs report that young KWP members and young soldiers are resisting moves opposing the succession of Kim Chong-il and that riots and disturbances protesting the arrogance of members of the three revolution teams, which are under direct control of Kim Chong-il, are taking place throughout North Korea.

Finding that convocation of the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly session would be impossible, the KWP had to suddenly convene its plenum to settle this issue, the same sources reported. [end recording]

LOAN TALKS WITH JAPAN REPORTEDLY STALEMATED

[Text] Seoul, April 13 (YONHAP) -- The Korean-Japanese negotiations over Seoul's request for Japan's Government loans are far from over because of the two countries' large differences of opinion on the amount and terms of the loans.

A diplomatic source said here Tuesday that the future of the proposed Korean and Japanese foreign ministry's conference in early May to seek a package political solution to the economic cooperation is very uncertain because the scope and terms of loans now under consideration of the Tokyo government are far from what Seoul has requested.

Quoting Japanese newspaper reports the source siad the Japanese Government was weighing a plan to offer only four billion U.S. dollars in loans, 1.5 billion in official development aid (ODA) credits and 2.5 billion in loans from the Japanese Export-Import Bank at an annual interest rate of six percent. Seoul has requested that six billion dollars be extended in ODA credits and four billion in Ex-Im Bank loans.

If Japan fails to make a new offer by the time Japanese Ambassador to Seoul Toshikazu Maeda returns to Seoul from Tokyo in a couple of days, it possibly will strain Korean-Japanese relations, the source predicted.

Noting that the amount and terms of the loans now under Tokyo's consideration are unacceptable to Seoul, the source called upon Tokyo to take into account "the special relations between the two countries" and offer a reasonable alternative, instead of pursuing only its own "economic interests."

HENG SAMRIN MESSAGE GREETS TRADITIONAL NEW YEAR

[New year greetings message from Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the PRK Council of State, to all compatriots -- recorded]

[Text] Dear comrade cadres, personnel and workers of all state institutions; dear comrades cadres, male and female combatants of the armed forces of the three categories; dear compatriots throughout the country; dear Kampuchean residents abroad:

The traditional new year festival of our nation has come. We joyfully welcome this traditional new year -- the year of the dog of the year 2526 of the Buddhist era -- which falls on 13 April 1982. Following the victorious day of 7 January 1979, this is the fourth traditional festival of our Kampuchean nation in a PRK which is full of peace, independence, freedom and happiness. Under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the KPRP and the KUFNCD, particularly under the beacon of the resolutions of the fourth party congress, over the past 3 years our entire army has made every effort for the common cause of our Kampuchean revolution. We are proud to state joyfully that all these achievements have enabled our beloved Kampuchean fatherland to revive.

On behalf of the party and state, I welcome and praise all the efforts made by the entire army and people who have fulfilled and are fulfilling the tasks of defending and building our fatherland. I am confident that in this new year all of us will unite even more firmly under the banner of leadership of the party and front. I extend best wishes to all the people and the entire army. May you enjoy good health, happiness and lively, creative ingenuity. FOREIGN MINISTRY REJECTS UN HUMAN RIGHTS PACT

[Text] Phnom Penh, 12 Apr (SPK) -- The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the PRK today issued a statement on the latest UN Human Rights Commission conference in Geneva, which adopted a resolution on 25 February which constitutes another glaring interference in the internal affairs of the PRK. Here is the text of the statement:

The latest UN Human Rights Commission conference held in Geneva on 25 February adopted a resolution which constitutes another glaring interference in the internal affairs of the PRK.

In fact, with Resolution E/C.N. 4 1982/L2, the conference pretended to ignore the reality in Kampuchea and let itself be used by the genocidal criminals and their accomplices to cover up their monstrous crimes against the innocent people of Kampuchea. It also pretended to be concerned about the destiny of this martyred people while the authors of this above-mentioned resolution are still dead set against the rebirth of a people of survivors, reduced by 3 million souls massacred by the bloodthirsty regime of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang. The conference has therefore betrayed the trust of the world's peace- and justice-loving peoples when it diverted from its goals and principles by serving as an instrument of propaganda for the genocidal criminals shamelessly supported by the reactionary, expansionist and imperialist forces.

The PRK has already rejected any resolution of the conference concerning Kampuchea adopted without the participation of its representatives. It rejects and energetically condemns Resolution E/C.N. 4 1982/L2 as an unacceptable interference in its internal affairs.

Attending the meeting in the presidium were Comrade Yos Por, secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council; Comrade Van Sunheng, acting director general of Radio Voice of the Kampuchean People; Comrade (Mean Phoen), member of the Prey Veng Provincial Party Committee; and Comrade Cheam Yiep, chairman of the Prey Veng Provincial People's Revolutionary Committee. Attending the meeting were hundreds of delegates from all offices, units, districts and communes in the province.

After the comrade chairman of the provincial people's revolutionary committee made an opening speech and the provincial KUFNCD committee's report was read, Comrade Yos Por, secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council, spoke, highly appraising the province's revolutionary authorities for their efforts to surmount all obstacles and score brilliant achievements in all aspects. The comrade stressed: These achievements are the outcome of the outstanding labor of our people in the province who have united closely and striven to fulfill all tasks assigned by the party and the front in order to contribute to the defense and construction of our beautiful Angkor land, making it advance toward socialism in accordance with authentic Marxism-Leninism.

The comrade secretary general added: Since the 7 January 1979 liberation day when we emerged from the dark era under the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime, the PRK has only enjoyed a new life for 3 years. In this short period of time, we began our national defense and construction work by facing many complicated difficulties because the genocidal regime destroyed almost all of our national establishments in terms of people, materiel and social life. However, through our united efforts, our authorities and people have rebuilt our national establishments, national economy and state institutions and succeeded in normalizing our people's lives, thus enabling the prestige of the PRK to soar high at home and abroad.

In conclusion, the comrade exhorted all participants to thoroughly study the report of the meeting in order to clearly publicize it in accordance with the line and policy of the KUFNCD and KPRP, to consolidate and expand their views, stand and sense of national unity and international solidarity, particularly solidarity with the Vietnamese friends which is the vital factor of our revolution, and to strive to fulfill successfully the tasks of national defense and construction.

[Text] During his trip to attend the second meeting of the Prey Veng Provincial KUFNCD Committee, Comrade Yos Por, secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council, visited and extended new year greetings to the KPRAF and VPA troops in the Prey Veng provincial seat. After listening to a report by Comrade (Thong Sas), vice chairman of the Prey Veng provincial military command, on military developments in the province, Comrade Yos Por described the history of the traditional struggle of the Khmer Issarak forces who united harmoniously and fought shoulder to shoulder in the same trenches against the French and Japanese imperialists and colonialists, U.S. imperialists, Chinese big-nation hegemonists and expansionists, the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and other reactionary Khmers who opposed our revolution, thus winning great victories unprecedented in history. The comrade added: These great and brilliant victories were made possible thanks to firm national unity and international solidarity, particularly solidarity with the Vietnamese and Lao friends. Following liberation on 7 January 1979, all of us have united closely and struggled resolutely, daring to sacrifice even our lives for the construction of our nation and for the cause of our revolution. This noble sacrifice clearly attests to the fact that our revolutionary army and people have firm confidence in the KPRP which pursues a correct and clear-sighted line for the building of the country in the advance toward genuine socialism in accordance with authentic Marxism-Leninism.

The comrade stressed: In order to defend and make our revolutionary gains develop more effectively and vigorously, our revolutionary army, people and cadres must strengthen and expand their stand, views and consciousness in order to crush all maneuvers of the enemy of all categories attempting to sabotage our Kampuchean revolution.

In conclusion, the comrade gave some advice on how to carry out successfully all the immediate tasks assigned by the party and people.

The visit ended after a representative of the KPRAF pledged to fulfill all tasks in service of the revolution and people.

DK ISSUES STATEMENT URGING SRV TO WITHDRAW

BK121110 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 11 Apr 82

["Democratic Kampuchean Government statement calling on the Vietnamese people, youth, troops and politicians to be aware of the unprecedented deep-rooted and widening split within the Vietnamese party due to setbacks in the war of aggression against Kampuchea and to increase their activities in order to quickly end the Le Duan clique's war of aggression against Kampuchea" -- dated 9 April; read by announcer]

[Text] The Fifth Congress of the VCP clearly reflected the deep-rooted and widening rift within the VCP, which is unprecedented in the years since its birth in 1930. This rift and conflict has emanated from various problems, especially the Le Duan clique's policy of aggression against Kampuchea.

1. Due to the Le Duan clique's policy of aggression and genocide against Kampuchea and the failure of this policy, chaos and insecurity are spreading throughout Vietnam. The Vietnamese people and youth have become more furious and suffered even more seriously because the Le Duan clique has intensified its recruitment of troops to fight and die on the battlefield in Kampuchea. This is why the Vietnamese people and youth have risen up and waged in all forms of struggle, including armed struggle, against the Le Duan clique in all areas -- the northern, central and southern parts of Vietnam.

2. Due to the Le Duan clique's policy of aggression against Kampuchea, Vietnam's economic, financial and social situation has deteriorated to its lowest point. The Hanoi clique's state, military and police organs are only able to function now with daily supplies of aid from the Soviet Union. Without the Soviet aid, the Le Duan clique will collapse immediately. To repay it for the Soviet aid, the Le Duan clique has sold out its national independence, sovereignty and honor and turned Vietnam into military bases for the Soviet Union to use in implementing its expansionists strategy in Southeast Asia, Asia and the Pacific. Worse still, in order to repay the Soviet debt, the Le Duan clique has sent hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese people and workers to the Soviet Union and some Eastern European countries, which are satellites of the Soviet Union, where they have been forced to do hard and dangerous labor.

3. Due to this policy of aggression against Kampuchea, the Le Duan clique has been strongly condemned by world opinion and has become extremely isolated in the international arena. The peace-and justice-loving countries throughout the world have continued to suspend their economic and financial aid to the Le Duan clique in order to pressure it to withdraw all troops from Kampuchea. Thus, the Le Duan clique's tight economic and financial situation has worsened even more seriously.

4. The Kampuchean people resolutely oppose the Le Duan clique's policy of aggression and genocide against Kampuchea. They have risen up and waged a valiant struggle, together with the Democratic Kampuchean national army and guerrillas under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government, thus causing the more than 300,000 members of the Vietnamese aggressor forces -- troops and administrative personnel -- to become deeply bogged down and to move toward total defeat in the future. It was this defeat on the Kampuchean battlefield that has brought about the rifts both within the Vietnamese party, army and state and among the people. Inside the party, before the convening of the Fifth VCP Congress, the Le Duan clique expelled 86,000 members from the party. During the fifth party congress, almost 50 percent of the members of the party Central Committee and Political Bureau were purged. The fact that six members of the Political Bureau were expelled by the Le Duan clique reflects the full scope of the unprecedented rifts within the leading organ of the Vietnamese Hanoi clique. First, this purge has caused a split and instability in all circles -- security, economy, financial -- both in the north and south. Secondly, the Le Duan clique has only kept some other persons in their position temporarily, just to conceal its isolation. Those persons who were selected to fill the vancanies in the Political Bureau are uninfluencial persons comparing with those who were purged. These persons have been selected by the Le Duan clique only because they are henchmen in implementing the clique's policy of aggression and genocide against Kampuchea and the Indochina federation strategy.

Whether the Le Duan clique's war of aggression and genocide will win or lose depends on the following fundamental factors: 1) Whether the Kampuchean people, who are suffering from the Vietnamese aggression, will or will not fight; 2) whether the Vietnamese people support or oppose the war of aggression against Kampuchea; 3) whether the world supports or opposes the war of aggression against Kampuchea; and 4) the most important, key factor: whether the leadership of this war of aggression is firmly united or rife with splits and conflicts.

Concerning these factors, facts indicate that the Kampuchean people are struggling resolutely under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government against the Vietnamese Le Duan clique's war of aggression and genocide. This can be attested to by events on the Kampuchean battlefield, where the clique has been conducting this war of aggression and genocide for the past 3 rainy seasons and 4 dry seasons. The clique has no capability to conquer the Kampuchean people and the democratic Kampuchean national army and guerrillas. On the contrary, it has suffered serious losses in all areas. Moreover, the Vietnamese people and the whole world have opposed this war of aggression against Kampuchea. The top leading organs of the Le Duan clique are suffering from a serious internal split which cannot be resolved. This can be seen clearly now. This split has a tendency to widen and deepen. The Le Duan clique can never prevent this from happening. In such a situation, the Le Duan clique's policy of aggression against Kampuchea will eventually fail.

On this occasion, the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government appeals to the Vietnamese people, youth, troops and politicians in the Vietnamese party and state, particularly those who were purged and will be purged further by the Le Duan clique, to take a closer look at the cause which has forced Vietnam and the Vietnamese people to suffer and face crisis in all aspects and which has impaired Vietnam's prestige and national honor in the international arena.

The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government has called on them to increase their activities more vigorously in order to quickly put an end to the Vietnamese Le Duan clique's war of aggression against Kampuchea. This war has brought nothing good to Vietnam and the Vietnamese people but has brought fatalities, suffering, grief, destruction and ruin to their national honor. The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government want nothing else but the total withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops and the aggressive war apparatus of the Vietnamese Le Duan clique so as to allow the Kampuchean people to decide their own destiny without outside interference, in accordance with the successive UN resolutions. When the Vietnamese Le Guan clique's troops and aggressive war apparatus are withdrawn from Kampuchea, our two neighboring countries and peoples will resume normal relations and coexist peacefully with each other in conformity with the interest of our two countries and peoples and the interest of peace and stability in Southeast Asia, so as to enable our two peoples to have time to improve their living conditions and to build and make their respective country prosperous.

As has been repeatedly declared, the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government will let bygones be bygones and will not demand any compensation. All we want is for the Vietnamese Le Duan troops to withdraw from Kampuchea so as to allow Kampuchea to remain an independent, unified, democratic, neutral and nonaligned country with territorial integrity.

PRC JOURNALISTS VISIT DK ZONE 2 MAR-2 APR

BK121132 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 11 Apr 82

[Text] A delegation representing two PRC newspapers, RENMIN RIBAO and Beijing RIBAO, led by (Huang Chiun), paid a visit to the Democratic Kampuchean zone from 2 March to 2 April. The delegation included five other members, namely: (Chun Huaiqong), (Mu Jen), (Wang Zeqong), (Sun Junyong) and (Jang Wanzu).

During its stay, the friendly Chinese journalist delegation visited many places in the Democratic Kampuchean zone, including villages, schools and hospitals. It attended an artistic show put on by the Malai region art troup and toured several battlefronts.

Prime Minister Khieu Samphan, Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary, Deputy Prime Minister Son Sen, Minister Thiounn Thioum, Minister Thiounn Thoeun, Minister Ieng Thirith, Minister Keat Chhon, Secretary of State Sar Kimlomuth, Secretary of State Chhorn Hay and the Chief of the General Staff of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea, and Vice Chairman Chhit Choeun, as well as several other personalities met with and granted separate interviews to the friendly Chinese journalists.

The delegation also interviewed our people, our combatants of the national army and guerrillas of Democratic Kampuchea, our female combatants of the transportation corps, intellectuals, local cadres, Kampucheans who fled from areas under the temporary control of the Vietnamese aggressors and several battlefield commanders.

The delegation was impressed by and greatly admired the lofty sense of heroism and self-denial displayed by the people ahd national army and guerrillas of our Democratic Kampuchea, who have endured all kinds of difficulties, overcome all obstacles with great courage and sacrificed their blood and flesh in the struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors to liberate the nation and country and safeguard their race. The people's sense of patriotism and pride and their confidence in the final victory were menifest wherever the delegation visited.

The delegation also witnessed the worsening plight of the Vietnamese enemy aggressors on the Kampuchean battlefields. They saw that the fact that the Vietnamese were trying to muster forces from left and right to launch offensives on a few battlefields in the dry season is merely at attempt to make up for their defeat and as part of their diplomatic maneuvering to fool public opinion. At present, the troops and equipment that they have painstakingly mobilized to serve their diplomatic designs and psychological maneuvers are being thrashed and battered and are suffering thousands of casualties every month. The trend is that the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, annexationists and exterminators of the Kampuchean race will suffer greater losses in the coming rainy season and will be completely defeated in the end.

On the occasion of the visit by the friendly Chinese journalists, the people and the national army and guerrillas of Democratic Kampuchea, as well as every leader of Democratic Kampuchea to whom they had talked, always expressed their profound thanks to the Chinese people and government for providing them with all kinds of moral, diplomatic and material aid and support in their struggle to achieve national liberation and protect their race.

On 2 April the friendly Chinese journalist delegation left Democratic Kampuchea for home, taking with them the feelings of profound brotherhood and friendship of our Kampuchean people for the friendly Chinese people and promising to disseminate among the Chinese people and the people of the world what they had heard and seen on the Kampuchean battlefield.

This booty included gas masks used by the Vietnamese troops in spraying toxic chemicals to exterminate our Kampuchea race.

Before ending their visit, the Spanish guests were received in audience at an office of the Democratic Kampuchean Government by Chhorn Hay, secretary of state of the Ministry of Telecommunications.

The Spanish guests ended their visit on the same day. Before leaving, they commented: The Phnum Malai area is under the total control of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas. This is totally contrary to the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors' propaganda.

[Editorial: "Another Khmer Summit: The Very Last Chance"]

[Text] One of the most boring subjects to write about -- and to read about -- is the possible coalition front of the anti-Vietnamese Khmer groups headed by Khieu Samphan, Prince Norodom Sihanouk and Son Sann. But when the last chance comes, it is necessary to emphasize one more time that these three groups, unless they unite, under a formula that has been accepted by ASEAN and by China, they can forget their country. Ever since the Vietnamese captured Phnom Penh in January 1979 and set up a puppet government there, ASEAN has worked overtime trying to muster international opinion against the invasion and occupation of one country by another. China went even further and made a brief incursion three years ago into Vietnam to prove her point.

The three leaders met in Singapore last year to form a loose military strategic coordination. Trying to form a coalition government -- however loosely -- was attempted in talks in Bangkok and failed. One more time, Beijing tried to get the three together but only some sorth of a bipartisan agreement was reached since Son Sann did not attend the meeting. The accord reached between Khieu Samphan and Sihanouk reflects the Singapore formula of a loose coalition. To quote it verbatim:

"PRIMO: THE PRINCIPLE OF TRIPARTISM. SECONDO: THE PRINCIPLE OF EQUALITY, ANY PARTY HAVING FOR ITSELF NEITHER THE FULL POWERS NOR THE PREPONDERANCE OF POWERS OVER THE OTHERS. TERTIO: THE PRINCIPLE OF CONSENSUS FOR IMPORTANT DECISIONS. QUARTO: BOTH PARTIES AGREE ON THE NECESSITY OF PRESERVING AND DEFENDING THE LEGALITY OF THE STATE OF DEMOCRATIC KAMPUCHEA WHICH IS A UN MEMBER AND VICTIM OF THE VIETNAMESE AGGRESSION." [passage published in boldface]

The key to the agreement is that, thanks to ASEAN, Democratic Kampuchea continues to be a member of the United Nations. But for how long? Till the next UN General Assembly meeting which is barely six months away? Don't the three leaders think that, since they are not interested in the best for their country, world opinion in their favour will evaporate like morning dew? Nobody can exert pressure on them except perhaps China which is their only arms supplier. If each of the bickering factions will be only a little bit more patriotic they can come to an agreement. Else, they can say goodbye to their country and carry on bickering in some remote place in which everybody else will lose interest.

We have to commend Malaysia for giving these three non-leaders of Kampuchea one more chance and they should be the ones to know that it is the last chance. It is the last chance because ASEAN cannot continue to make superhuman efforts at lobbying in the United Nations one more time -- the organization will be laughed at since the non-leaders of Kampuchea are far too long on self-interest and far too short on patriotism. International interest is waning in Kampuchea and most countries are likely to take the Heng Samrin government in Phnom Penh as a fait accompli. There are political analysts who will give long odds that the Malaysian "summit" of Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann will achieve no result. Do these leaders have the guts and the patriotism to agree?

SITTHI DISCUSSES SRV, FISHING BOAT INCIDENTS

[Interview with Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila; given 9 April -- recorded]

[Text] [Sitthi] We will have to talk to Vietnam about its recent seizure of Thai fishing boats. We don't know if the boats violated Vietnamese waters and so we don't know if Vietnam's action was justified. We don't know if Vietnam fired warning shots or if it intentionally sank our boats. The navy commander has said before that our fishing boats must not fish in other countries' waters. In any event, our boats were captured. Also, Vietnam has the capability to monitor communications between our fishing boats and therefore knows where our boats are. I cannot tell if the Vietnamese side overreacted in this incident. I don't know if they fired warning shots or if our boats failed to heed the warning. Many times in the past our ambassador has requested the Vietnamese side to release the fishermen.

[Question] Has the ambassador been instructed to make such a request in this case?

[Sitthi] Such a request is part of the formal process. The ambassador has made such requests many times before in other incidents. Vietnam already released many Thai fishermen -- over a hundred at a time. It released about 100 Thai fishermen near the time its aircraft crash landed in our territory.

[Question] Our protests about violations of our border do not seem to produce any result.

[Sitthi] We have informed the United Nations about every violation of our border.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 11 -- The Hungarian military delegation led by Chief of the General Political Department Lieutenant-general Ferenc Karpati yesterday visited the air defense force of the Vietnam Peoples Army.

Speaking at a meeting held by the ADF command in honour of the delegation, General Chu Huy Man, head of the General Political Department of the V.P.A., warmly warmly welcomed the Hungarian comrades-in-arms and expressed sincere gratitude for the Hungarian people and armed forces support and assistance to the Vietnamese revolution. He recalled such deeds of the fraternal Hungarian people as "a hospital and a school for Vietnam", "blankets for Vietnamese mothers and children", "Donation of blood for Vietnamese soldiers", etc., and said: "to the victory of the Vietnamese people and army the Hungarian people have not only made their spiritual contributions but also shed their sweat and even their blood. The Vietnamese people and armed forces always set great store by these warm sentiments and devoted assistance".

Highlighting the Hungarian people's revolutionary traditions over the past decades, General Chu Huy Man said: "The Hungarian People's Army is studying well and training hard. Together with the armed forces of the Soviet Union and the other fraternal socialist countries, it is firmly holding its weapons to defend the socialist community and peace and security in Europe and the world over".

On the task of the Vietnamese Armed forces at present, General Chu Huy Man said they are "always vigilant over all plots and acts of war of the Chinese reactionaries and other war-mongering forces" and are "determined to defeat China's war of sabotage in all fields and prepared to overwhelm the enemy in all circumstances".

MATERIALS ON FIFTH VCP NATIONAL CONGRESS

Le Duc Tho Report, Part II

BK101010 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 5 Apr 82

[Continuation of part II of report on party building work by Le Duc Tho, member of VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, at the 27 March session of the Fifth VCP Congress held at the Ba Dinh Conference Hall in Hanoi -- read by announcer]

[Text] II. [as heard] Perfect the Party Organizational Structure and Build the Party Ranks To Meet the Requirements of the Two Strategic Tasks

Comrade delegates, perfecting the party organizational structure and building the party ranks to meet the requirements of the two strategic tasks calls for the heightening of all party members' determination and consciousness in the fulfillment of the following specific duties of organizational work:

1. Strengthen the party's leading role in close coordination with the development of the effectiveness of state management and the exercise of the working people's collective mastery.

The fact that the Marxist-Leninist party's role has become increasingly important is a general law in the socialist revolution. The vital and urgent task currently facing our party is to improve the quality of party leadership, especially in the economic and social spheres. To carry out this task satisfactorily and to build and defend the country, it is imperative for the party to lead, build and strengthen at all cost the state apparatus and to develop most satisfactorily the effectiveness of the state apparatus while, at the same time, taking care of and consolidating its organizations and improving the quality of the mass organizations' activities.

The party's statutes have specified and the new constitution has systematized the basic contents of the principle of the party's leadership, working people's collective mastery and the state's management. This is a basis for continuing to concretize the party-state relationship at each level and in each sector and unit into work principles, systems and practices in order to settle correctly specific problems pertaining to the relationship between party organizations and state organs and between the state and the people.

A. The party leads all organizations in the system of dictatorship of the proletariat. It leads the state and mass organizations in a comprehensive manner through its lines and policies, through its resolutions and directives on the struggle objectives, guidelines and major policies, through its main measures and through major tasks related to the organization and work system of the state. It decides the most important tasks related to organization and cadres.

The party exercises its leadership through political education work, through the organization and motivation of the masses and by making each party member be in the van of the implementation of the party's lines and policies.

The party exercises its leadership through its control of administrative organizations and other organizations in the system of dictatorship of the proletariat, through the implementation of the party's lines, policies and resolutions and state laws and through a close coordination of activities of party, state and mass organizations. This is aimed at developing the combined strength of the entire system of dictatorship of the proletariat and at directing this strength at the common goals.

On the basis of the above general principles, we must consider the characteristics of each echelon, each kind of organization and each field of activity in setting forth practical and appropriate -- and not mechanical and simple -- requirement for leadership of party organizations. It is necessary to hold firm to and strengthen the party's leadership. Party leadership must not be slackened. We must understand that party leadership is always exercised on the basis of full development of the effectiveness of state management and on the basis of ensuring that the state does not passively and incompletely carry out tasks laid down by the state.

The state's managerial role must be heightened. Reality shows that the party will be able to score achievements in managing the economy and society only if it knows how to strengthen the state apparatus and consciously heighten the managerial role of the state, the main function of which is to concretize and systematize the party's lines, policies and guidelines into state plans, laws, policies, regulations and specific measures, and to organize their implementation.

Carrying out management through laws is a managerial method of the state. In addition to this method, the state carries out management through education, organization, motivation and persuasion. A major requirement for ensuring the state's managerial function now is to strengthen socialist laws vigorously and quickly.

The state must carry out management comprehensively and know how to operate its apparatus harmoniously and effectively. State laws, policies, regulations and systems must be complied with scrupulously by everyone, especially party cadres and members.

Party organizations cannot and must not do the work of state organs. Party committee echelons must fully develop the state role in organizing the implementation of the party's resolutions. At the same time, they must intensively use state organs in coordinating with the various departments of the party [Central Committee] to give advice to the party. We must overcome the tendency to underestimate the state role, a tendency which is still prevalent at many echelons and in many sectors.

B. It is necessary to overcome resolutely and definitely the long-existing confusion of functions between party and state organs. At the central level, it is necessary to define more clearly economic and social tasks that need to be submitted to the party Central Committee Political Bureau for approval. The responsibility of the party Central Committee Secretariat for the preparation of the decisions of the Central Committee and the Political Bureau must also be clearly defined. Meanwhile, the Secretariat's responsibility for controlling the activities of central-level state organs must be further strengthened. On this basis, the responsibility and power of the Council of Ministers and ministries must be developed.

In ministries, the setting up of party affairs committees was practical immediately after the unification of the country and when party committees of government organs were not yet consolidated. However, the existence of these party affairs committees has produced a negative effect in that they have not heightened the prestige and responsibilities of state organs. Moreover, their existence has resulted in the unclear definition of the responsible cadres' responsibilities.

To more clearly define the system of responsibility in state organs, we will not set up party affairs committees in ministries and services. In the ministries we will implement correctly the system of heads by setting up a ministerial collective or council composed of the related minister, vice ministers and a number of members according to state regulations. This collective will serve as a staff organ for the minister.

The Council of Ministers will clearly specify the requirements for tasks which should be brought to the ministerial collectives for discussion, and will set forth other necessary regulations to ensure that, while developing fully the responsible cadres' responsibilities, the ministerial collectives will be able to prevent authoritarianism, carelessness and lack of a sense of collectivity, especially in matters concerning duties, plans, policies and major tasks related to the organization of cadres.

In bureaus, it is also necessary to define clearly the interaction between heads of bureaus and their deputies in accordance with the above guidelines applied to ministries.

The party's control task in ministries and bureaus must be strengthened by increasing the responsibilities of departments of the Central Committee and all party committee echelons and assigning appropriately secretaries and leading cadres to party committees of state organs. We must ensure the quality of control of party committees and chapters of state organs according to specific regulations to be set forth by the Central Committee.

The promotion of party cadres in a minstry or bureau must be decided by a competent collective, or it must be approved according to the party Central Committee's specifications.

Ministers and bureau directors will be entrusted by related party committee echelons with helping secretaries of party committees of units and establshments subordinate to ministries or provinces and municipalities thoroughly understand the duties and other activities of sectors and units, improve their economic and technical knowledge and coordinate with local party committee echelons in formulating and implementing plans for training and improving the grassroots-level party committee secretaries in their knowledge of economic, specialized and technical management.

Party Central Committee departments are responsible for helping the Central Committee hold firm to, help and control party organizations of units, establishments and major joint production and trade organs.

In localities, the general guidelines for party committee echelons are to do away with their administrative style of behavior and their practice of encroaching on others' work and authority, and to help state organs take initiative in exercising leadership of production and trade and organizing and managing the people's life. Party committee echelons must have a firm grasp of new, major problems and main tasks in order to adopt policies for leading and controlling the settlement of these problems and tasks. Intensively carrying out the party-building task, control work and the task of improving cadres and making arrangements for the assignemnt of cadres are mainly designed to ensure the party's leadership. Party committee echelons are known for their practice of holding meetings to discuss and decide everything, including the assignment of party committee members to supervise the implementation of tasks in place of administrative organs, while the latter do not decide their own work or do it just for form's sake. This must be put to an end.

A system of heads must be set up in establishments such as industrial enterprises, construction sites, farms, schools and hospitals. In these establishments, great attention must be paid to improving the quality of the party's leadership. Party committees must take care of such tasks as building the party, motivating the people and educating party members and the people politically and ideologically. They must carry out leadership of the emulation movement and motivate the people to develop innovations and discover and apply scientific and technical achievements and advanced experiences to production. They must enforce labor discipline intensively and urge workers to improve the quality of products, to practice thrift, to protect public and collective property and to oppose bureaucratism, waste and corruption.

Exercising their leading functions, basic party organizations must make units and establishments thoroughly understand the party's resolutions and directives and discuss measures for their implementation with them. They must link the party-building task to economic and specialized tasks to develop the combined strength in units and establishments. They must train and improve the contingent of grassroots cadres, make arrangements for the assignment of key cadres and decide on the promotion of these key cadres under their management, struggle against negativism and direct all their activities toward the goal of units and establishments -- fulfilling and overfulfilling the state plan.

Basic party organizations are responsible for controlling the activities of managers and managerial organs and ensuring that the party's lines, policies and resolutions and state laws are understood thoroughly and implemented scrupulously and effectively.

Basic party organizations will not decide on specific norms of plans and measures concerning production and specialized and technical work, which are under the managerial responsibility of heads of units and establishments.

Heads of units and establishments and managerial organs must report their activities to related party committees according to set regulations and at their request. Party committees must point out to unit and establishment heads the weaknesses and strengths which have been noticed in the control of their work, and then suggest to them ways of studying and eliminating deficiencies. They must also help correct deviations from the party's resolutions and state laws.

The head of a unit is responsible for formulating its socioeconomic or professional plans. Basic party organizations must lead the masses in participating in the formulation of plans before the competent upper echelons decide on them. To do so, these organizations must have a firm grasp of the real situation, point out latent capabilities and discover the innovations carried out by the masses, including those in the economic and technical fields. They must also point out new factors in the spirit, policies, organizations, and so forth, which should be brought into play to give an active and scientific character to the formulation of plans and to ensure that the party's lines and policies are fully reflected in these plans.

The head of a unit must report to the party committee concerned on his projects and plans, listen to the committee's suggestions so as to improve his plans, and report to the echelon with the authority to examine and approve those suggestions for plans on which agreement has not been reached.

We must improve the leadership of the basic party organization in those units implementing the system of heads according to these guidelines so as to prevent the state of persons in charge from leaning and relying on the collective of party organizations and to promote the system of heads while improving the quality of party organizations' activities.

Strengthening the work related to the party and the masses by no means lowers the role of party organizations. In keeping with this spirit, the party Central Committee suggests that the congress further clarify a number of questions in the party statutes concerning the responsibility for leadership and control of the party organizations in those organs and units implementing the system of heads.

On the basis of the general regulations of the party statutes, the Central Committee should adopt specific regulations for responsibilities and systems to ensure the satisfactory implementation of the new regulations and to prevent deviations.

C. The mass organizations, with their functions of organizing, educating and motivating the masses to implement the lines and policies of the party and the state under the party's leadership, and with the state's cooperation and assistance, are the representatives of the masses' collective mastery, they are also the ones who collect the opinions and aspirations of the masses in their circles, their classes and their age brackets and convey them to the party and the state.

The mass organizations must participate in building the party and the state apparatus, help, control the implementation of the party's lines and policies by party members and state cadres and employees, and fulfill their obligations to the working people.

We should overcome the tendency to belittle the role of the mass organizations and mass-motivation work in the conditions of the party holding power. Such a tendency must be considered a manifestation of the evils of bureaucratism and alienation from the masses.

Party committee echelons should overcome their failure to control and to help the work of the mass organizations and their practice of assigning specific tasks to these organizations only when necessary. This state of affairs has prompted many bodies of the mass organizations to opeate in an uncoordinated and perfunctory manner, and has prevented the masses' views and aspirations from being collected and systematically conveyed to the party. It has also limited our capacity to rally the masses and to enhance their activity in implementing party and state resolutions as well as in the struggle to overcome the negative aspects of society through the activities of the mass organizations.

Party committees from the central to the grassroots level should establish a system for working with the party groups in the mass organizations. Each mass organization should convey the masses' opinions and aspirations to the party and the state and systematically analyze and report to the central and party committee echelons the masses' attitude toward the various policies of the party. Systems must be devised to compel party and state organs to answer to the masses about the suggestions they have made through the executive committees of the mass organizations. Systems must also be instituted to enable the comrades in charge of the trade unions, the youth unions and the women's unions to participate in and to express their views at the meetings of the party Central Committee Secretariat and the standing committees at various levels when their discussions are related to launching mass movements and to the work of the mass organizations.

Mass organizations, especially the trade unions and youth unions, must be guided in their role of participating in economic management and inspecting the affairs of state. Such activities must be developed into a system and institutionalized into law. We must stress the responsibilities of party organizations and trade unions in building the working class and in training cadres and workers for the party, and the responsibility of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union to fulfill its role as an assault force in carrying out all revolutionary tasks and as a reserve unit of the party.

Efforts must be made to consolidate the organizational structure of mass organizations. In particular, attention must be given to improving the quality of their activities and to consolidating and developing basic units in order to ensure that the mass organizations, especially the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union, the trade unions, the women's union, the peasants' associations in the south and the Fatherland Front, will fulfill their responsibilities as clearly prescribed in the political report of the party Central Committee.

We welcome the great contributions made by the Vietnam Fatherland Front and the various mass organizations to the anti-U.S. struggle in the past and to the current cause of building and defending the fatherland. However, each mass organization must surge forward to fulfill its own responsibilities even more satisfactorily in order to guarantee the right to collective mastery of the people whom it represents.

The party and state must enforce positive measures to overcome a situation in which the laboring people's right to collective mastery is seriously infringed upon in many aspects of their political, spiritual, cultural, economic and social life. Attention must be given to systematically making the masses understand the party lines and policies, the law and the socialist legal system, the rights and obligations of citizens; the general situation of the country, the difficulties and advantages of the party and the state in the revolutionary undertaking, and the knowledge of economic, state and social management. We must improve by reviewing the quality of the masses' participation in party building and in the building of the administration at the grassroots and other levels through the activities of mass organizations, people's councils and economic establishments, and we must develop this into a system.

The mass movement to carry on the three revolutions reflects the awareness of and capability for collective mastery; and it is the combined result of the party's leadership, the state's managerial work and mass organizations' activities. We must initiate mass movements at the grassroots level in a very satisfactory manner on the basis of applying the profit-and-loss accounting system and socialist business methods, closely combining economic with educational and administrative measures, correctly integrating the three interests and through this, gradually enhancing the masses' role as masters.

2. Consolidate the party Central Committee and the party committee echelons.

Our party has been forced through a long course of struggle. Of the members of the party Central Committee and party committee echelons, especially those from the provincial level on up, the majority are trained and tested comrades who are politically stable, rich in practical experience and absolutely loyal to the party, the fatherland and proletarian internationalism. This is fundamentally good. However, there are also weaknesses. Many comrades are advanced in age and physically frail, and their economic and technological knowledge is limited.

The structure of the party Central Committee and its division of labor do not fully reflect the need for improvement in the capabilities for organization and implementation in accordance with the party's organizational system. There are too many members of the Political Bureau and of the standing committees of some party committee echelons serving in state organs.

The party Central Committee Secretariat and the standing committees of the various party committee echelons do not have enough comrades responsible for party work in the economic field -- the most crucial field of the socialist revolution. The appointment of too many members of the Political Bureau to posts in the Council of Ministers does not allow the Political Bureau sufficient time to study and promptly resolve strategic issues and major policies or to review issues concerning party lines and theories.

The composition of the party Central Committee and of various provincial and city party committees fails to reflect the character of succession in building the organs of leadership for the party. Nearly 100 percent of the members of the party Central Committee joined the party before or during the resistance against the French. More than 90 percent of the members of provincial and city party committees joined the party before the anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation and more than 82 percent of the members of these committees gained party membership before 1954.

Shortcomings committed by the party in its economic leadership appear to be partially due to the composition of party committee echelons. It is necessary to change the composition of the party Central Committee and other party committee echelons and in their methods for division of labor in order to overcome the above shortcomings.

The party Central Committee suggests that the congress pay attention to demands for improving the leadership qualities of the central level in the economic and social fields and for lowering the average age of the members of the party Central Committee. The party Central Committee should include those comrades who have participated in party activities since the pre-August revolution period and those comrades who participated in the anti-French and anti-U.S. wars of resistance, who have practical work experience, who are well aware of Marxism-Leninism, who possess knowledge and abilities for economic, cultural, scientific and technical management, and who meet prescribed political standards. As for composition, the party Central Committee should include more cadres from the working class, and more female and ethnic cadres.

To improve the leadership qualities of the party Central Committee and to develop the leadership efficiency of the Council of Ministers Standing Committee, it is necessary to reduce the number of party Central Committee Political Bureau members serving as vice-chairmen of the Council of Ministers; and to select young and healthy comrades with good leadership and execution skills to replenish the party Central Committee Secretariat and the Council of Ministers Standing Committee.

Over the past few years various provincial, city, district and town party committee echelons have made great progress with great efforts. Many party committee echelons and party committee members, especially those in the south, have matured very fast in their economic and cultural leadership.

To overcome existing general weaknesses of various party committee echelons, after following this national VCP congress the party congresses at various levels must unreservedly bring into their related party committee echelons young comrades, female cadres and those comrades who possess a good knowledge of economic and technical management, who have good organization and implementation ability, who are renovation-minded, who know how to ascertain and scrupulously comply with the party's policies and line, and who have demonstrated their absolute loyalty to the party and the revolutionary cause.

Although we need many more party committee members to work at the lower echelons and the grassroots level, we must observe quality standards and avoid the popular belief that whoever is a party committee secretary of a lower echelon will be a member of the party committee of the next higher echelon.

Each echelon must devise plans and positive measures to train workers to become party committee members. We must be determined to revise our belief in men entering the party executive committees at various levels. We must not regard party committee echelons as places where one can be promoted, enjoy satisfactory treatment and ally with one another to form something like an association.

One may be brought in or removed from a party committee echelon as required by tasks. This is an ordinary thing.

Many comrades who have performed good deeds and who previously proved to be effective in developing the collective leadership of their party committee echelons have now refused to stand for reelection due to their current state of health and capabilities, thus letting themselves be replaced by new comrades who are in better condition to perform the work more efficiently. We highly appreciate their concern for the common cause, and we must adopt correct policies toward them.

The capacity of the party committees of provinces, municipalities, districts, precincts, cities, and so forth to organize the implementation of work related to the party and the masses should be strengthened by changing the division of labor in the executive and standing committees, increasing the number of standing members who have exclusive charge of party work, reducing the number of comrades working in the people's committees whenever this number is large, and clearly defining the responsibilities of the party secretary and deputy party secretary for daily work. The party secretary and his deputies must take exclusive charge of party work.

The composition of the party committee echelon must be designed to ensure its leadership over all fields of activities and to reflect its requirements and responsibility for leadership in building the economic structure within its territory and in meeting the need to strengthen the leadership of cultural, defense and security activities and of the work related to the party and the masses in its locality, including the units managed by the upper echelons.

In keeping with this spirit, the composition of many party committee echelons should be changed and the average age of party committee members lowered. Strengthening district party committees must be emphasized to meet the urgent demands of leadership in building the districts into ones equipped with an agroindustrial structure and into combat fortresses according to the specific location and character of each type of district.

Precinct party committees should be strengthened so as to be capable of leading the tasks entrusted to them in the precincts. In particular, utmost attention must be given to strengthening the organization and capacity of precinct party committees so that they may lead the work related to the party and the masses in those basic units located in the precincts whose party organizations are made directly subordinate to the precinct party committees.

Importance must be attached to strengthening municipal and city party committees. First of all, we must strengthen the party committees of Hanoi Municipality, Ho Chi Minh City and Haiphong Municipality to match the status of the capital and these municipalities. We must strengthen the municipal party committees of important industrial zones such as Da Nang, Bien Hoa, Thai Nguyen, Viet Tri, Hon Gai, Vinh, and so forth. More comrades endowed with the capacity for and the knowledge of leading and managing industry, artisan and handicrafts, professional and service operations and public safety must be assigned to these municipal party committees so that they can lead all fields of activities in their municipalities and industrial zones.

In the municipalities directly subordinate to the central government and the municipalities and cities subordinate to the provinces in which industrial zones are established, we should introduce into the party committees more capable cadres working in various organs, especially in the basic units located in the localities but directly subordinate to the central government. This is intended to improve the quality of the party committees' leadership in party work and in state management in their localities.

In provincial and municipal party committees, there should be more cadres who work in various production and business establishments and unions of production enterprises.

Members of the Central Committee and various party committee echelons must typify the intellect of the entire party or each party organization and must truly be capable of contributing to the collective leadership of the executive committees.

A work system should be instituted to enable the members of the party executive committees at all levels to fulfill their responsibilities and bring into play their capabilities in collective leadership. Aside from the executive committee meetings, we should study other forms or organizing activities and work, such as through committees and subcommittees, so that members of the Central Committee and the provincial and municipal party committees can participate in making preparations for the conferences of the Central Committee, the Political Bureau, or the party committee echelons and their standing committees on important fields of activities.

The quality of the leadership of various party committee echelons depends not only on the party committee echelons themselves; it is also very much dependent on the quality of preparatory work of the party's and the state's staff organs. For this reason, strengthening the staff organs is very much a key factor in ensuring the quality of the collective leadership of the Central Committee and the various party committee echelons.

It is necessary to consolidate and employ in a satisfactory manner the various departments of the party Central Committee and the party committee echelons; to correctly appoint heads and deputy heads of departments; and to staff these departments with truly qualified and capable cadres. The apparatus of these departments must be well organized. The comrade department heads and the comrade members of the party Central Committee Secretariat in charge of departments must personally guide the streamlining of the apparatus of those departments for which they are responsible. It is not necessary for a department to be broken down into offices. Some departments only need to be staffed with a department head, his deputies and a number of teams of experts. It is not necessary for a lower echelon to have the same number of departments as the higher echelons.

We must satisfactorily consolidate and utilize the staff organs of the state and establish a system that will allow the various departments to employ collaborators in order to improve the quality of work and streamline their organizations.

Our party has hitherto always paid special attention to strengthening its leadership over the VPA. For almost 4 decades, historical realities have proven that party leadership is the key factor which has determined all the successes and the maturity of the people's armed forces. The national situation and the revolutionary tasks in the new stage require that we continue to build a powerful revolutionary people's army with an ever-increasing level of standardization and modernization. In order to meet the requirements for building the army and consolidating national defense and the requirements of the people's war for the defense of the fatherland, we must further strengthen party leadership over the armed forces and, at the same time, must fully implement the system of one-man command so as to ensure that commanders can fully develop their responsibilities in carrying out the tasks entrusted by the party and state, display initiative in selecting courses of action and coping with all eventualities, and make accurate and timely decisions, and that the troops can operate with determination and urgency to win victories and fulfill their missions satisfactorily.

The party assumes direct, centralized and unified leadership over the armed forces in the political, ideological and organizational fields. It constantly seeks to enhance the working-class nature of the army and make it boundlessly loyal to the fatherland and socialism, closely united around the party Central Committee, deeply committed to the laboring people, absolutely responsive to the party's leadership, ready to fight and fight victoriously to defend firmly the socialist fatherland, and eager to work for national construction and to fulfill international obligations.

The party Central Committee proposes that the congress amend Article 12 of the party statutes and entrust the party Central Committee with the task of defining specific regulations for organizing party leadership over the VPA.

It is necessary to set up a central department subordinate to the Political Bureau to assist the central level in the management of cadres belonging to the armed and security forces, and in carrying out other necessary tasks required by the central level.

3. Perfect the state apparatus.

The current major task is to build the state according to the requirements for establishing a new economic structure and adopting new managerial methods. The three basic requirements for the perfection of the state apparatus consist of establishing a new managerial system, modifying the party and state's work methods and assigning cadres to the right places.

The recent party and state decisions based on Resolution No 10 of the party Central Committee and Resolution No 32 of the Political Bureau mark the initial stage in perfecting the state apparatus in accordance with the above requirements. It is necessary to continue to establish these resolutions so that they will be implemented satisfactorily.

Establishing a new managerial system is a very important task aimed at intensively organizing the implementation of the party's resolutions and improving the effectiveness of state management. In a few years emphasis must be placed on strengthening forces and motivating organizations to embark on studying this task in a relatively uniform manner, especially in the economic sphere. This is necessary to accelerate the perfection of the state apparatus and the production and trade activities of units and establishments.

We must perfect at all costs the joint managerial organs, especially the State Planning Commission and the economic information system. We must also perfect scientific research institutes, main research and planning programs and management draft laws, policies and regulations of the various managerial ministries and economic and technical sectors. These organizations and programs are very important because they determine the effectiveness of state management, create the necessary conditions for leading the network of production and trade units onto the profit-and-loss-accounting track, and adopt correct guidelines for developing active units and establishments and perfecting them.

While paying attention to perfecting economic organs and units, we must be aware of the new requirements for strengthening national defense and security. We must build an ever stronger army. In order to increase its fighting strength and heighten its combat readiness, we must improve the effectiveness of the party-building task and the political task in the army, in addition to strengthening the party's leadership over the army. We must fully implement the system of individual command and close management of the army in all domains.

We have continued to commit many shortcomings in social management. We must improve the quality of security organs and people's security forces and ensure that persons selected to these organs and forces meet set criteria. Party committee echelons and secretaries are dutybound to closely control security organs and people's security forces and to exercise direct leadership of their perfection and consolidation.

Great attention must be paid to leading and improving qualitatively those organs in charge of ensuring the implementation of state laws, such as organs of control, courts, the judicial sector and economic arbitration organs.

Scientific, information, cultural, social, educational, literary and art management organs play a very important role in the acceleration of the three revolutions and the struggle against the enemies. To neglect cultural and social leadership and to fail to strengthen these organs satisfactorily means to get rid of very important tools for building new men, a new generation and a new life and to waste a great potential in the struggle to prevent and eliminate negative aspects of society.

In the network of state apparatus, our party pays attention to ensuring that the people-elected state organs of authority fulfill their responsibilities and maintain their power under the party's leadership. This spirit must be developed more thoroughly among all party committee echelons.

The operational strength of the state should be reflected in the legal system which must at the same time be persuasive and compulsory for the entire society. In the last analysis, the law institutionalizes party lines and policies, but we must not mistake lines and policies for the law.

We must pay the utmost attention to the law, plan the formulation of laws and prevent violations of the law. A pressing problem at present is to pay attention to economic, criminal, labor and civil laws. Efforts must be made to build step by step a perfect legal system and to make all party cadres and members -- first of all key cadres -- strictly abide by the law.

While perfecting the state apparatus, a crucial problem is to resolutely streamline the apparatus and lighten the organization, especially the administrative organization. This must be done on the basis of eliminating the bureaucratic and subsidy-based system of administration, revising labor policies, adopting policies to encourage heads of units to employ less personnel without affecting work efficiency, clearly establishing positions and defining their professional standards, carrying out new plans and measures for selecting students for admission to colleges and secondary vocational schools from the grassroots level, promulgating at an early date specific policies and systems designed to resolve cases which make it necessary to separate personnel from the organization, and so forth.

It is necessary to put an end to a situation in which every unit head is voicing his complaints about the cumbersome nature of the organization but readily sets up more offices for his own organ and either expands or maintains its table of organization. Strict control of the establishment of new organizations and the recruitment of new personnel must be enforced. A study must be conducted on dissolving unnecessary organizations or recombining those organizations that have been divided all too prematurely. The establishment of new organizations must be absolutely consistent with the regulations on the consideration for and approval of organizations; and the recruitment of new personnel must be done in strict accordance with the professional standards.

4. Strive to perfect basic party organizations while stepping up the building of districts and precincts, perfecting grassroots units, building and consolidating joint production establishments and launching mass movements.

We praise the great efforts made by the basic party organizations in all fields. It is from the grassroots level that many rich experiences reflecting the set lines have been gained; and they are worth reviewing. However, these efforts still fall short of the requirements of the heavy tasks of the revolution. Basic party organizations still display weaknesses in many respects. It is always the primary responsibility of the entire party to enhance the fighting strength, initiative, creative character and steadfastness of basic party organizations, especially party chapters, in order to make them worthy of their position and importance.

The existence of basic party organizations that have remained weak and lagged behind for a long time requires that the fundamental causes of this problem be dealt with in a comprehensive and radical manner. The resolutions of the party Central Committee and the Political Bureau on organizational work have attributed these causes to the leadership of the higher echelons, especially shortcomings in the system of economic management, and to the shortcomings of the basic party organizations themselves, and have correctly set forth uniform measures for steadily advancing the basic party organizations. It is necessary to carry out these resolutions properly.

In the new situation, basic organizations of every type must determine even more clearly their own responsibilities toward the two strategic tasks, strengthen their leadership over military and security forces, develop the reserve forces, implement the various army rear policies, heighten revolutionary vigilance and assign capable and experienced key cadres to firmly control the militia and self-defense forces, the reserve forces and they people's security forces in order to ensure that they are ready to fight and win.

A. We must, through the movement to build the district and consolidate the grassroots level, perfect the basic party organizations in rural areas and link the building of the districts with this effort. Our party's policy to develop districts along the line of combining agriculture with industry, or forestry with agriculture and industry, or fisheries with agriculture and industry, and to build them into fortresses for the defense of the fatherland is a correct strategic policy which we have failed to implement satisfactorily over the past 5 years. It is necessary to urgently step up the building of districts in the 1981-85 5-year period and in the 1980's. In accordance with the prescribed orientation, all districts must strive with their own existing land, natural resources, labor and material and technical facilities, to become progressive districts in the next 5 years; and the currently progressive districts must surge forward to achieve higher targets in the economy and life.

To build the districts, all central organs and provinces and municipalities must classify districts into economic zones and guide them in adopting production lines suitable for each zone with the aim of creating highly productive zones -- grain, raw material for industry and products for export -- along the direction of gradually advancing to socialist large-scale production. We must help each district take inventory to firmly assess the local availability of land, labor, equipment and material and technical facilities so as to adopt suitable orientations and plans for developing agriculture, fisheries and forestry and so forth, small industry and handicrafts, promote the various branches and trades, project targets and set forth measures concerning life, culture and social welfare. Proceeding from this, we must encourage the local masses and establishments to strive to build the district chiefly through their own efforts, without relying on assistance from higher echelons.

On the basis of these planning orientations, plans must be made to train, foster and deploy cadres, especially key cadres, and perfect the organization of district party committees, people's committees and mass organizations along with perfecting production and business establishments, stations and farms within the district.

Organs at the central, provincial and municipal levels must, on the basis of the plans formulated by the districts, decentralize management and actively and urgently create conditions for the districts to take the initiative in the management of economic, cultural and other activities. We must help the districts develop projects and plans for quickly deploying a contingent of specialized cadres who are qualified to fill positions ranging from secretary and chairman to sector cadres and basic unit cadres, in accordance with the requirements of each district's economic and national defense tasks.

Attention must be given to training cadres locally while reinforcing the districts with capable and qualified cadres from the central, provincial and municipal levels. Efforts must be concentrated on assisting and strengthening districts which possess great economic potentials or are strategically located for national defense.

The central, provincial and municipal levels must organize guidance for and coordination among the various departments and sectors in directing the building of districts; and must improve their guidance for the districts and basic party organizations.

Along with building the districts and consolidating production establishments, attention must be given to building and perfecting party chapters and village and cooperative party committees in order to make them really clean, firm and strong. It is necessary to prevent corruption, oppression of the masses, dereliction of duties and failure to implement party resolutions among party cadres and members at all costs; and to introduce measures for bringing about a turn to the better in weak and lagging basic party organizations.

Party chapter committees in villages and cooperatives must hold firm to the party's viewpoint, lead the three revolutions satisfactorily, accelerate the movement for improvement of management, implement the new contract system in cooperatives and build production collectives in the south in order to lead agriculture in advancing along the party's line. On the basis of these tasks and other mass movements, they must control and improve the quality of party members, correctly assign cadres, improve them qualitatively, consolidate and strengthen party organizations, develop positive factors and struggle against negativism. They must also prevent such old and bad customs as superstition and intensively educate party cadres and members and people ideologically and politically. They must study and organize party activities for party members, using each hamlet as a unit in places where a hamlet has several party chapters, in order to discuss necessary tasks at the hamlet level.

In strengthening party organizations in many areas of the south and in many villages of mountainous provinces and border regions, there must be special measures. In these places, provincial and district party committees must send delegations of cadres to seek to understand the situation and help grassroots party organizations determine tasks, objectives and measures. They will help party chapters and organizations [dqangr booj] build at all cost a contingent of core cadres and, through the socialist transformation task, consolidate and perfect the new production relations and make preparations for combat readiness.

In villages of the southern and mountainous regions, if a hamlet does not have a party chapter or party cell, a loyalty cell [toorr trung kieen] must be set up and given the responsibility of a party cell.

Attention must be paid to strengthening the precinct and municipal levels in order to carry out intensive leadership and management of small industry and handicrafts, service activities and other aspects of life such as culture, order and security in precincts and municipalities. Precinct and municipal party committees must pay due attention to strengthening basic party organizations in the above domains. In precincts, efforts must be concentrated on consolidating and strengthening city wards. The Council of Ministers must study and specify more clearly the contents of the ward level's cultural, economic and social activities.

B. In state-run enterprises, to ensure the implementation of a new managerial system we must not delay in determining the criteria of duties of managers, deputy managers and other key cadres and reorganizing the force of cadres from top to bottom and vice versa. This is necessary to overcome the situation wherein many managers and deputy managers have been appointed not in accordance with the current requirements of tasks.

Ministries must immediately formulate and organize the implementation of plans for opening refresher courses for managers and deputy managers of enterprises to further improve their managerial capability. This must be done in coordination with the sending of cadres to weak enterprises in order to quickly remedy the present serious situation: Only less than 30 percent of the enterprise managers have finished economic management refresher courses, and nearly 50 percent of managers of central-level enterprises have not yet attended technical middle school or college.

Economic managerial institutes and related departments [of the Central Committee] must provide guidance and supervision of the improvement of enterprise managers and deputy managers in economic management.

Enterprise managers must hold firm to the party's lines and policies, must show improvement in economic management and must possess necessary specialized and technical knowledge. They must be comrades who dare to assume responsibilities, who display a high party character, who adopt the viewpoint of the masses, who rely on the masses and who respect the role of party organizations. They must not take advantage of the implementation of the system of heads to become subjective, arbitrary, dictatorial and undisciplined.

In many localities, the specialized knowledge of enterprise party committee secretaries is very much inferior to that of the managers; and many enterprises need specialized party committee secretaries who are not currently available. Party committee echelons must coordinate with ministers in quickly remedying this situation.

According to the guidelines for renovating economic management, various forms of production partnership such as joint enterprises, corporations and so forth have been established. It is necessary to devise standard operating procedures to ensure the effective implementation of the profit-and-loss economic accounting system by various grassroots-level units and joint production establishments.

Concerning the party organization in these establishments, the party Central Committee will study the organization of leadership for party organs in corporations and incorporations so as to be consistent with the new situation. A basic party organization will be set up in each joint enterprise. In case a component of a joint enterprise is located far from the main unit in a different province or district, the party organization of that component may be placed under the jurisdiction of the party committee of the district or municipality where it operates. Then the joint enterprise party committee will establish relations with the party organization of the distant component and with the local party committee in order to coordinate actions and exchange experience.

Basic party organizations in cultural, educational and scientific and technical installations, especially in higher and vocational schools and research institutes, must embark on strengthening themselves and improving their leadership and control methods in conjunction with the improvement of the specialized and professional management of these installations along the line of enhancing the responsibilities and initiative of the related party organizations.

These basic party organizations, especially in the schools, must pay special attention to developing the young generation in the domains of cultural, specialized and professional knowledge, political qualities and revolutionary ethics, and to preparing and improving youths to become high quality cadres when they enter the real life of production and fighting. This responsibility must not be limited to teaching and to the improvement of the quality of the youth union's activities, but it must be reflected in the education through real acts, in the exemplary role of teachers and party cadres and members and even in the methods of school management and the shaping of a cultural lifestyle in schools and other installations.

Improving and training teachers in political knowledge, improving the quality of activities of party organizations, trade unions and the youth union and strengthening the managerial apparatus of schools are very important and urgent tasks in educating the young generation. The Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Higher and Vocational Education, the party Central Committee Science and Education Department and responsible organs must work out proper plans for reorganizing and carrying out these tasks intensively and practically.

Party committees and youth union executive committees in schools must take interest in improving the activity of the union and the various departments of schools. They must also pay attention to the content of the education in order to develop positive factors and eliminate negativism among cadres and students.

In people's security units, basic party organizations must be consolidated so they will be strong and pure. They must be the symbol of stalwartness, indomitability, utmost revolutionary vigilance and a high sense of organization and discipline. In other words, they must always be worthy as an unyielding militant vanguard team of the working class in grassroots units.

The organization of the party leadership in the people's security force must be defined by the party Central Committee in such a way as to suit the special character of the people's security force.

At central-level organs, it is necessary to clearly define the purposes and requirements which guarantee the control qualities of the party organizations in these organs, and to strengthen at all costs their party committees so that they can fulfill their duties in accordance with new requirements.

In general, the party organizations of the central-level organs must receive guidance from both the party Central Committee on major issues -- especially those involving the establishment of policies, lines, and viewpoints for the overall tasks and those tasks of these organs -- and from the local party committee echelons in areas where these organs are given responsibility for the work related to the party and the masses and for the implementation of those policies now being applied in the localities concerned.

The management of each department must assist the party Central Committee in providing assistance, orientation and control of the activities of the party organizations of these organs, trying to link these efforts with cadre management work.

The party Central Committee Secretariat must assign men and related agencies to quickly disseminate important information on the situation and policies, as well as all the important resolutions and directives of the party, to the party committees of subordinate organs in accordance with prescribed regulations. It must also review experiences on the sending of party members from different organs to participate in the activities of or to work in various city wards, in accordance with the decision of the party Central Committee Secretariat, and must clearly and more practically define the responsibilities of party members in social work, for this is one of the important measures for improving the quality of party members.

The party Central Committee will review and tackle the existing problems in the organization of a leadership system for the party organizations of the central-level organs and of their subordinate provincial and city echelons. It will have to adopt flexible organizational measures to overcome irrationalities.

The strengthening of fundamental party committees and, most importantly, the correct appointment of party committee secretaries and standing members are of decisive importance for improving the leadership qualities of fundamental party organizations.

The party Central Committee must rely on the number of party members, the amount of work and the importance of each fundamental unit to determine regulations governing the appointment of specialized secretaries. These newly appointed secretaries of fundamental units must resign from other positions in the state administration or in mass organizations. The consideration and approval of a wage scale for specialized secretaries and the special treatment policies toward them must be decided by the party organs concerned. Party Central Committee departments must check the performance of party organization secretaries at various ministries, general departments or offices and recommend necessary replacements to the party Central Committee Secretariat or the party committee echelons of these ministries, general departments or offices.

Basic party committees will be allowed to set up their own organization and training sections; and the members of these sections will be selected from those party members who are reliable and who have good workers.

In enterprises, basic party committees must set up subcommittees or control teams to help basic party committee echelons exercise control of the activities of enterprise managers and managerial organs.

Nguyen Van Linh Speech

[Text] The fifth congress resolution determines the economic strategy for the first stage of our country's socialist industrialization. We must, first of all, further advance agriculture to large-scale socialist production in a structure of close and correct coordination of agriculture, industry, consumer-goods production and heavy industry. Among the economic and social targets for the 1980's, the key target is to further stabilize and improve our people's material and cultural life and to advance toward basically meeting their essential needs in life. We must primarily and satisfactorily resolve the grain and foodstuffs problem and meet the people's need in clothing, education, medical treatment, food, housing, transportation, children's care and other consumer needs. These policies, we think, are highly suited to meet the requirements for developing our national economy in the coming years and the pressing needs in our people's lives countrywide.

Ho Chi Minh City, as an industrial, cultural scientific, and technical center, a center for international relations and an important communications center of the country, will seek by all means possible to successfully carry out the congress resolution. Facts have proved that we have struggled intensively in that direction. As Ho Chi Minh City is an industrial, scientific and technical center, we are clearly aware of its role and responsibility. It must reorganize production so that it can not only provide support for its own development in industry, small industry and handicrafts and for meeting the requirements of agricultural development in its surburban and rural areas but also provide support for the development of agriculture and of other occupations and trades and for meeting the needs in consumer goods in the Cuu Long River Delta provinces, the Nam Bo Delta, part of the Central Highlands and the southern Trung Bo coastal area. In addition, it must make positive contributions, along with the central level, in the economic cooperation with friendly Kampuchea. Facts have proved that economic cooperation has gradually taken shape in the city's industrial-agricultural structure, which is one of the reasons justifying the city's existence and development.

As Ho Chi Minh City is also a center for international relations and an important communications center, we clearly realize that its role and responsibility are to expand and accelerate, within the scope authorized by the central level, its exports and imports by coordinating with the other provinces and by encouraging the processing and production of goods for export so as to secure more foreign currencies to buy more raw materials and machine spare parts to support industrial, small industry and handicraft production. The results scored in the economic cooperation with provinces, centrally-run units and friendly Kampuchea, along with the results scored in imports and exports, have greatly contributed to increasing the city's 1981 industrial production over 1980 -- that is the city's own industrial, small industry and handicraft production and that of the centrally run installations located in the city -- by 36 percent, its budget receipts by 21 percent, and its import-export volume by nearly 200 percent. On that basis, we can initially provide guidance for the struggle to further stabilize the market and to improve somewhat the living conditions of cadres, workers, civil servants and laborers.

One of the reasons for the city's development in industrial production, as I have earlier noted, is that we have succeeded in developing the production capacity of every grassroots-level unit thanks to our determination to provide guidance on implementation and on planning from the grassroots level upward and on building three-part plans. It is also due to the fact that we have concerned ourselves with the livelihood and interests of the workers and laborers and with harmonizing the three types of interests; pushed ahead the application of the contract wage and piecework wage systems; boldly decentralized management by assigning the precincts, districts, city wards and villages their own shares in management; deepened our economic management in the fields of industrial, small industry and handicraft production and of circulation and distribution; kept in close touch with grassroots-level units so as to eliminate difficulties in time and to help further expand production; broadened the movement to learn from and emulate model workers and production units and to increase their numbers; and stepped up imports and exports so as to achieve a balance.

Regarding small industry and handicraft production, thanks to our efforts to intensively develop the creativity and professional skills of workers, our flexible application of policies and of appropriate key measures for promoting effectiveness and versatility in production, and our growing capability to sense market needs, we have succeeded in producing a large volume of varied commodities and in making positive contributions to increasing the city's industrial production. The above, concrete results have affirmed more clearly that the resolution of the Sixth VCP Central Committee Plenum and Resolution No 26 of the Political Bureau are correct and that they should be further implemented positively and correctly.

Regarding resolving problems in livelihood, the city has positively grasped the spirit of the resolutions of the fifth party congress and is continuing to implement Resolution No 26 and Directive No 109 of the Political Bureau as well as the resolutions of the city party organization's second congress of delegates on this matter. In order to improve distribution and circulation work, we have urgently expanded the socialist business and trade network, comprising the state-run and cooperative trade systems, and have striven to get hold of most of the industrial goods and to organize the sale of daily necessities to the workers and laborers.

Parallel with expanding socialist business, we have gradually stabilized the market. We have adopted positive measures to increase income and ensure the correct implementation of the tax policy, thus fulfilling our obligation to the central government and stabilizing the regional budget. We have carried out studies in making recommendations to rationally readjust the income of the various economic components and strata of the people. We have correctly implemented the conservation and antiwaste system. We have adopted really concrete plans by assigning conservation targets to each sector, precinct and district, regarding them as obligatory targets in considering the completion of plans and awards for 1982. We have effectively stepped up the fight against negative phenomena, striven to reduce, to the lowest level, the value of property lost due to waste, theft, misplacement and damage and have positively protected and guarded state property.

While boldly pondering, searching and applying the directives and resolutions of the Central Committee to the concrete conditions of the city, with a view to promoting production and gradually stabilizing life, we do not forget a fundamental issue in our country's present situation, namely, even though enjoying peace, we have to defeat, at all costs, the manysided war of sabotage of the Chinese hegemonic expansionists who are colluding with the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys, while standing ready to successfully rebuff the enemy should he dare to recklessly wage a big war.

As Ho Chi Minh City was previously the lair, the center and the capital of the U.S.-puppet colonialist regime, besides the patriotic and revolutionary tradition of the working people and other segments of the people, there still exist many negative aspects which the U.S. imperialists and Chinese expansionists are resolutely exploiting to carry out their manysided war of sabotage. Consequently, we fully agree with the resolution of the fifth congress, namely, that we must resolutely defeat the enemy's manysided war of sabotage. In order to ensure the fulfillment of this requirement, our whole party organization must exert efforts in making the people of the city see the enemy's perfidious plot and clearly understand the real state of our country's present situation; at a time when the rear area is living in peace, at the forefront, the northern border, our combatants' and people's blood still flows and in friendly Kampuchea, the blood of our combatants who are discharging their international obligation and of friendly armed forces is still flowing. The struggle for national independence and socialism is still going on in a fierce and complex manner.

Over the past years, although there has been the movement "for the fatherland's forefront" in our city, we must keep it boiling continuously to closely link the front to the rear areas and to resolutely oppose pacifist thoughts. We must work daily so that both the party members and the people clearly realize that in the present manysided war of sabotage, the city is the enemy's key point of attack. We must urgently wage the struggle in a systematic, integrated and consistent manner in many fields. We must coordinate the security forces and the armed forces with the forces of the masses to smash all his political, as well as economic, sabotage acts and all his psychological allegations and reactionary activities.

We must step up the struggle to repulse and gradually eradicate the negative phenomena in society, sternly punish and eliminate rowdy elements, reactionary vestiges, dishonest merchants and other delinquents and dregs of society. To do so, we must step up all necessary measures to consolidate and perfect the party, the administrative system and the mass organizations in organizational and ideological aspects. We must reinforce the combat strength of the city party organization and rapidly change the structure of the working class component in the party to clearly show that ours is a party organization of an industrial city.

Certainly, our party organization will receive the resolutions of the fifth congress with all of its great confidence and will turn this confidence into action and into the strength of the mass movement to successfully fulfill the tasks and targets set forth by the congress, thus becoming worthy of a city having the honor of bearing beloved President Ho Chi Minh's name.

Hoang Quoc Viet Speech

[Excerpts of speech by VFF Central Committee Presidium Chairman Hoang Quoc Viet at the Fifth VCP Congress -- recorded]

[Text] I fully approve the contents of reports presented at the congress. May I express some views on the work regarding mass agitation and the front in the present situation. As pointed out by the political report, the content of the present mass agitation work is new. We understand that this content consists of fully exercising the laboring people's collective mastery while simultaneously carrying out the three revolutions with a view to implementing the two strategic tasks, namely, building socialism and firmly defending our beloved fatherland. This is also the content of the revolutionary mass movement in the new stage.

The present needs of everyday life urge us to unceasingly take care of the people's material and cultural life. For this reason, the emulation movement for labor productivity and practicing economy and against negative phenomena must really become a movement central to all mass movements, and other movements must contribute to stimulating this central movement with the common aim of serving the socialist fatherland and promoting the people's happiness. To advance the emulation movement for labor productivity and practicing economy and against negative phenomena vigorously, actively and continuously, we should, in our guidance work, harmoniously coordinate the interests of the state, collective and individual laborers. It is very important to pay attention to laborers' legitimate interests and there must be close coordination among administrative organs, the front and mass organizations.

According to the political report, the mass agitation work has achieved some new progress. That means that, after the country's reunification and after the establishment of the proletarian dictatorship system on the state level, this work has been carried out with all the might of the system, that is, by all party organizations, state organs and mass organizations.

Mass organizations represent the collective interests and rights of various classes and strata of people. They are the schools of socialism for the masses, the links between the party and the masses and the solid support of the state. The might of mass organizations resides in their ability to gather the masses and whip up a vigorous revolutionary movement. Mass organizations should effect a new change in educational work, mobilize and organize the masses and intensify the building of basic installations and the corps of cadres.

Over the past years, the VFF, a factor in the success of our country's revolution, has developed the tradition of all-people solidarity, strengthened the people's political unanimity and unity of minds, participated in building and consolidating the people's administration and educated and motivated the people to uphold the sense of collective mastery and to emulate in building socialism and defending the fatherland.

The VFF, a representative of the people, should constantly reflect their thoughts and aspirations before the party and state and motivate all strata of people to participate in building their administration, drafting and implementing policies and laws and managing economic and social affairs while preventing all violations of the party's line, state policies and laws, socialist property, the people's interests and collective mastery.

The VFF should better carry out the campaign to build a new lifestyle, a new work style, new customs and habits, an orderly and hygienic life at home and at public places and a family of new culture with healthy and beautiful traits in everyday life. To fulfill its functions, the VFF should properly carry out the principle of coordinated and unified action, especially at basic installations and among the population where the three revolutions take place daily and where there is a direct contact with the citizens' life and interests.

Our people's knowledge in all spheres has been constantly improved and their needs and aspirations have constantly changed. That requires that the work regarding mass agitation and the front effect a new change in organizational and operational methods. It is necessary to improve the knowledge in all fields of the cadres and party members assigned to do this work.

To overcome the past shortcomings and carry out the work regarding mass agitation and the front consistent with the requirements of revolutionary tasks in the new stage, we should have a resolution on this work for the present situation. Pending the resolution, all party committee echelons should strengthen leadership over the work, entrust this work to those who are capable and experience and create conditions for the front to properly fulfill its function of coordinating and unifying the actions of mass organizations and the front's organizations, especially at basic installations and in populated areas in the districts so that the political tasks set forth by the party may be carried out.

It is necessary to formulate a proper system and policy of training, education and treating the cadres assigned to work in the front and mass organizations. In my opinion, under the present conditions, we should set up organs for scientific study of each element among the masses, especially the youths and women, to help the party committee echelons make accurate decisions based on scientific data related to the mass agitation work.

Dear comrade delegates: It is difficult to eliminate an old system; but it is more difficult to build a new society, a socialist society, especially in our country. However, our people are united in this enterprise. As noted by Uncle Ho, without the people's support, a very easy task cannot be completed; but no matter how difficult a task may be, it can be achieved with popular support. With the party's correct revolutionary line, with the people's sympathy and support and with the boundless creative capabilities of all strata of people, our party and people will surely successfully build socialism and effectively protect our beloved fatherland.

Nguyen Duc Thuan Speech

OW101247 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 9 Apr 82

[Excerpt of speech by VCTU Chairman Nguyen Duc Thuan at Fifth VCP Congress -- recorded]

[Text] We fully agree with the political report presented by the venerated and beloved party General Secretary Le Duan and with the reports on economic construction tasks and party building tasks presented by the party Central Committee at the congress.

We wish to express some more ideas about the building of a strong workers contingent in order to insure successful implementation of the tasks of building and defending the socialist fatherland of Vietnam.

Our party has affirmed: To build socialism, we must carry out socialist industrialization, and to carry out socialist industrialization, we must have a large, comprehensively strong working class. Over the past 5 years, under the party's leadership, along with the agricultural and industrial development, our country's workers contingent has grown much stronger both quantitatively and qualitatively. Compared with the first year of the Second 5-Year State Plan, the total number of workers and civil servants has increased 28.7 percent, with those in the sector directly engaged in production increasing 40.7 percent, while the contingent of technical workers has increased 60.3 percent. Despite the many harsh difficulties caused by the war aftermath, the enemy's ravage, natural calamities, a lack of material supplies, raw materials and energy and despite difficulties in its livelihood, the working class has remained confident in the party's leadership and has constantly upheld the revolutionary spirit in production, combat, and the defense of production and enterprises. It adopts a correct attitude in the face of complex developments of the situation in our country and the rest of the world. It is worthy of being a strong support for our party and state. Many more new factors have emerged and are continuing to emerge within the workers movement which are tapping potential abilities, applying scientific and technological advances, developing initiatives for stabilizing and boosting production, struggling to overcome the practice of bureaucratic economic management based on the administration of subsidies, and building a system of socialist management and buisness transactions. This has clearly manifested the Vietnamese working class' initiative and spirit of self-reliance in overcoming difficulties.

However, besides the strong points that manifest its revolutionary nature, the Vietnamese workers contingent still shows its weaknesses in some aspects. Its level of awareness of socialism and of its responsibilities in collective mastery is still low. A majority of workers, being still heavily influenced by the psychology and habits of small-scale producers, has not yet consciously observed labor discipline. Many negative manifestations in production and people's lives still remain. The weaknesses of the workers contingent and the objective difficulties in production conditions are curbing the development of the emulation movement in productive labor and economization among the Vietnamese workers and civil servants and are hampering the building of our socialist worker.

Under our country's present revolutionary conditions, the building of a stable and strong contingent of socialist workers must be primarily and closely coordinated with the motivation and organization of workers and civil servants in successfully carrying out the three revolutions, namely, the revolution in production relations, the scientific and technological revolution, and the ideological and cultural revolution, with the scientific and technological revolution being the kingpin. The best general method for carrying out the three revolutions is to successfully launch a fervent large-scale socialist emulation movement among workers and civil servants. However, in our production organization and management, many shortcomings still remain which hinder the emulation movement. For example, our production plans, which have not been truly built from the grassroots level, do not have a firm basis. Serious shortages in material supplies, raw materials, and energy have left hundreds of thousands of workers with not enough work [khoong dqur vieecj lamf] and seriously affected national income. Wages have lost something of their actual values. If we concern ourselves solely with measures for political and ideological education while maintaining a loose management organization, one which is of the administrative subsidies type and which is less concerned with economic efficiency, we cannot consolidate labor discipline and the emulation movement among the workers cannot develop in a continuous, widespread and increasingly stronger manner.

Regarding worker training, so far only more than 50 percent of workers have been trained in vocational schools and classes. The average level of our skilled workers is still low and progress is slow.

Working conditions and labor safety measures in many production installations have not been improved; occupational diseases have developed; labor accidents are still numerous; and the health of workers and civil servants has worsened, especially that of workers engaged in heavy work and workers handling toxic materials. Some workers who had not had enough time to become high-level skilled workers were forced to give up their jobs because of loss of strength. The number of workers forced to retire because of their premature loss of labor capability is increasing.

The pay and incentive systems are no longer suitable and cannot ensure proper generation of labor force for reproduction and no longer can prod workers to enthusiastically engage in production. Being the direct production force turning out 49.2 percent of gross social products, or 38.7 percent of national income, the workers, due to still irrational adjustment policies, are paid the lowest wages compared with those of the other strata of people.

Insufficient attention has been paid to the education about the working class within the party, at schools and in society, and appropriate education methods are still lacking. Therefore, our society in general still does not have a correct understanding of the position and role of the working class. Although reminders of the task of building the party among workers have often been given by the party Central Committee,over the past 5 years since the convening of the fourth party congress the percentage of party members with workers background and the percentage of worker-party members have increased very little.

The causes of the lingering problems mentioned above are shortcomings on the part of party committee echelons' leadership, shortcomings in state policies and planning, shortcomings in the mass organizations' education and motivation tasks and, especially, shortcomings on the part of our trade unions.

Building a comprehensively strong working class is an immediate and long-term requirement for ensuring success of socialism. Therefore, this requirement must be thoroughly grasped and included in economic and social plans, in state economic and labor policies, in the leadership of party committee echelons and in the activities of mass organizations.

We must consider the building of a stable and strong working class both as one of the major requirements and targets of state economic and social plans and as a condition for ensuring successful implementation of those plans. Plan building methods must be renovated. Efforts must be made to vigorously motivate workers to build plans and discuss measures for implementation so as to tap all potentials of production installations, create prerequisites and conditions for production, ensure that workers have enough work and sufficient income to help them generate proper labor force for reproduction and stabilize their families' lives.

We must formulate an efficient management mechanism and promptly amend labor, pay and incentive policies so as to encourage the workers to concern themselves with production efficiency, thriftiness, improvement of techniques, and rationalization of production. We must devise preferential treatment policies toward technical workers and cadres and good management cadres and policies to encourage workers doing hard work or handling toxic materials and compensate them properly for their work. Every year, production installations must map out plans for training and further training workers so as to enhance their skills, for improving working conditions, and for ensuring labor safety for workers.

We must, through workers' revolutionary movements and, especially, through emulation movements in productive labor and thriftiness, educate, train, and build a contingent of socialist workers. Under the leadership of party committee echelons, management agencies and trade unions at all echelons should closely coordinate their activities in applying educational, economic, and managerial measures so as to successfully organize fervent, widespread and efficient emulation movements among workers and civil servants. We must, through workers' revolutionary movements, select and train outstanding workers and then admit them to the party so as to further strengthen the component of workers directly engaging in production within the party and party committee echelons.

Party committee echelons should regularly educate and train cadres and party members on the stand and viewpoint of the working class. Mass organizations and schools from the general school level to college must have programs to provide education on the working class and job orientation so as to enable our country's younger generation to clearly understand the role and historic mission of the working class and train themselves to become worthy inheritors of the traditions of the heroic Vietnamese working class.

UN ENVOY ASSAILS BEIJING, WASHINGTON POLICIES

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 10 -- Speaking at the April 8 session of the special committee of the United Nations on non-use of force in international relations, Nguyen Can, representative of Vietnam's permanent U.N. mission, denounced China for continuing its attacks and armed provocations against Vietnam and the United States for continuing its reconnaissance flights along the Vietnamese coast.

"Elsewhere in the world", Nguyen Can pointed out, "the recent exacerbating situation in the Middle East and southern Africa resulting from the threat and use of force and the present explosive situation in Central America become the prime concern of peace-loving people all over the world. The Vietnamese representative noted that the increased danger of war caused by the U.S." has made it all the more necessary and imperative to conclude a world treaty on the non-use of force in international relations".

"The draft treaty containing practical and constructive proposals of the Soviet Union and the revised working paper with a number of positive suggestions of the groups of non-aligned countries offer a common ground for businesslike deliberation," he said. Nguyen Can reiterated Vietnam's proposal to start the dialogue between the two groups of Indochinese and ASEAN countries aimed at seeking a solution to problems concerning peace and stability in this region.

SRV SUPPORTS PLO AT KUWAIT NONALIGNED SESSION

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 11 -- "The Vietnamese people support the struggle for liberation of the Palestinian people", affirmed Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Ha Van Lau, head of a Vietnamese delegation to a special session of the Non-Aligned Coordinating Bureau held recently in Kuwait in support of the Palestinian people.

Speaking at the session the Vietnamese head delegate hailed the valiant and persistent fight of the people of Palestine and other Arab countries against the Israeli aggressors, expansionist instrument of the U.S. in the Middle East, and reiterated the consistent and strong support of the Vietnamese Government and people for the struggle for liberation of the Palestinian people under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), their sole authentic representative.

He vehemently condemned the aggressive and Zionist policy of Israel, which, with backing and encouragement from the U.S., has stubbornly refrained from withdrawing from the Arab territories it is occupying while committing many more crimes in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Golan Heights of Syria.

He firmly demanded that Israel pull completely and unconditionally out of Palestine and the other Arab territories under its occupation and that the U.S. stop backing Israel. He stressed: "The people and the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam are prepared to support all initiatives of the Non-Aligned Movement with the aim to effectively support the Palestinian people's heroic struggle till complete victory".

SAKURAUCHI RULES OUT MEDIATION BETWEEN U.S., PRC

[Text] Tokyo, April 14 (KYODO) -- Japan will not make any active efforts to mediate in a dispute between the United States and China over American sales of arms to Taiwan, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi indicated Wednesday.

In responding to a question by an opposition Japan Socialist Party member at a meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives, Sakurauchi said "Japan is not in a position" to mediate in the Sino-American dispute. He said the United States maintains the sales of arms to Taiwan represent only the "supply of parts."

However, the foreign minister said the Japanese Government has been urging both the U.S. and China to settle their differences through "amicable talks" and "retain their friendly relations." The Japanese Government, he added, will continue to maintain this stance.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Wednesday that the issue of arms sales was for China and America to resolve without outside interference, but that any rift between the two powers would have repercussions in Japan. He indicated that if China adopted a hostile stance toward the U.S., Japan would probably have to call back its ambassadors in the two countries for consultations.

FRENCH PRESIDENT MITTERRAND ARRIVES 14 APR

[Text] Tokyo, April 14 (KYODO) -- President Francois Mitterrand arrived here Wednesday as the first French head of state to make a state visit to Japan. The president was accompanied by his wife Madame Danielle Mitterrand and a large delegation including Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert, Economic and Finance Minister Jacques Delors and Culture Minister Jack Lang. Research and Technology Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement and Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson arrived in Tokyo earlier this week.

During his scheduled five-day stay, Mitterrand will meet with the emperor and hold talks with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki. The French president will deliver a message at the Diet Friday and is scheduled to meet with leaders of five major political parties. A visit to Tsukuba Research Center northeast of Tokyo is planned for Saturday. After a trip to Kyoto, the president will leave Japan Sunday. An official welcome ceremony is due to be staged Thursday morning at the Geihinkan guest house.

Prior to the arrival, a meeting between Foreign Minister Cheysson and his Japanese counterpart Yoshio Sakurauchi was held Tuesday. Other ministers accompanying Mitterrand will also meet with their Japanese counterparts during the visit. Agenda topics in the series of these talks will center on the bilateral trade and economic problems, cooperation in developing high technology, the international problems, including the East-West relations and disarmament and arms control.

As Mitterrand will host the Versailles summit meeting in June of industrialized democracies, he is expected to exchange views with Prime Minister Suzuki on its management.

Sakurauchi, Cheysson Hold Talks

OW140805 Tokyo KYODO in English 0753 GMT 14 Apr 82

[Text] Tokyo, April 14 (KYODO) -- Japan and France Wednesday shared a similar perception that the bilateral trade friction over Japan's huge trade surplus should be taken seriously and that the two parties should exert efforts to materialize balanced trade relations on an expanded scale, Foreign Ministry officials said. Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and his French counterpart Claude Cheysson reached this agreement at a regular consultation which opened a series of high-level talks between the two governments on the occasion of French President Francois Mitterrand's state visit to Japan which started the same day.

The Japanese officials quoted Cheysson as saying that the trade imbalance with Japan is growing and is likely to turn into a political issue if the trend continues. Japan in fiscal 1981, ended March 1982, enjoyed a surplus of dollar 1 billion in trade with France on a customs clearance basis. The figure was dollar 0.8 billion in fiscal 1980. Cheysson said that French export to Japan is only 35 percent of Japanese exports to France, they said. The French foreign minister urged Japan to buy more aircraft, helicopters, maritime relief planes, ferronickel and enriched uranium. He also pressed for a cut in duty on cognac and expansion of the import quota for processed cheese.

Sakurauchi was quoted as replying that he is convinced of the necessity to open the Japanese market wider to foreign goods. He explained recent measures decided by the government to cut tariffs two years earlier than originally scheduled and to lift or ease import procedures in that regard. Sakurauchi added that Japan is studying further steps for market opening to be compiled prior to the Versailles summit meeting of industrialized democracies in June. But he made no concrete commitment to east import restrictions on specific items, according to the officials. They exchanged views on the Soviet Union, Poland and Asia, but did not touch on Central American issues or Sino-Soviet relations in their three-hour-long discussion.

Cheysson said that France would sharply denounce "unacceptable" political moves by the Soviet Union, but would maintain trade relations with that country which are, he said, useful for mutual interests. France is involved in construction of natural gas pipelines from Siberia to Western Europe.

The Japanese officials declined to say what the French minister mentioned regarding France's relations with the United States. Sakurauchi was quoted as telling Cheysson that he regards China as remaining stable and that there is no sign of changes in Beijing's political intention to maintain cooperation with the Western bloc and the Third World.

Sakurauchi and Cheysson met again at 6 p.m. at the Foreign Ministry to discuss the situation in the Middle East and Southeast Asia. During their one-hour evening meeting, the French foreign minister was quoted as saying that France was particularly interested in Indochina. He also reportedly said there were moves in Vietnam to diversify its relation with foreign countries and briefed Sakurauchi on the background leading to France's earlier decision to extend assistance to Vietnam. Cheysson was also quoted as saying that it was desirable for Vietnam to cooperate with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). France respected a U.N. resolution calling for Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea, Cheysson said, adding, however, that a dialogue between the United Nations and Kampuchea could not be expected at present when Kampuchea's representation is in the hands of the ousted regime of Pol Pot.

SUZUKI MEETS PRC'S BO YIBO, PLEDGES AID

[Text] Tokyo, April 13 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki met with visiting Chinese Deputy Premier Bo Yibo Tuesday and pledged that Japan would assist China in its four modernization programs as much as possible. Bo, who has been in Japan since April 1 on a two-week visit, called on Suzuki at the prime minister's official residence.

The deputy premier was quoted as telling the prime minister that China could carry out its modernization scheme covering industry, defense, agriculture and science and education only with the aid of Japan. In this connection, he further reportedly said that China highly appreciated the yen 300 billion economic assistance Japan pledged at a Sino-Japanese ministerial conference last year. Suzuki, who is expected to visit Beijing in September on the occasion of the 10th anniversary of the normalization of relations between the two nations, was quoted as saying that Japan supported China's modernization project. He added that his government would maintain and develop cooperative relations with China.

NODONG SINMUN FLAYS SOUTH'S PROBE OF PUSAN ARSON

[Text] Pyongyang, April 12 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Monday comes out with a commentary on the frantic row kicked up by the South Korean puppet police headquarters after making public "the whole aspect of the investigation into the back-stage manipulators of the arson at the American Cultural Centre in Pusan." This "whole aspect of the investigation," it says, is replete with a brigandish and fraudulent content in which treachery attacks patriotism.

A signed commentary headlined "Investigation Operation Fully Revealing Ugly Colour of U.S. Imperialists' Lackey" notes that this document only serves as an irrefutable proof of the treason of traitor Chon Tu-hwan. The commentary remarks: The "investigation operation" surrounding the arson at the "American Cultural Centre" in Pusan carried out by the puppet clique for nearly one month strips traitor Chon Tu-hwan bare as the dirtiest lackey of the U.S. imperialists and truculent fascist maniac.

They are treating those involved in the arson at the "American Cultural Centre" as criminals by invoking the "national security law," the worst law ever known in the world, and other reactionary laws. This reminds us of a thief calling others thieves. The scattering of handbills containing anti-U.S. slogans and the setting of fire to the "American Cultural Centre" by South Korean people was an eruption of the pent-up hatred and grievances at the U.S. imperialists, the aggressors, and a just and righteous action for restoring the sovereignty and dignity of the nation and freedom and rights of man.

In the flames that engulfed the "American Cultural Centre" the world progressive and peaceloving people saw the undaunted spirit of the South Korean people who are not dead but alive and are fighting unyieldingly even under the barbaric repressive rule of the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique. But only puppet Chon Tu-hwan is an exception. Discomfited by the fire set to the base of ideological and cultural aggression of his master, this despicable running dog of the U.S. imperialists ran about like a headless chicken, out of spite. While begging forgiveness of his master, he launched a wholesale round-up and investigation operation, falling like a wolf upon the fellow countrymen who acted righteously.

Through the course of the investigation into the arson at the "American Cultural Centre," traitor Chon Tu-hwan stood naked to fully reveal his ugly colour as an ogrish butcher and murderer of the nation and despicable pro-American flunkeyist traitor who murders fellow countrymen for the aggressors. In fawning upon the master, while taking the fellow countrymen for the enemy in connection with the arson, traitor Chon Tu-hwan seeks to receive one more U.S. tag of "special-class stooge" from the master. By so doing, he intends to perpetuate the colonial domination of the U.S. imperialists over South Korea and, with the protection of their bayonet, crush the desire of the South Korean people for democracy and reunification, incite anti-communism and confrontation and prolong the division for an indefinite period in order to realize his sordid desire for long-term office.

Clearly seeing that it can never be a means of prolonging his days to estrange himself from the fellow countrymen and cling to the sleeves of outside forces, traitor Chon Tu-hwan must act with discretion and step down from power without delay before he meets the same doom as his predecessors.

The U.S. imperialists must look straight at the will of the South Korean people and the reality and stop encouraging the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique and promptly withdraw from South Korea, taking along their aggression armed forces, stresses the commentary.

KIM IL-SONG GIVES POLICY SPEECH AT JOINT MEETING

[Text] Pyongyang, April 14 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, made a policy speech on "Tasks of the People's Government in Modelling the Whole of Society on the Chuche Idea" at the joint meeting of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on April 14. Follows the full text of the speech:

Esteemed heads of state and other guests from many countries of the world, comrades and friends: I extend warm thanks to the heads of state, delegations and prominent personages from different countries for visiting our country this time with a profound feeling of friendship for our people and for attending this important meeting of ours today, and once more I would like to bid a hearty welcome to the honoured foreign guests.

Our people are highly delighted that a large number of guests from many foreign countries have come to us across continents and oceans, and the current visit of the guests makes them feel all the more warmly the fraternal sentiments of their international friends towards them. The present visit of the heads of state, delegations and distinguished personalities from various countries will open up a new phase in the development of friendship and cooperation between the people of the world and our people and in the strengthening of the unity and solidarity of the Nonaligned Movement.

Comrades, the election to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea was held successfully at the great moment when the entire people were on a vigorous march to implement the decision of the historic Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea. The recent election which was conducted in an exalted atmosphere vibrant with high political enthusiasm and revolutionary ardour throughout the country was an important political event in our revolution and in our people's life. All citizens of our country exercised their rights and fulfilled their duty as citizens of the republic by participating as one in the election with a high sense of pride as masters of the state and society, and amply demonstrated the unbreakable unity and solidarity of our people who are closely rallied around the government of the republic. The election further consolidated our people's government and increased our revolutionary forces.

Allow me to express my warm thanks to all people for their unqualified support for and deep trust in our party and the government of our republic in the last election, and to the newly elected deputies for entrusting me, expressing the will of the entire people at the first session of the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly, with the heavy responsibility to assume continued leadership of the government of the republic. The new government of the republic will perform all its revolutionary duties in good faith to meet the great trust and expectations of the masses of the people and will strive to accomplish the revolutionary cause of chuche.

Today, the government of the republic is confronted with the honourable task of modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea in accordance with the decision of the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea. The struggle to imbue the whole of society with the chuche idea is a sacred undertaking to build a communist society, the ideal of humanity, by stepping up our revolution which was pioneered and advanced under the banner of the chuche idea. Only when communist society is built by firmly adhering to the chuche idea as the guiding principle of revolution and construction and by thoroughly applying this idea, can the masses be made completely independent. Modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea is the general task of our revolution and the historic mission of the government of the republic. This government must fulfil its historic mission with credit by building a communist paradise in this land as quickly as possible through a vigorous struggle to model the whole of society on the chuche idea.

Comrades, in order to build communism, the revolution and construction should be vigorously pushed ahead under the banners of the people's power and three revolutions. Communism is the people's power plus the three revolutions. When the people's power is continually strengthened and its function and role are enhanced and thus the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions are thoroughly carried out, the communist paradise where the independence of the popular masses is completely realized will be built.

The people's power is a political weapon that guarantees the working masses an independent and creative life. Politics is a social function to organize and direct the people's activities in a coordinated way in keeping with common class or social interests. Without politics, there can be no collective lives and joint activities of people, nor can society be maintained and developed. Therefore, politics exists in any society and, only when the masses of the poeple become masters of politics, can they become true masters of society.

Politics is conducted by a definite form of political organization, and the character and role of this organization differ with social systems. In a society where the people have common interests and unity and cooperation constitute the basis of social relations, the political organization represents the common social interests and becomes a means of realizing them. However, in a class society where people have conflicting interests, the political organization serves as a means for protecting and meeting the interests of a class.

Our people's power is a political organization which represents the interests of the working class, farmers, working intellectuals and the rest of the labouring masses; it is a political weapon which serves the working people. Only when the people's power is continually strengthened is it possible to ensure independent rights and creative activities for the working masses, provide them with material and cultural well-being and firmly protect the people's independent and creative life.

The people's power represents the working people's right to independence. The independent right is the life and soul of man, the social being. If he does not have this right, he cannot lead an independent and creative life. Only when he has the right of independence can he hold the position of master in society and play his role as such and live like man.

Our people's independent aspirations and demands are crystallized and met through the people's power. Only under the people's power can the popular masses have the independent right and truly enhance the dignity and value of man as the master of the state and society and fully enjoy a free and happy life.

The people's power organizes the creativity of the working masses. Their creative power lies in organization and unity. In fact, the masses who are not united cannot be creative and display great strength. Only when they unite and cooperate can they be the most powerful beings to reform and change the world.

In socialist society the unity and cohesion of the popular masses is realized by the people's power, which is the most comprehensive political organization. By drawing all members of society into state organizations and educating them, the people's power knits them into a single political force and thus turns them into a highly creative driving force for social progress. Only by strengthening the people's power is it possible to speed up the revolution and construction by developing solidarity and a cooperative relationship among the masses and raising their creative role.

The people's power is the householder responsible for the people's livelihood. People's material and cultural life, along with their political life, constitutes an important aspect of social life. The independent and creative life of the masses is unthinkable apart from their material and cultural life. To raise their material and cultural standards steadily is a major factor guaranteeing their independent and creative life.

In socialist society the state is responsible for guaranteeing the people's material and cultural life. When the role of the people's power is enhanced, its leadership of economic construction and cultural development improved and the peoples life skilfully organized, it is possible to make the country rich and strong, systematically raise the people's material and cultural standards and obliterate the distinctions in the working people's living standards and enable all to live equally abundant lives.

The people's power protects the working people's independent and creative life. This life is realized through the struggle against alien and hostile elements who infringe upon their interests. In socialist society there are remnants of the overthrown exploiting classes and alien elements and there is also the danger of invasion by foreign imperialists. Unless the function of the people's power, a weapon of class struggle in socialist society, is strengthened, it is impossible to protect the people's independent and creative life. The people's power should continue to function as such a weapon as long as impure and hostile elements are active.

The ideological, technical and cultural revolutions are the basic way of building communism. The building of communism is a struggle to transform people, society and nature and provide the popular masses with complete social equality and happiness. After the establishment of the socialist system, the transformation of man, society and nature is carried out through the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions.

Even after the socialist revolution has triumphed and the socialist system has been established, the legacies of the old society remain in the ideological, technical and cultural spheres and, therefore, socialist society retains class distinctions, disparities in the working conditions and various other differences. If the working people's independence is to be realized completely, they should be liberated not only from class domination and subjugation but also from the binding effect of the legacies of the old society. To this end, the revolution should continue in socialist society, too.

The three revolutions are a struggle to eradicate the survivals of the old society in the ideological, technical and cultural spheres and create new communist ideology, technology and culture; this is the content of the continuous revolution in socialist society. It is essential to vigorously carry out the three revolutions in order to successfully conduct the transformation of man, society and nature and make all members of society communist-minded and completely eliminate the class distinctions and the differences in the working conditions and material standards and realize complete social equality for the working people.

After the triumph of the socialist revolution and the establishment of the socialist system, the content of the revolution changes, so the methods should also change accordingly. The struggle to eradicate the legacies of the old society in socialist society is a work among the popular masses, the masters of the state and society, and it is also a work done by themselves. Therefore, it should be conducted by new methods fundamentally different from the struggle against the exploiting classes and institutions. In socialist society the struggle to eradicate the legacies of the old soceity should, on all accounts, be conducted by means of educating and remolding people, by means of creating the new and eliminating the old.

The three revolutions which transform the old and create the new are revolutionary methods which conform with the essence of the socialist system and the will of the people. In socialist society the revolution should always be carried out by these methods. Only then is it possible to strengthen the unity and solidarity of the popular masses and increase their revolutionary zeal and creative ability and thus carry out the building of socialism and communism with success. Once a communist society is built, the three revolutions will end as a struggle to eliminate the legacies of the old society. Even after communism has been built, however, it is necessary to continue with the work of educating people, improving social relations and conquering nature.

Therefore, the struggle will go on to discard the old and create the new in the ideological, technical and cultural spheres, and through this struggle society will continue to develop.

The people's power and three revolutions are great banners of communist construction. Only when we advance under these banners can we achieve the complete victory of socialism and hasten the bright future of communism. Today we are confronted with the task of further strengthening the people's power and elevating its function and role in every way to meet the requirements of the new phase of revolutionary development. Our people's power is based on the worker-peasant alliance led by the working class and relies on the united front of the broad masses of the people. It is a new form of revolutionary power, the first of its kind in history. Our people's power conforms not only with the period of democratic and socialist revolutions, but it is the most excellent power that conforms also with the present period of the struggle to build socialism and communism. We should take a high pride in having the best revolutionary power in the world and strengthen and develop the people's power, thereby to fully ensure the masses of the people an independent and creative life and actively propel the revolution and construction.

The government of the republic should thoroughly apply the chuche idea in all sphere of its state activity. The chuche idea is the sole guiding idea of the government of the republic. The government can satisfactorily fulfil its duties only when it is firmly guided by the chuche idea and thoroughly applies it in all its activities.

The chuche idea demands that with an attitude worthy of the master towards the revolution and construction, one should embody chuche in thinking, independence in politics and self-reliance, self-reliant economy and defence -- these are the guiding principles of our revolution. The government of the republic should firmly establish chuche in thinking and thoroughly implement the principles of independence in politics and self-reliance in the economy and national defence, thus vigorously stepping up the revolution and construction and developing our country constantly to be a country of chuche, to be a strong socialist state, politically independent, economically self-reliant and able to safeguard the nation on its own.

The government of the republic should carry through the mass line in all its activities. The mass line demands that the interests of the masses should be defended in the revolution and construction and that all problems arising therein should be solved by enhancing the role of the masses. The mass line should be carried through in the activities of the people's power, and this is indispensable for fully guaranteeing the masses their position as masters of the state and society and making them fulfil their role as performers of the revolution and construction.

What is important in implementing the mass line is to strongly defend the interests of the working masses. Nothing is more important and honourable in the activities of the people's power than protecting the interests of the masses. The government of the republic should map out all its lines and policies to meet the independent aspirations and demands of the working masses and should solve all problems of the revolution and construction on the basis of their interests as the criterion. When the government of the republic faithfully serves the people, the confidence of the masses in the people's power will deepen and all people will entrust their destiny entirely to the government and fight to the end in support of the republic.

The working masses have inexhaustible strength and wisdom and a wealth of practical experience. Once the creative ability of the masses is brought into full play, there will be nothing impossible for them. Officials of people's power organisations should go and explain the party's lines and policies among the masses, consult them about ways and means for carrying them out and rouse them willingly to turn out in the struggle for their implementation.

When the working masses display a high degree of revolutionary enthusiasm and creative wisdom, wonders and radical changes will take place ceaselessly in our revolution and construction.

The government of the republic should further strengthen its unified leadership of society. As the building of socialism and communism progresses, society becomes more organized and social life diversified. Hence, the necessity of intensifying the unified leadership of society in keeping with the progress of society. Only when the unified leadership of the people's power over society is strengthened, can all spheres of social life be developed in keeping with the aspirations of the working class and the harmonious progress of the whole society be guaranteed.

The government of the republic should establish a well-regulated work system and enhance the role of government bodies at all levels to guide economic construction and cultural development and public services in a responsible manner and should exercise unified supervision over all areas of the country and all aspects of social life. The people's power should establish a revolutionary system and order in all spheres of state and public activity and lead all members of society to observe voluntarily the judicial order of the state and the moral codes of society.

The ideological, technical and cultural revolutions are our party's general line in the building of socialism and communism. By vigorously carrying out the three revolutions the government of the republic should revolutionize, working-classize and intellectualize all members of society and transform all domains of society as required by the working class, thus successfully taking the ideological and material fortresses of communism.

In carrying out the three revolutions the government of the republic should adhere to the principle of giving definite priority to the ideological revolution. The ideological revolution goes first in the revolution. This revolution should be kept ahead of others to reform the thinking of people and this is essential to ensure success in the remolding of man and smoothly untangle, through their enhanced revolutionary zeal, all problems arising in the revolution and construction.

Historical experience shows that unless the ideological revolution is steadily intensified in socialist society, old ideas may revive in the minds of people and capitalist thoughts may penetrate from without and, as a result, not only the revolution and construction may be retarded but even the revolutionary gains already attained may be jeopardized. By further intensifying the ideological revolution to conform with revolutionary requirements, we should get all working people to equip themselves firmly with the chuche idea, the revolutionary idea of our party, and to strive devotedly for victory in the revolutionary cause of chuche. Meanwhile, we should conduct efficient ideological education so that every working man and woman will hate the exploiting classes and system, ardently love the socialist system and actively endeavour for the good of society and the collective and of the country and the people. We should closely combine the ideological revolution with practical activities in socialist construction and thus induce all working people to revolutionize themselves to the backbone through the implementation of their revolutionary tasks and cultivate loyalty to the party and the revolution.

The government of the republic should push ahead energetically with the technical revolution. The technical revolution is an honourable struggle to improve the working conditions of the people and raise their material standard living. Active promotion of the technical resolution is the only way to develop the country's productive forces and free all working people from hard labour and provide them with an independent and creative working life and constantly increase their material welfare.

An important task before the technical revolution now is to successfully solve scientific and technological problems arising in the work of putting the national economy on a chuche-oriented, modern and scientific basis. In all spheres of the national economy vigorous efforts should be made to improve techniques and introduce mechanization, automation and remote control in production so that the national economy will be more independent and put on the basis of modern science and technology.

Success in the technical revolution requires activating the creative wisdom and revolutionary zeal of scientists, technicians and workers. In all sectors of the national economy the sense of responsibility and role of scientists and technicians should be enhanced and their creative cooperation with workers strengthened so that technical innovations will be made continuously by advancing original ideas and positive proposals and taking daring actions.

The government of the republic should push ahead briskly with the cultural revolution. The central task of the cultural revolution is to realize the intellectualization of the whole of society. Only when all society is intellectualized through a vigorous cultural revolution can every member of society be turned into a well-rounded communistic person and all distinctions in labour, those between mental and physical labour included, be eliminated once and for all.

For the intellectualization of the whole of society education should be developed. People's government bodies should improve educational work to train all of the younger generation into communists of a chuche type, fully prepared mentally, morally and physically, and raise the cultural and technical standards of all working people. While keeping education well ahead of other work, we should rapidly advance all fields of socialist cultural development. Chuche-based science and technology and revolutionary literature and art should be comprehensively developed and a cultured way of life and production practices fully established along socialist lines in all spheres of the revolution and construction.

The government of the republic should closely follow the line of the three revolutions and rouse all people actively to carry out these revolutions and thus admirably accomplish the historic cause of building socialism and communism.

Comrades, in order to build a communist society and fully realize independence for the masses of the people, we should vigorously push ahead with socialist economic construction. Communist society is not only a society where all people are comprehensively developed and the social and political independence of the popular masses is fully realized, but also a society of great abundance where the material needs of social life are fully met. Only when the material fortress of communism is taken through accelerated economic construction can we realize communist distribution according to needs and fully meet the demand of the masses for independence in material life. Further, laying solid material and technical foundations of socialism and communism through efficient economic construction is an essential requirement to consolidate and develop the socialist system and successfully transform all domains of society on communist lines.

The Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea clearly set forth the strategic line and immediate fighting tasks of socialist economic construction aimed at laying firm material and technical foundations of socialism and communism. The government of the republic should make tireless efforts to put the national economy on a chuche-oriented, modern and scientific basis on line with the programme of socialist economic construction mapped out at the party congress and, for the present, should work energetically to fulfill the second seven-year plan ahead of schedule and attain the 1980's ten long-term objectives of socialist economic construction.

The ten long-term targets put forward by the Workers Party of Korea at its sixth congress are a magnificent plan to build solid material and technical foundations commensurate with a completely victorious socialist society and to radically raise the people's material and cultural standards. By mobilizing the entire people, the government of the republic should speed up the general onward movement on all fronts of socialist construction and attain the ten long-term objectives without fail.

Efforts should be concentrated, first of all, on reaching the goals of grain and seafood production to satisfy the people's needs for food. What is most vital in the material life of society is the food problem and the key to this problem is to produce plenty of cereals. In the past our party and the government of the republic carried out the agriculture-first policy and radically increased grain production, splendidly solving the food problem. Today we are confronted with the honourable task of producing more cereals and completely solving the food problem.

Grain is immediately communism. As the saying goes, a man is generous only when his rice bin is full, so only when food is plentiful will the people's thoughts improve and everything go off smoothly. Only when grain is produced in plenty and the people are provided with sufficient food can socialist and communist construction be pushed forward successfully, and only when there is enough grain to supply according to needs will a communist society be built. Of the ten long-term objectives of socialist economic construction, the goal of grain production should be hit first; the communist principle of distribution should be carried into effect first in the supply of grain to the people.

If we are to attain the goal of 15 million tons of grain production put forward at the sixth party congress, we should thoroughly carry out the four nature-remaking projects. In our country where arable land is limited and farming is highly intensive, an important way of increasing grain production is to decisively expand the crop area. If we carry out the four nature-remaking projects advanced by the party -- reclaiming tideland extensively, finding a large area of new land for cultivation and completing the building of the Nampo lock gate and the Taechon power station aimed at solving the problem of water supply on the tideland -- we will be able to augment grain production radically and largely increase the output of electricity. The reclamation of 300,000 chongbo of tideland, the acquisition of 200,000 chongbo of new land and the building of the Nampo lock gate and the Taechon power station are an honourable and fruitful work to build a paradise in our beautiful land, thus realizing the communist ideal and our people's centuries-old desire to enjoy an independent and creative life to their hearts' content.

The entire party, country and people should come out as one in the vigorous struggle to carry out the four nature-remaking projects. We should properly mobilize the high zeal and creative power of the working people who have risen in hearty response to the party's militant call and turn to full account the great potentialities of the independent socialist national economy and thus complete the four projects including the reclamation of tideland quickly without fail. Along with expanding the crop area through the reclamation of tideland and new land, we should construct utility networks in the newly reclaimed lands in a planned way and take full measures necessary for using the lands effectively and raising crops well.

If we are to attain the goal of grain production we should augment its output by accelerating comprehensive mechanization and chemization of agriculture and thoroughly implementing the chuche farming method. Increasing the per-unit-area yield through constant modernization and scientization of agricultural production as required by the chuche farming method is an important policy we should always adhere to in developing agriculture. In particular, we should obtain many new high-yielding varieties by improving seed production and ameliorate the methods of crop cultivation to bring the average per-chongbo yield of rice to nine tons and maize to over 9.5 tons in the next few years.

Attaining the goal of seafood production is important in solving the food problem. Our country which has many rivers and streams and is surrounded by the sea on three sides, abounds in marine resources and has favourable conditions for developing the fisheries. If we make use of our favourable natural conditions and develop the fisheries, we can make the people's diets still more diversified and solve the food problem more satisfactorily.

We should not fail to attain the goal of five million tons of seafood production. To this end, we should build more up-to-date fishing vessels, strengthen the material and technical foundations of the fisheries and introduce scientific fishing methods on a large scale. While diversifying the production of seafood, we should concentrate efforts on catching pollack, so that we will be able to increase its annual output to over 2.5 million tons by the end of the 1980's.

Meanwhile, we should decisively improve fish processing so that the fishing industry can contribute better to the people's dietary life.

We should work energetically to reach the goals of chemical products and fabrics. To attain the production goals for chemical goods and fabrics is of great significance in raising the living standard of the people. When the chemical and light industries reach a high level, we can develop agriculture and hit the target of grain production and increase the output of various consumer goods to fully meet the ever-growing demands of the people.

By directing great efforts to the chemical industry we must attain the target of seven million tons of chemical fertilizers and increase the output of chemical fibres and other chemical goods in a big way. On the principle of strengthening the independence and chuche character of the chemical industry, we should reequip and expand existing chemical factories and set up many new ones feeding on domestic resources. We should also widely introduce new production and technical processes, including carbide production by the oxygen-blowing-in method, so that we will largely increase the output of chemical fertilizers and fibres, synthetic resin and rubber to ensure an adequate supply of various raw and other materials for the development of agriculture and light industry.

A great change should be made in the advancement of light industry. We should make the best use of the production capacities of light industry factories and build many new, up-to-date ones. We should thus hit the production target of 1,500 million meters of fabrics without fail and bring about a new upswing in the production of foodstuffs, goods for domestic and cultural use and other consumer goods.

Vigorous efforts should be made to attain the production goals of electricity, coal, metal and cement. Success in socialist economic construction in general depends on how to develop the key industries which form the backbone of the national economy. Heavy industry, including the electrical, mining and metallurgical industries, should be developed quickly. This is the only way to continue to advance the national economy at a high rate, consolidate foundations for the independent socialist national economy and strengthen the country's economic might. The rapid development of heavy industry is indispensable for the satisfactory solution of the problem of improving the people's livelihood.

We should continue to direct great efforts to developing the electrical, mining, metal and cement industries, so that we will certainly attain the production targets of 100,000 million kWh of electricity, 120 million tons of coal, 15 million tons of steel, 1.5 million tons of nonferrous metals and 20 million tons of cement.

Electricity is the basic motive power for production. Increased output of electricity is essential for ensuring normality in production in all fields of the national economy and satisfying the great demands for power in the new long-term period. In order to attain the electricity production goal it is necessary to put the main emphasis on the construction of hydroelectric power stations and properly combine this with the building of thermal and other types of power stations based on different power resources, in accordance with our party's chuche policy for power base construction. Hydroelectric power stations are economically very effective and reliable power bases which operate on our rich hydro-power resources. We should actively harness these resources and build many hydroelectric power stations, especially by new methods which make it possible to tap rivers and streams comprehensively. We should hasten and quickly finish the construction of the hydroelectric power stations now at the stage of completion, build large hydraulic power plants including the Taechon, Pochon and Kumgangsan power stations, and set up many small and medium ones in all parts of the country.

Along with the hydroelectric power stations, a number of thermal power plants should be built. The Pukchang and Pyongyang thermal power plants should be expanded to considerably augment their production capacities and large ones be built in those areas which produce plenty of coal, like the Anju District, and in major towns.

Coal is a major raw material and fuel for our chuche industry. We should concentrate on the coal mines in the Anju, Sunchon, Tokchon and northern districts which have large deposits and have favourable conditions for development and radically increase coal production. In particular, we should reconstruct and expand on modern lines the mines in the Anju District which have inexhaustible deposits of good-quality coal, so that the annual production of coal will reach 70-100 million tons in the future. Meanwhile, we should open many new large coal mines in areas which are highly promising and advantageous for development and also actively work to build small and medium ones.

In order to increase coal production we should make mining equipment large, modern and high-speed and introduce comprehensive mechanization and automation in mining operations. We should give definite precedence to tunnelling and removal of overburden through the modernization of excavating machines, rock drills and other equipment and the introduction of advanced methods of work, and should decisively raise the level of mechanization in mining and carriage of coal by extensively introducing various efficient coal-cutting machines and using large and modern transport equipment.

The steel production target is a most important one in the ten long-term objectives that we must attain. Only when we reach this target can we successfully attain all the other goals of socialist economic construction in the 1980's. In order to reach the goal of steel production, we must reconstruct and expand the existing metallurgical plants and build new ones and radically increase steel production capacity. We should rebuild the Kim Chaek iron works to expand it to be a big metallurgical base with an annual capacity of seven million tons, expand the Hwanghae iron works, Songjin and Kangson steel plants to increase their production capacities considerably and build a new Taedonggang iron works of our own style, with an annual capacity of three million tons. We should continue to direct great efforts to enhancing the independence and chuche character of the ferrous metallurgical industry and further develop a new metallurgical process using domestic fuel.

An important question in hitting the steel production target is to strengthen iron-ore production bases. We should reconstruct and expand on a large scale the Musan, Tokhyon, Toksong and other mines which are highly promising and open up many new iron mines in zones with large deposits and favourable conditions for development.

Attaining the production goal for nonferrous metals is very important in developing the national economy. We should rebuild and enlarge in a big way existing mines including the Komdok mine, a leading nonferrous metal production base in our country, and develop many new mines to rapidly increase the production of various nonferrous metal ores. In order to develop nonferrous metal production under a far-sighted programme it is essential to intensify geological prospecting. Sufficient deposits of minerals should be discovered at existing mines to boost their production continuously, many reserve places secured to open up new mines, and the party's policy of mass-mining, mass-hauling and mass-processing thoroughly implemented.

The struggle to hit the target of cement production should be intensified. To this end, the production processes at existing cement factories should be revamped into processes based on our own new method of calcination to raise the output of cement quickly. Along with this, it is necessary to build more new up-to-date calcination kilns at the Sunchon, February 8, Chonnaeri and other cement factories which have good technical and economic conditions, and to set up in different places many small and medium-sized cement factories which are fed with locally available raw materials.

The ten long-term objectives of socialist economic construction for the 1980's are very difficult and huge goals for increasing production several times in different economic sectors and for advancing our independent socialist national economy onto a new higher stage. But we have a firm guarantee for the attainment of these objectives.

We have a powerful machine-building industry capable of producing modern machinery and equipment to satisfy the demands of different economic branches. Today our machine-building industry is mass-producing modern generating and mining equipment and creditably turning out complete sets of plants for matallurgical, cement and other factories. In addition, our country is rich in hydraulic, mineral and other natural resources. Since we have an up-to-date machine-building industry, the pivot of heavy industry and the basis of technological progress, as well as an unlimited wealth of natural resources, the ten long-term objectives of socialist economic construction are well within our power.

All our officials of state and economic institutions and working people should turn out as one with firm confidence and courage to achieve the new long-term objectives and bring about a fresh upswing in socialist economic construction by tapping all reserves and potentialities. If these objectives are to be attained, capital construction should be undertaken efficiently to increase production capacities.

Our long-term objectives are tasks of economic construction which envisage huge capital construction projects. We should push forward capital construction in a planned way with a veiw to reconstructing and expanding existing factories and enterprises on up-to-date lines and building new power plants, mines and factories. On the basis of minute calculations of the perspective demands of the developing national economy and the actual conditions and technical and economic effects, we should correctly fix the orientation of the investments and specific construction projects and concentrate our efforts on major projects by determining the proper order of priority. This will successfully ensure the huge task of capital construction.

Ensuring transport smoothly is an important guarantee for the successful attainment of the new long-term objectives. We should develop railway, road and water transport, carry through the policy of using cableways, conveyers and pipelines in carriage and rationally organize combined communication, centralized and container transport by improving the organization of transport. Thus, we will carry raw and other materials for production in good time and fully meet the increasing transport needs of different sectors of the national economy.

In order to be successful in carrying out the long-term tasks of socialist economic construction, it is imperative to further improve the guidance of economic work and the management of enterprises. It is an inevitable requirement for the development of the socialist economy to continuously improve economic guidance and enterprise management, according as economic construction rises to a higher stage. In our country today great potentialities for economic development lie in improving economic guidance and enterprise management.

By thoroughly introducing the Taean work system in all fields of the national economy we should effect unified and detailed planning more efficiently, properly organize economic work and direct production and completely regularize enterprise management. Meanwhile, it is important to give full play to the advantages of the new system of guidance of industry. In keeping with the requirements of the new realities in which industry has grown in scope and has complex productive relations between its branches, we took steps to set up provincial economic guidance committees and reorganize the system of guidance of industry so as to bring economic guidance closer to the realities. In economic guidance we should strengthen the functions of these provincial committees and other bodies of economic guidance and enhance economic officials' sense of responsibility and role to meet the demands of the new system of industrial guidance.

If the long-term objectives of socialist economic construction are to be attained with credit, the revolutionary principle of self-reliance should be firmly maintained. To have faith in one's strength and to rely on one's strength in settling all matters is a principle consistently observed by our party and the government of the republic in revolutionary struggle and construction work; it is the basic means for attaining the new long-term objectives with success. All officials and working people should arm themselves with the chuche idea and fully apply the revolutionary principle of self-reliance. Thus, finding what is in short supply and making what is lacking, they should splendidly carry out all tasks of socialist economic construction with their own strength, techniques and natural resources.

Socialist economic construction is undertaken by the workers, farmers and other working people, and their strength and wisdom are boundless. The key to successful implementation of the colossal tasks of economic construction confronting us lies in arousing the working masses to show a high degree of revolutionary enthusiasm and in bringing their creative wisdom into full play.

The officials of peoples government and state economic organizations should go deep among the working masses, conduct political work before all else and organize work efficiently, so that all working people carry out their economic tasks by giving free scope to the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and hard work in an attitude worthy of the masters of the revolution. All our leading personnel and working people should attain the ten long-term objectives of socialist economic construction honourable by pooling their strength and wisdom with great loyalty to the party and the revolution and ardent revolutionary zeal, thereby bringing about a radical change in the struggle for the building of socialism and communism.

Comrades, achieving independence for the country and the nation poses itself as a very important question in the struggle for the independence of the masses of the people. The country and the nation is a historically formed unit of social life and a solid collective of people. The struggle of the popular masses for independence goes on with the national state as a unit, and their destiny, too, is hewed out within the bounds of the nation or the state. As long as there are frontiers and distinctions between nations and people live with the national state as a unit, the destiny of the masses is inseparable from that of the country and the nation. If the country and the nation is subordinated, its people cannot escape slavery. If the country and the nation has no independence, the masses of the people cannot achieve independence either. Only when the independence of the country and the nation is guaranteed can the masses carve out their destiny successfully in accordance with their aspirations and requirements.

The independence of the country and the nation is a prerequisite to the independence of the masses. And the struggle for the former is immediately the struggle for the latter. Therefore, the masses should fight to ensure independence for their country and nation before anything else and assume an attitude worthy of the masters towards the revolution in their country. In order to ensure independence for the country and the nation, national independence should be won and an independent government be established.

The independence of the country and the nation is maintained and realized by an independent government. The independent government alone can uphold national sovereignty and execute all policies to suit the independent aspirations and requirements of the popular masses. To maintain independence in state activity is the first criterion of an independent, sovereign state. Even if a country has a government, but if the government has no independence and acts under the baton of others, such a country cannot be called an independent, sovereign state in the true sense of the word. The independent, sovereign state should map out all lines and policies on its own in accordance with its actual conditions, implement them by itself and exercise a full sovereign right in foreign relations.

The government of our republic is a truly independent government. Since the first days of its foundation our people's government has taken the chuche idea as its invariable guideline and thoroughly maintained independence in all spheres of state activity. It has carried out the democratic and socialist revolutions on its own, undertaken economic and cultural construction independently and carried on national defence and foreign activities by itself. Our country which was once erased from the world map is now well known all over the world as an independent, sovereign socialist state and our people who had no rights and were humiliated for a long time have become genuine masters of their own destiny and are leading a full, worthwhile life. This is precisely due to the thorough implementation of an independent line by the government of the republic in all fields of state activity. The correctness of the independent line adhered to by the government of the republic has already been proved clearly in practice.

The government of the republic will, in the future, too, as in the past, firmly maintain independence in all areas of state activity. The government will transform man and society in our own fashion and remake nature in our own way to build a communist society of our own style on our land which will meet the aspirations of our people.

Today the government of the republic is confronted with the urgent task of reunifying the divided country by making the U.S. troops withdraw from South Korea and thus achieving national sovereignty completely on a nationwide scale. The basic principle followed consistently by our party and the government of the republic in the struggle for national reunification is that the Korean people themselves reunify the country independently without any foreign interference.

The question of national reunification is, after all, an internal affair of the Korean nation and it is a matter concerned with the right of our people to self-determination. The Korean people have the sacred right to self-determination and are fully capable of deciding their own internal affairs by themselves. Outside forces have no reason and ground whatever to meddle in the question of reunification of Korea. The Korean people should independently settle the reunification question in accordance with their own will and wishes.

The most important thing in achieving national reunification independently is to get the U.S. troops withdrawn from South Korea and put an end to the interference of U.S. imperialism in the internal affairs of Korea. Occupying half of our territory by force and meddling in our internal affairs, U.S. imperialism is trampling on our national sovereignty and is hindering our country's reunification with its "two Koreas" policy. U.S. troops' presence in South Korea is the greatest obstacle to the independent reunification of our country. As long as the U.S. imperialist forces of aggression are left alone in South Korea, the reunification question can never be solved independently.

The attitude towards the U.S. imperialist forces of aggression occupying South Korea is the touchstone to tell the stand of people towards the reunification question. No matter how many good words one may utter to show his intention to reunify the country, while saying not a word about making U.S. imperialist forces of aggression quit South Korea, this is no more than a lie fooling the public opinion. One who sincerely wishes reunification should naturally come out with the demand for the withdrawal of U.S. troops before mentioning other things. All people of Korea should hasten the independent reunification of the country by turning out as one in the struggle for getting the U.S. imperialist forces of aggression withdrawn from South Korea.

In order to reunify the country independently it is essential to check resolutely the policy of depending on foreign forces pursued by the South Korean authorities. Dependence on foreign forces leads directly to national ruin. As long as one depends on foreign forces, one can never find a correct solution to the internal affairs of one's nation and cannot escape the miserable situation in which the fate of one's nation is trifled with.

In persisting in the policy of depending on outside forces, the South Korean rulers are now committing an unpatriotic act of treachery to the nation. If they continue to follow the path of dependence on foreign forces, the path of treachery to the nation, against the unanimous aspirations of the nation, they will come to commit ever more grave, forever indelible crimes against the country and the people.

If now they want to make amends even a little for their past crimes committed against the country and the people and take the right path, they should renounce the policy of dependence on foreign forces and bear up for the independent stand and they should join in the nationwide struggle for driving out the U.S. imperialist forces of aggression from South Korea.

He will meet and consult with anyone who is opposed to U.S. imperialist occupation and interference in South Korea and keeps the independent stand about the reunification question in real earnest.

The most realistic and reasonable way to achieve the independent reunification of our country lies in the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo as proposed by the Workers Party of Korea at its sixth congress. The government of the republic will make every effort to carry into effect our party's fair proposal for reunification through the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

The path to reunification is beset with many obstacles and difficulties, but we will pull through them with the united forces of the whole nation and finally achieve the historic cause of national reunification. Our people will not only reunify the country independently, but, after reunification, too, will follow as ever the road of independence. A united Korea will be a completely independent and sovereign, non-aligned state, which will never be a satellite of any country, will never depend on any outside forces and will never participate in any bloc.

Ours is the time of independence. The formerly oppressed and mistreated people have emerged as masters of the world and are pushing forward the wheels of history and the fierce current of independence is sweeping all continents. The peoples of many countries freed from the colonial yoke of imperialism are vigorously following the road of independence and all progressive people around the world are fighting courageously against all forms of domination and subjugation. Not only those countries which are building a new society after their independence, but also some of the capitalist countries are heading for independence. That the people of the world demand independence and that many countries follow the road of independence are the main trend of our time which no force can ever check.

The progressive people of the world must give a greater momentum to the current of independence in our times and thus bring about independence for the whole world. An independent world means a world where dominationism and colonialism of all forms have been wiped out and the right of all countries and nations to independence is completely realized. When all countries and all nations become independent, free from all sorts of foreign domination and subjugation, and firmly maintain independence, the whole world will become independent. When the whole world attains independence, a new world war can be prevented, a durable world peace maintained and a wide road will be paved for all countries and nations to build an independent and prosperous new society and bring complete independence to the masses of the people.

In order to make the whole world independent, all countries and nations must firmly maintain independence. Independence is the life and soul of a country and a nation. Only when they adhere to independence can they uphold their dignity, consolidate independence and achieve prosperity. Those countries which champion independence must categorically reject all foreign interference and refrain from dancing to the tune of others or from blindly toeing others' line. Then imperialism and dominationism will become powerless and any power politics or batons will be rendered helpless.

What is important for a country and a nation in maintaining independence is to exercise their full sovereignty in foreign relations. This is their sacred rights. Although there are big and small countries and advanced and backward nations in the world, there can be no countries with higher or lower authority, nor can there be nations destined to dominate or to be dominated. All countries and nations are completely equal and independent. All countries and nations must develop the relations of friendship and cooperation on the principles of equality and mutual respect; they must not infringe upon the sovereignty of others nor allow their own sovereignty to be violated. When they exercise their sovereign rights fully, there will be no commanding or obeying countries, no dominating and dominated nations in the world and complete equality and freedom will be ensured for countries and nations.

If the whole world is to be independent, the Nonaligned Movement must be expanded and developed. The nonalignment is a progressive movement which is opposed to all domination and subjugation and struggles for the sovereignty of countries and nations. This movement reflects the contemporary trend towards independence and embodies in it the noble idea of independence against imperialism. Only through the expansion and development of this movement can the newly-emerging countries firmly defend their sovereignty and check and frustrate the arbitrariness of the imperialists on the international scene.

An important question in extending and developing the Nonaligned Movement is to strengthen the unity and solidarity of this movement. To strengthen its unity and solidarity is all the more important in view of the persistent moves pursued by the imperialists today to split the newly-emerging countries and set them at variance with each other. The nonaligned countries must counter these imperialist moves with the strategy of unity. They must not be at feud with one another or fight among themselves, fooled by the drafty tricks of the imperialists; they must unite firmly and zero in on the imperialists' aggression and intervention. They must forge solid political unity and closely cooperate in economic and technical affairs. If the Nonaligned Movement strengthens its unity and solidarity and vigorously fights on, this will accelerate the realization of independence throughout the world.

The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea regards it as a major foreign policy creed to strengthen friendship and solidarity with all progressive countries and struggle to build a new independent world. As in the past, so also in the future, the government of the republic will unite solidly with those countries which advocate independence, and develop the relations of friendship and cooperation with them and strive to check and frustrate the imperialist policy of aggression and war and safeguard world peace and security. Our republic, as a dignified member of the Nonaligned Movement, will always be faithful to the principles and ideas of this movement and extend unflagging support and encouragement to the people of the world in their struggle for national independence and a new society.

Going with the strong current of the times towards independence, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people will strive more stoutly to bring about independence for all countries and nations and to accelerate the cause of achieving independence for the whole world.

Comrades, today our revolution has entered a new higher stage and our people's future is bright. With high revolutionary pride and firm confidence in victory, the entire people should courageously struggle to move up the brilliant communist future.

Our people who struggle for the righteous revolutionary cause under the correct leadership of our party and with state power firmly in their hands will always be victorious.

Let all of us march forward vigorously towards the country's independent, peaceful reunification and the complete victory of socialism, and the final accomplishment of the revolutionary cause of chuche, firmly united around our party and the government of the republic under the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea.

Long live the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, our glorious motherland!

Long live the friendship and solidarity of the people of the world who advocate independence!

[Text] Pyongyang, April 14 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, made a speech at the banquet he arranged on the evening of April 13 in honour of the party and government delegation of the People's Republic of Mozambique headed by Marshal Samora Moises Machel, president of the Mozambique Liberation Front Party (Frelimo) and president of the People's Republic of Mozambique. Follows the full text of the speech:

Esteemed Comrade Samora Moises Machel, dear guests from Mozambique, comrades and friends: Today I am really glad to see you again, Comrade President Samora Moises Machel, our close comrade-in-arms, in our Pyongyang long since we met before. Though Mozambique and Korea are far-off from each other geographically, the warm friendship shared by us has brought us together today.

I warmly welcome as our most distinguished guest esteemed Comrade Machel who came a long way with particular feelings of trust and friendship for us. This another visit of yours adds beauty to the annals of friendship between the two countries which is adorned with the revolutionary sense of duty. You are our true brother, comrade and comrade-in-arms.

The relations between us were sealed in the raging flames of a common struggle for the victory of the cause of anti-imperialism and independence at the time when the national liberation struggle was at its height in Mozambique. You comrade president visited us twice when you were in combat uniform to deepen our fraternal friendship and later, in 1978, visited us with the joy of victory as head of a newly independent state.

And you are here now again on the occasion of my 70th birthday.

This is an expression of your deep trust in us; we are greatly moved by your true revolutionary comradeship. We are proud of having such a true friend like you in Africa. I am most happy to meet you again and have an opportunity of sharing friendly feelings and exchanging views on questions of common concern at the present time.

Korea and Mozambique are closely united by the common purpose of building a new society free from exploitation and oppression and realizing full independence of the people against all forms of domination and subjugation. Today, in your country, the hopeful plan of you comrade president for building a new Mozambique is becoming a reality with each passing day. The successes made in liberated Mozambique prove that the line of socialist construction chosen by you in conformity with your specific conditions and the policy for its implementation are entirely correct and show that nothing can stop your advance.

We see the traits of an outstanding revolutionary of Africa in your energetic activities, Comrade President Machel, who is leading the heroic Mozambican people to victory with conviction of a bright socialist future. The Korean people sincerely hope that your people will successfully carry out the very important tasks put forward at the Third Congress of Frelimo and are firmly resolved to support and encourage to the end the Mozambican friends' struggle to build a new life, frustrating the constant manoeuvres of the imperialists and racists for aggression and intervention.

The independent development of Mozambique is an encouragement to the people of Southern Africa still remaining under the colonial yoke and will facilitate the complete liberation of Africa. We believe that the African people who are awakened and tempered in struggle will surely achieve the complete liberation of the African continent before long.

Esteemed comrade president, since we took the road of revolution when we were young, we have always firmly relied on the unity and cohesion of the masses of the people in ideology and purpose on the basis of the revolutionary sense of duty. We have fought unyieldingly and emerged victorious in the teeth of manifold trials. This has been possible because the revolutionary comrades and people trusted me and I trusted the people and relied on their strength. We have also been supported and encouraged by our international friends in our protracted revolutionary struggle. This has been a great inspiration to us.

At present the international situation is very complex and strained and the danger of a world war is growing with each passing day. To prevent a war and defend peace and national independence, it is necessary to strengthen the solidarity among the peoples of the non-aligned countries, the peoples of the Third World advocating independence, and take a joint action against the imperialist policy of aggression and war. We will fight staunchly as ever in close cooperation with international friends to achieve the complete victory of socialism in our country and the reunification of the country and promote the world progressive people's common cause of independence against imperialism.

Comrade president, we hope that, back home, you will convey the determination of the Korean people to advance invariably shoulder to shoulder with the Mozambican people in the future and our peoples militant greetings to your people.

At this significant place of reunion with Comrade President Machel, a most intimate friend of mine, I propose to raise this glass to the indestructible militant friendship and solidarity between the Korean and Mozambican peoples, to the prosperity and development of the People's Republic of Mozambique, to the solidarity of the world people advocating independence, to the good health and long life of esteemed Comrade President Samora Moises Machel, to the health of all the Mozambican guests and to the health of all comrades and friends present here.

A certain historic era requires a suitable guiding ideology. Inventing this guiding ideology is a very difficult task. This task could only be performed by the outstanding leader of the working class. This has been proved by the history of the communist movement over more than scores of decades.

This great revolutionary ideology is demonstrating a greater vitality with each passing day and has become a trend of our times.

Today, a zeal of supporting and sympathizing with the revolutionary ideology of Comrade Kim Il-song and actively studying and embodying it is growing among progressive figures and revolutionary personages of the world. This is eloquent evidence of the greatness and might of this ideology.

Because of the lack of a correct guiding ideology elucidating the road of struggle, our people had to suffer under the state of colonial bondage, repeating bitter failures in the revolutionary struggle. This bitter history of national disaster ended only with the embarking of the respected and beloved leader at the head of the revolution and with his creation of the immortal chuche idea. If the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had failed to elucidate a road of struggle for our people, who were wandering about in darkness, with the resplendent ray and to correctly lead them, our nation would not have been revived. Nor would it have become a powerful and dignified independent nation.

Today the invincible might of our party and the bright future of the Korean revolution cannot be thought of apart from the might of the revolutionary ideology of Comrade Kim Il-song. Indeed, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song embarked on the road of revolution, pioneered a new history of the development of the revolutionary ideology of the working class -- which is a new era of independence -- and has produced incomparably great ideological and theoretical exploits. These exploits are immortal and accompany the advance of our people's struggle for independence.

2. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the great man who has created miracles and exploits of the century by leading the revolution and construction to the single road of victory under the banner of chuche. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: The course of the development of our revolution has been a course to embody the chuche idea. This course has been one of glorious struggle for the overall victory of the chuche idea. The leader of the working class is the supreme leader of the revolution. The cause of socialism and communism is developed and is victoriously advanced by the leadership of the leader and his practical activity. The greatness of the leader finds expression in creating the correct revolutionary ideology as well as in the activities to thoroughly embody the ideology. Embodying the revolutionary ideology of the times is a very serious and complicated struggle to smash the schemes of enemies at home and abroad and to reform the world. This struggle can be victoriously carried out only by the excellent leader of the working class.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has energetically unfolded the struggle to embody the great ideology and theory personally created by him in the course of protracted revolutionary activities for more than a half century.

The creation of the ideology and theory by the great leader and his struggle to embody them have become a completely unified course. As a result, the respected and beloved leader's ideology and theory have been put into practice and turned into a huge material strength.

Thanks to the great revolutionary practice of the respected and beloved leader to embody the chuche-oriented ideology, theory and method, the Korean revolution has been victorious and has reached the high stage of modelling society on the chuche idea.

In this course, a brilliant model in the practical activities to embody the revolutionary ideology of the working class has been created. The revolutionary practice of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is infinitely great and mighty. The respected and beloved leader has assumed all important revolutionary tasks of our times of independence on his shoulders and carried them into practice. The achievements of the respected and beloved leader, including those in the struggle for national and class liberation, the construction of socialism and communism, legal and illegal struggles, guerrilla warfare and modern warfare, the human reforms, economic and cultural construction, construction of party and state and other activities, are countless.

History has proved that leading even one form of the revolutionary struggle to victory is a very difficult task. However, the great leader has brilliantly led all forms of struggle and all stages of revolution. Indeed, the efforts and concern of the great leader in the course of this great revolution -- which had to surmount all sorts of difficulties -- are countless. The personal practice of the revolution by the respected and beloved leader has been an ever-victorious struggle. The Korean revolution has traversed an arduous road, surmounting all difficulties and trials. It has traversed the single road of victory and advance without the slightest failure or turns and twists. This is indeed the history of proud victory which can be created only by the great revolutionary man of practice.

Thanks to the leadership of the great leader of our people under the banner of the chuche idea, our revolution has been able to surmount all difficulties caused by flunkeyism and dogmatism and to vigorously pioneer the rewarding new history of independence. Our revolution has been able to enter today's great eminence, surmounting all difficulties and trials.

The victory of the Korean people in the anti-Japanese revolutionary war and the fatherland liberation war was the great victory brilliantly recorded in the history of revolutionary war. It was indeed beyond imagination to defeat the heavily-armed Japanese imperialists through guerrilla warfare without any support from the state and the regular army and to win victory in the fight against the U.S. imperialist aggressors, known to be the most powerful in the world, with the newly founded young regular army.

Such a legendary miracle, never before witnessed by history, was created by the great leader, the excellent strategist and iron-willed commander. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who personally shouldered all responsibilities in the arduous and severe war, vigorously organized and mobilized our people and the revolutionary armed forces with the chuche-oreinted military and political line, excellent strategy and tactics and extraordinary leadership. He defeated the Japanese imperialists and dealt blows at the U.S. imperialist aggressors.

This was a heroic epic unprecedented in the history of war and a great event which opened the new era in the struggle for national liberation from colonialism and the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle. The revolutionary practice of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song vigorously demonstrated its ever-victorious might in the construction of a new society.

Our country was once a backward semifeudal society. The division of the national territory and war scourge by the U.S. imperialists caused difficulties to our revolution. Our people therefore had to pioneer an untrodden road to socialism and communism under immeasurably difficult circumstances.

Thanks to the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's energetic activities and struggle day and night, all difficult revolutionary duties looming before our people were performed brilliantly.

By setting forth a unique and scientific line and policy with a firm chuche-type stand and by skillfully organizing and mobilizing the party and the people, the great leader has successfully carried out a two-stage social revolution and socialist industrialization, established a most advanced socialist system and built a strong, independent, self-reliant country capable of self-defense.

A great miracle was performed in the course of carrying out many tasks, which had remained incomplete for several thousand years, in a short span of time without the slightest error or blunder.

Today, our revolution is vigorously advancing at a higher stage of imbuing society with the chuche idea. In the few decades since the people began to build a new society after achieving sovereignty, they have victoriously achieved the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea. This demonstrates the respected and beloved leader's greatness in carrying out the revolution.

Because the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is flawlessly endowed with a trait and gift as an outstanding man of action, he has brilliantly led the Korean revolution along a straight road of victory. Revolution and construction do not always traverse a smooth road. Therefore, only the leader sho is determined to completely take responsibility for the destiny of the revolution under all circumstances can accomplish his duty as a man of action for the revolution.

Regarding the task of achieving the independence, prosperity and development of the fatherland and the freedom and happiness of the people as his cause, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has devoted everything to achieving this end. While carrying out his activities, the respected and beloved leader has made it a firm rule to overcome any difficulties and trials and to carry out any difficult tasks to the end to implement ideas, theories and policies once they are set forth and to win victory in the revolution. The great leader has always assumed such an attitude, taken the lead in overcoming all difficulties and crises which our revolution faced, set forth higher struggle goals and thoroughly achieved these goals with matchless courage.

Without the respected and beloved leader's firm revolutionary principle and resolute struggle, we cannot imagine that, while traversing a grim road, our revolution could have firmly maintained its lifeline and enacted a continuous upsurge.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's other important trait as a great man of action is reflected in the fact that he has skillfully organized and led the revolution and construction with an extraordinary ability of organization and a high-level leadership skill. Under the banner of the chuche idea, the great leader has personally grasped and carefully guided the overall work of accelerating the Korean revolution and the cause of independence against imperialism. He has energetically led all struggles. Based on the scientific evaluation of the requirements for the development of the revolution, of the situation and of the might of the revolution, he has boldly carried out and surely completed his work by wisely and skillfully organizing and mobilizing the party and the nation.

Because of the respected and beloved leader's leadership of our people, they have performed all difficult tasks in the revolution and construction and have victoriously overcome all difficulties, taking the initiative in the unfavorable situation.

The source of the respected and beloved leader's great practical ability stems from his absolute confidence in and thoroughgoing reliance on the people's inexhaustible might. Firmly believing that the people's strength is the key to solving all questions and that, if we help them become aware of themselves and rally them, there will be nothing that we cannot do, the great leader has always stayed with the people and formulated and implemented lines and policies since the period of the anti-Japanese struggle, relying on their strength and wisdom.

Because the respected and beloved leader has shared weal and woe with the masses at the place where creation and change took place and because he has struggled in unison with them, our people have rapidly advanced and continuously performed epochal miracles and feats. The might of the respected and beloved leader's practical activities in leading the revolution and construction along a single road of upsurge by absolutely trusting the people and by skillfully utilizing their creative strength and wisdom is truly boundless.

Because the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has brilliantly led our revolution and construction through great revolutionary activities, the era of creation, reform and prosperity has been ushered in this land, making the chuche idea blossom. Our country, which was once obscure on the world map, is now proudly enjoying sovereignty in the international arena and our people are proud to have become powerful and dignified. All the people have firmly armed themselves with the chuche idea; they are firmly united around the party and the leader; a self-reliant economy and a chuche-type national culture have developed; and the people's self-reliant and creative life has fully blossomed. This is the reality of chuche Korea which has emerged through the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary activities.

Today, the revolutionary people advancing toward independence praise our country as a chuche fatherland and as a model country of socialism. They are greatly encouraged by the success and experience of our revolution. The struggle of the people to achieve national independence and progress and to build socialism and communism has been strengthened unprecedentedly in the international arena. The imperialist forces are in decline day after day. No force can obstruct the people's magnificant advance under the banner of independence.

Over a long period, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has further advanced the revolution through great revolutionary activities and has attained great achievements in laying a lasting foundation for the final completion of the revolution. We cannot overly praise the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's achievements and greatness in pioneering the straight road of independence and socialist construction while solving all questions starting from nothing [pinto] and in adding a brilliant chapter to the history of the modern age.

It is the utmost glory and boundless happiness of our people to live and carry out the revolution, holding in high esteem the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a great ideological theoretician and the genius of revolutionary activities.

The greatness of a nation depends on that of their leader. This is an indisputable truth proved by the long history of the communist movement and by the practical experiences of our revolution. Our people, who were once the most miserable in modern history, have become a most powerful, proud and happy people. The epochal change which has taken place in the status and position of our people is totally the precious fruition of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great revolutionary idea and activities. After spending long years in revolution, and just as he did while crossing the steep ranges of Mt Paektu leading the anti-Japanese armed ranks, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has personally assumed the leadership of the overall work of our party, the state and the army with extraordinary energy and a firm will. He is leading the revolution and construction to a continuous upsurge.

Indeed, the holding in high esteem the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a great ideological theoretician and man of action, we see the glorious past, resplendent present and brighter future of our revolution.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great idea is now being brilliantly materialized by our party. The KWP is a great party which has brilliantly organized and guided the struggle to complete the chuche cause and to achieve the final victory of the great leader's revolutionary idea. With endless loyalty to the revolution and with a tested leadership, our party has continuously developed and enriched Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea and, under the banner of this idea, it has victoriously pioneered the future of communism.

The future path of our revolution has never been as promising as today when the people struggle and advance, following this great party which has been tested and hardened through a protracted struggle and which has invincible might.

Bearing deep in our hearts the feelings of endless glory and pride to carry out the revolution under the leadership of the great party and leader and with a flawlessly pure mind, we should hold the party and the leader in high esteem.

It is the proud tradition of the Korean communist movement to resolutely defend and safeguard the leader -- the leader of the revolution. During the dark period when the people's sufferings reached a zenith, our Korean communists and people held in esteem the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song as the guiding star of the Korean revolution and as a sun. Since then, they have held the leader in high esteem with a consistent attitude and stand. During the bloody anti-Japanese struggle, they braved enemy bullets with their breasts to safeguard the great leader. Under adverse circumstances, they protected their honor as fighters of the leaders. During the period following liberation, the grim period of war and the postwar period, always holding in high esteem the respected and beloved leader at the supreme post of the party, the state and the army, they trusted and followed the leader alone with fidelity. This was a noble trait highly displayed among the Korean communists and people.

Recalling the past days of the Korean revolution which developed and won victory under the banner of the great chuche idea, we are proud to note the fact that, during the period of grim class struggle and of difficult creation and reform, we always resolutely defended and held in high esteem the leader -- the leader of the revolution.

Our cadres, party members and workers should profoundly master the history of these glorious events, become Kim Hyok in the 1980's, resolutely defend the party and the leader and complete the revolution along the road indicated by the party and the leader.

The great Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea is the revolutionary banner which leads our people to the bright future of communism. There is no nobler duty for our people than to show endless loyalty to Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea in traversing a distant and grim road to complete the revolutionary cause.

It is the valuable lesson of the history of the Korean revolution that, when we struggle under the banner of Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea, we will win victory in all circumstances. This is the firm belief of our people. All party members and workers should more deeply cherish this belief, more firmly arm themselves with the great leader's revolutionary idea and tenaciously struggle to resolutely defend, protect and materialize this idea. At the same time, they should closely master all ideas, theories and policies which have been set forth based on the chuche idea of our party.

The achievements atteined by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on the road to protracted revolutionary struggle are endlessly precious assets for the final victory of our revolution and the happiness of posterity generation after generation.

With loyalty which does not change no matter how many years may pass, we will firmly protect, inherit, develop and glorify generation after generation these achievements -- the products of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great efforts.

The future path of our people following the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a great ideological theoretician and a man of action, will always be replete with victories. The chuche era -- a glorious era victoriously advancing under the banner of independence -- will shine as an era of prosperity forever in the great name of the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song.

MINISTER LECTURES ON NORTH'S UNIFICATION POLICY

[Text] Seoul, April 14 (YONHAP) -- North Korea plans to have all its citizens and one half of South Koreans support its formula of Korean unification, South Korea's Unification Minister Son Chae-sik said Tuesday.

In a special lecture at Konkuk University here, Son said this strategy has underlined the North Korean proposals regarding inter-Korean dialogue, including the calls for a grant peoples' rally and a conference of politicians in the North and South.

"Despite differences in wording, all North Korean proposals regarding inter-Korean conferences have been geared to creating conditions conducive to a revolution in the South and the establishment of a communist confederation on the Korean Peninsula," Son said.

Son said the death of North Korean leader Kim Il-song will "inevitably" give rise to a pluralistic government in the North and that such a government will tend to be more pragmatic, clearing the way for inter-Korean exchanges.

The unification minister said that North Korea was attempting to create an "anti-government unification front" in South Korea, and warned his student audience to refrain from any act which may facilitate such an attempt.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Chu agreed at the conference that the two countries would counter North Korea's increasing military power.

RECENT THAI INTRUSIONS OVER BORDER REPORTED

[Text] Phnom Penh, 14 Apr (SPK) -- We have learned from a military source that Thai reconnaissance planes and bombers flew over Kampuchean territory 3 to 6 km from the border on 32 occasions from 26 March to 8 April.

On 2 April Thai C-47's strafed the vicinity of Hill 129 with 20-mm cannons. On 4 April Thai F-5's dropped bombs and launched rockets at Hills 129 and 255 which are located 2 km inside Kampuchean territory. On the same day Thai artillery pounded the area southeast of Seida 6 km from the border at the direction of L-19's and C-47's.

Thai armed boats intruded into Kampuchean territorial waters 189 times from 4 to 20 nautical miles from Kaoh Kong and Kaoh Tang Islands. Two hundred and seven ground shellings from Thailand were reported against Kampuchea. Thai 82-mm mortar and recoilless rifle shells and B-40 and B-41 rockets landed in the sector of the Preah Vihar temples and south of the border junction.

In the Pursat-Koh Kong region, 120-mm cannon and 82-mm mortar shells landed west of Ta Sanh, at Smat Deng and on Hill 336.

In the Siem Reap-Battambang region, hundreds of 105-mm cannon and 82-mm mortar shells landed at Ampil, Phum Chak, Romiet, Poipet, Phnum Malai, Seida, O Da and a point west of Kop located from 1 to 10 km inside Kampuchea territory. On 1 April Thailand fired toxic chemical mortar shells at a point west of Seida 2 km inside Kampuchean territory.

KAMPUCHEA CONDEMNS U.S. CHEMICAL WARFARE CHARGES

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "Ethically Speaking, U.S. Imperialism Has No Right To Raise the Question of Chemical Weapons" -- date not given]

[Text] On 22 March 1982 the U.S. State Department declared in a 32-page report that it has sufficient proof to show that the Soviet Union and Vietnam used toxic chemical weapons in Afghanistan, Kampuchea and Laos. Last year, U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig made a statement in West Berlin which contained similar charges. At the end of November 1981, at the insistence of the U.S. administration, a group of UN experts paid a 2-week visit to Thailand where they interviewed more than 30 persons in a bid to collect information and evidence. But these experts came up with no conclusive findings to support the slanderous allegations of the United States.

Last year the International Committee of the Red Cross in Geneva also stated that toxic chemical weapons were not used in Southeast Asia.

Scholars have been perplexed by the unorthodox methods used by the U.S. Defense Department in its research. Biologist (James Lemberg), who discovered the toxin, regarded the documented evidence presented by the U.S. State Department to be completely unsubstantiated.

Commenting on the use of these toxic chemical weapons, the New York TIMES wrote that the documented evidence presented by the U.S. State Department was unclear. Past statements made by the State Department on this question have become worthless because of overblown allegations and false claims. The New York TIMES stressed that it is puzzled that the U.S. Government, although it has every source of information at its disposal, still cannot come up with irrefutable chemical evidence years after this question arose.

The 1925 Geneva convention strictly bans the use of asphyxiating gas, chemical and biological weapons. The Soviet Union ratified this convention in 1928. On the contrary, it was only 50 years later, that is in 1975, that the United States agreed to sign this convention and, almost immediately afterward, Washington started spreading rumors alleging that toxic chemical weapons were being used in Laos, Kampuchea and, later on, in Afghanistan.

History shows that it was the United States which used toxic chemical weapons before anyone else. In their war of aggression in Indochina, the U.S. forces dumped thousands of tons of toxic chemicals in the region, causing serious damage to the environment and to people all over Indochina.

Irrefutable evidence of this U.S. crime is that in Vietnam at present large tracts of forests are in ruins and a vast area of ricefields and farmland which used to be very fertile in the past has become barren. Many pregnant women have miscarried and thousands of deformed babies have been born. Many U.S. soldiers who were involved in this sordid war in Vietnam have also suffered from toxic chemical weapons. The U.S. secretary of health stated that at least 1,000 U.S. soldiers are affected by toxic chemicals.

It is a shame that despite the strong protest voiced by the U.S. public, U.S. President Reagan, with total indifference to the suffering of the victims of toxic chemicals, recently put pressure on the U.S. Congress to pass a bill on a massive toxic chemical weapons development program. Factories manufacturing toxic chemicals in the United States have been greatly expanded and U.S. troops are undergoing intensive training in the use of these chemical weapons. At the same time the Reagan administration is pressuring various governments in Western Europe to agree to the deployment of chemical weapons in the region. This means that Reagan plans to kill or poison the European peoples with chemical weapons.

The U.S. administration's acts against the human race are currently escalating with the United States' plans to produce the most lethal chemical weapons. In fact, the vociferous propaganda of the United States on the so-called use of toxic substances by the Soviet Union and Vietnam in Afghanistan and Kampuchea is none other than slanderous inventions aimed at stigmatizing the Soviet Union's peace initiatives which receive the warm support of the world's progressive peoples. However, these slanderous propaganda campaigns were exposed by international scientists at the Pugwash conference in Geneva which concluded that these U.S. accusations are bereft of any scientific evidence.

The United States is very keen to play the game of the monkey who smeared the mouth of a nearby goat with the leftovers of the stolen food he had eaten, for Washington is sending chemical weapons to the Thai soldiers and rebel troops in Afghanistan so that they can accuse, slander and blame the Soviet Union and Vietnam. Moreover, these slanderous propaganda campaigns of the United States are part of a strategy to divert public opinion from the production and stockpiling of chemical weapons in the United States, as well as to cover up their own crimes of toxic chemical weapons use against the peace-loving peoples of Indochina and other regions in the world.

As TASS reported, on 5 April the Soviet Foreign Ministry sent a message to the United States saying that the Soviet Union has never used toxic chemical weapons in any region of the world. The fabrication of a tale about the so-called use of toxic chemical weapons by the Soviet Union and the invention of the unbelievable story which goes so far as to allege that Vietnam can produce toxic chemicals by itself are a total farce which will in no way tarnish the prestige of the two countries.

The policy of sowing the wind, which is practised by the Reagan administration with regard to the question of toxic chemical weapons, has been vigorously condemned by the world's movement for peace.

VICTORY REPORTED FOR 7TH BATTALION IN BATTAMBANG

[Excerpt] Here are some examples of the enemy's failures against our revolution as illustrated by last week's latest report:

In Battambang Province, at the border 20 km southwest of Ta Sanh, after learning that the enemy tried to cross the Thai border and penetrate our territory in an attempt to perpetrate crimes, cadres and combatants of our 7th Battalion launched a lightning operation against the enemy. Determined to attack and wipe out the enemy at its roots, our forces raided an enemy hideout, killing on the spot 30 enemy troops and seizing a large quantity of food, arms ammunition and medicine that they had stored in this lair. The survivors panicked and fled deeper into the jungle, shamefully retreating toward the Thai border. Many of them could not escape encirclement by our revolutionary army. According to initial reports, from 18 to 21 March in the area southwest of Ta Sanh our forces killed more than 50 enemy soldiers and seized a large quantity of ammunition, 290 assorted weapons, 6 tons of tice, more than 500 kg of medicines and other war materiel. [passage indistinct]

On 20 March our unit assigned to defend the border at Hill 336 in Koh Kong Province severely punished the Pol Pot bandits. Many groups of enemy troops were destroyed. Along with the direct attacks against the enemy, we also succeeded in persuading the enemy of surrender.

On 22 March the population and militiamen of (Ya Lav) commune of the northeastern region called on nine enemy remnants to surrender. On 21 March the armed forces of Kompong Thom Province surrounded and destroyed a group of three enemy remnants, seizing two weapons, including a 60-mm mortar.

In summary, from 17 to 22 March according to a still incomplete tally, our people's army on all battlefields put out of action nearly 200 enemy troops and seized nearly 330 assorted weapons, 7 tons of ammunition, 6 tons of rice, more than 500 kg of medicine and many other war materiel.

The radio concludes its report on agricultural production in this district noting that 250 tons of palm sugar have been produced.

DK'S THIOUNN MUMM ATTENDS MANILA SCIENCE MEETING

BK080717 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 7 Apr 82

[Text] A delegation of our Democratic Kampuchea led by Dr Thiounn Mumm, chairman of the State Scientific and Technical Commission, attended the Second Conference of Ministers of Science and Economic Planning in Asia and the Pacific which was held in Manila, capital of the Republic of the Philippines, from 22 to 30 March 1982.

The conference was solemnly opened on 22 March 1982 by His Excellency Cesar Virata, prime minister of the Republic of the Philippines. On the occasion he stressed in his speech that scientific technology must not be applied to build weapons for world destruction.

During the conference, the head of the Democratic Kampuchean delegation spoke about the most barbarous crimes committed by the Vietnamese aggressors against the Kampuchean people, destroying all factories, workshops, laboratories and hydrological networks built by the Kampuchean people, especially during the 3 year period between 1975 and 1978. This destruction has made Kampuchea the poorest country in the world. If there was no Vietnamese aggression, Kampuchea could export agricultural products such as rice and rubber in 1982, and our factories would be able to build thousands of 12 hp tractors. If there was no Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea, the international standard Phnom Penh-Kompong Som railway along Route 4 would be open for use in 1982.

The head of our delegation firmly denounced the Soviet superpower which has used the mighty power of science and technology to produce chemical and biological weapons and has permitted their use by the Vietnamese to massacre peoples of weak countries. Thousands of Kampuchean people have been killed by these toxic chemicals. The head of the Democratic Kampuchean delegation expressed his thanks to countries, scientists, doctors and peace- and justice-loving personalities for their efforts to search for evidence of the use of chemical weapons and to make such evidence known all over the world.

After this, His Excellency (Emile Vega), chairman of the National Office for Scientific Development of the Republic of the Philippines and chairman of the conference, expressed his interest in the Kampuchean issue, particularly the efforts made by Democratic Kampuchean authorities to train and assist scientists and technicians in the present difficult circumstances.

The conference was closed on 30 March 1982 by Dr (Pacific Marcos), personal representative of His Excellency Ferdinand Marcos, president of the Republic of the Philippines, and Mrs Marcos.

SITTHI RECEIVES SON SANN COALITION PROPOSAL

BK141010 Hong Kong AFP in English 0956 GMT 14 Apr 82

[Text] Bangkok, 14 Apr (AFP) -- Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila today said he had received a memorandum from ex-Cambodian Premier Son Sann on efforts to set up an anti-Vietnamese coalition in Cambodia. The Thai minister did not elaborate and it was not clear whether he had met the leader of the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF).

Mr. Son Sann, seeking to forge an alliance with the ousted Khmer Rouge leadership and another non-communist group led by former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk, recently returned to western Cambodia after a European tour.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi said Thailand would like the three groups to reassess their individual postures in order to achieve what was in their national interests.

The Thai minister earlier proposed a new summit of the Cambodian groups, the second since they agreed in Singapore last September to form a coalition to end Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia.

Thai Foreign Ministry Spokesman Chet Sutcharitkun today said the top-level meeting was "most likely" to take place before mid-June, probably in Malaysia, which had offered to play host.

The non-communist Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) -- grouping Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore and the Philippines -- strongly back the coalition efforts. They see success in setting up the tri-partite alliance as crucial to a political solution to Cambodia.

EXPORT OF STRATEGIC MATERIALS PROHIBITED

[Text] The government is prohibiting the export of strategic materials "which may be used against us in the future," the secretary-general of the National Security Council [NSC] Prasong Sunsiri said yesterday.

Answering questions about this ban, he said that it was not directed against any specific country. He added that it was not a "total ban but applications for permission to export will have to be sent to the Ministry of Commerce for consideration." The list of the strategic goods is held at the ministry and has been issued under laws of the ministry. Regular trade in goods not included on the list can go on as usual, he said.

As far as Vietnam is concerned, Squadron Leader Prasong said that control is placed on quantities of goods, not only on types of goods, exported there. If more goods than were necessary for the people were exported, they could be used for military purposes, he explained. "This is not at all beneficial to the people and may become dangerous for Thailand."

As for Kampuchea, he said that the whole border is closed to trade because Thailand does not have diplomatic relations with the Phnom Penh regime of Heng Samrin. Commerce is not permitted, he added. However, there is smuggling of goods into Kampuchea and a thriving "black market." Some of the goods, Prasong said, are strategic materials.

As a result, a decree had to be issued to control border trade, authorising the military authorities to suppress it effectively.

Prasong reported that trade with Laos could continue through the checkpoints that have been opened, except in the case of goods on the strategic list, when permission of local officials is needed. If the amount is within the authority of the local officials, they will consider granting a permit.

The NSC also reported that Vietnam is undergoing great economic and financial difficulties because "the Vietnamese authorities spend lots of money on the military without regard for the welfare of the people."

This is one of the main reasons for the migration of people from Vietnam, he said.

Vietnam "has to pay U.S.$40 million in interest on loans from Japan alone and is a debtor of European countries up to the tune of $3,000 to $4,000 million," Prasong said. He added that Hanoi is "unable to make the payments and, as a result, even the World Bank is unable to provide it with more loans."

VOFA LAUDS BURMESE FOREIGN MINISTER'S VISIT

[Unattributed commentary: "The Visit of the Burmese Foreign Minister Helps Promote Friendly Ties Between Thailand and Burma"]

[Text] The current visit to Thailand of the Burmese foreign minister, His Excellency U Chit Hlaing, from 10 through 14 April is made against the backdrop of cordial friendship and close cooperation existing between Thailand and the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma. He will also visit two other ASEAN countries, Singapore and Indonesia.

New development of good neighborly relations between Thailand and Burma was given an impetus early this year by the visit to Burma of the Thai foreign minister in January, followed by the visit to Rangoon of Deputy Prime Minister Gen Prachuap Suntharangkun in March. The exchange of visits by high-level officials of both countries were instrumental in fostering Thai-Burmese relations, with particular emphasis on mutual cooperation along the Thai-Burmese border including the prevention and suppression of narcotic drugs trafficking.

The present visit by the Burmese foreign minister serves to renew his personal acquaintance with the Thai side and can be viewed as part of the continuing efforts by both countries to intensify closer cooperation through frank and friendly discussions on matters of mutual concern. Upon his arrival at Bangkok airport last Saturday, the Burmese foreign minister and his party were received by the Thai foreign minister who spent the weekend with his colleague in an informal setting in Phatthaya.

The highlights of the visit of the Burmese foreign minister were contained in today's program which included consultations with the Thai foreign minister at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Later the two foreign ministers exchanged instrument of ratification of the agreement between Thailand and Burma on the delimitation of the maritime boundary between the two countries in the Andaman Sea. This afternoon's itinerary included a private luncheon with Deputy Prime Minister Gen Prachuap Suntharangkun, a call on Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon and an audience with his majesty the king. Tonight the Burmese foreign minister will attend an official dinner hosted in his honor by Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

It is a source of gratification that both Thailand and Burma are actively engaged in constructive cooperation in the areas where both countries and people can derive mutual benefits. The discussions with high-ranking Thai officials on bilateral issues including the exchange of the instrument of ratification today constitute another forward step in the development of good relations between two neighboring countries and contribute to the enhancement of peace and cooperation in the Southeast Asian region.

The visit of the Burmese foreign minister coincides with our Rattanakosin bicentennial celebrations and the Songkran Festival. This morning the Burmese foreign minister viewed the royal barge procession carrying the Phra Hutthasihing, one of Thailand's most revered Buddha images. The fact that Burma and Thailand have majority populations who are devoutly Buddhists is an important tie that binds the two countries. It is therefore hoped that the colours and splendour of the Thai festivities will also contribute to make the visit of the Burmese foreign minister a pleasant and fruitful one.

INDONESIA RELEASES 43 FISHERMAN ARRESTED IN 1981

BK131133 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 9 Apr 82

[Text] The Thai fishing boats Sap Montri and Winit Nawa and their crew of 43 were seized on 12 July 1981 on charges of violating Indonesian territorial waters, lacking proper documents and carrying 25 tons of fish. The boats were taken to Tanjunpinang after the seizure. The Tanjungpinang court sentenced the crewmen to 6-7 months imprisonment. The crewmen have served their sentences and have since been released, and the Indonesian authorities have asked that the crewmen be returned to Thailand.

The owners of the seized boats have each posted 20,000 baht at the Foreign Ministry for expenses in bringing back the crewmen. In this regard, on 7 April the Foreign Ministry instructed the Thai Embassy in Jakarta to act to bring back the released fishermen.

SPOKESMAN DENIES U.S. TOXIC CHEMICAL CHARGES

BK131516 Hanoi VNA in English 1445 GMT 13 Apr 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 13 -- A spokesman for the Foreign Ministry here today issued a statement rejecting recent U.S. allegations about the use of chemical poisons by Vietnam in Laos and Kampuchea. The statement reads:

"In his report to the U.S. Congress in late March, U.S. Secretary of State A. Haig again charged Vietnam with using Soviet-made chemical poisons in Laos and Kampuchea.

"It is still remembered that in September 1981 the U.S. secretary of state himself and all the mouthpieces of the U.S. Government launched a campaign concerning the so-called use of chemical poisons in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia. The campaign was designed to oppose the Soviet Union, Vietnam, Laos and the People's Republic of Kampuchea. But facts have shown that this was merely a fabrication. Progressive public opinion, many scientists, including American scientists, have pointed out that evidence produced by the U.S. Government was groundless. On March 15 the Pugwash conference in Geneva, attended by scientists from 13 countries, affirmed that there was no concrete proof of the use of chemical poisons as alleged by the U.S. government. Even health experts in a so-called UN "investigation team" returning from Southeast Asia and South Asia in November 1981 and February 1982 also concluded that there was no fact to back the U.S. claim about the use of chemical poisons in Kampuchea and Afghanistan. A number of persons in this team even denounced the U.S. for pressuring them into producing false evidence to suit the U.S. allegations.

"The U.S. Government's intention in this smear campaign about the Soviet Union and Vietnam is to divert public attention from its scheme of stepping up the arms race and the mass production of chemical and bacteriological weapons, delay negotiations for a treaty banning production and stockpiling of chemical weapons, and obstruct disarmament talks.

"By concocting the story about the use of Soviet-made taxic chemicals in Afghanistan, Laos and Kampuchea, the U.S. Government also seeks to whitewash its crimes against the three Indochinese peoples. All people of conscience can still remember that the U.S. imperialists conducted a long-term, large-scale chemical war against the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea for more than ten years. They sprayed hundreds of thousands of tonnes of toxic chemicals, killing hundreds of thousands of people, destroying hundreds of thousands of hectares of crop land, with disastrous consequences to the environment, to many generations of Vietnamese, and to tens of thousands of Americans who fought in Indochina. Mankind will keep record of the U.S. aggressors' crimes.

"By conducting the biggest chemical war in mankind's history and by trying to repeat this war with modern means and on a large scale, the United States has seriously violated the 1925 Geneva Convention. The U.S. Government, therefore, is not qualified to speak about justice at all.

"The Foreign Ministry of the socialist republic of Vietnam once again completely rejects the U.S. slander and demands the the U.S. Government end its collusion with the reactionary Chinese ruling circle in vilifying Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries."

VNA REJECTS XINHUA 'SLANDERS' ON THAI BORDER

[Text] XINHUA on 11 April carried a report slanderously charging Vietnamese troops with firing mortar rounds into a Thai border post and using "yellow rain" and other toxic chemicals in Kampuchea.

VNA is authorized to totally reject these fabricated and slanderous reports. This is only a trick aimed at pitting ASEAN -- especially Thailand -- against the Indochinese countries, creating tension in Southeast Asia and serving the dark designs of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists.

HANOI STRESSES DESIRE FOR PEACE WITH PRC

[Unattributed commentary: "We Only Want Peace and Stability"]

[Text] The earnest aspiration of the Vietnamese, Chinese and other peoples in Southeast Asia and all over the world is to put an end to armed conflicts and hostilities along the Sino-Vietnamese border and solve the problems concerning the relations between China and Vietnam through negotiations. This would contribute to peace and stability in the region.

UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar recently sent a message to Chairman of the Council of Minsters Pham Van Dong calling on Vietnam and China to maintain the state of peace along the common border after the period of Tet, the traditional Lunar New Year Festival. His proposal is consistent with our desire. We have also proposed that the two sides end all armed activities along the common border once and for all. In a note sent to the Chinese Foreign Ministry, we called for an end to armed activities along the Sino-Vietnamese border and early resumption of the third round of the Vietnam-China talks within the first 6 months of this year.

The Chinese authorities, however, have flatly rejected our proposals. Over the past 3 months they have sent their troops to conduct more than 70 armed provocations and intrusions into Vietnamese territory. China's dark design is to weaken Vietnam in all fields -- economic, political, diplomatic, psychological and ideological -- then to annex Vietnam and other Indochinese countries in the first move of extension to Southeast Asia. But this desire is a long way from becoming reality.

People of good sense clearly know that China is nurturing an expansionist and hegemonist plan. China is not only opposing the Indochinese peoples but also sabotaging peace and stability in Southeast Asia. We always stand for peace and friendship with the peoples of China and other neighboring countries. We have asked China to sign a bilateral treaty of peaceful coexistence. We have also proposed to resume the third round of the Vietnam-China talks so as to stop armed conflicts in the border area between the two countries.

With this consistent stand, Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee, declared at the fifth national congress of the party in Hanoi: The Vietnamese people resolutely struggle to defeat all aggressive and annexationist moves of the Chinese authorities against Vietnam. But we preserve our friendly sentiments toward the Chinese people. Maintaining the policy of friendship and good neighborhood with the Chinese people, we stand for the restoration of normal relations between the two countries on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence, respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and settlement of disputes through negotiations.

The Chinese authorities have many times called for peace and negotiations. If that is really their intention, they had better prove their words by concrete deeds.

PRC SEEN 'TO INCITE' ASEAN AGAINST VIETNAM

BK131218 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 12 Apr 82

[Text] The Vietnamese army paper QUAN DOI NHAN DAN on Monday commented on China's new campaign to incite the ASEAN countries to oppose Vietnam. The paper said: High-ranking Chinese officials, together with their psychological machine, are calling on ASEAN countries not to fall into a trap of regional dialogue, not to be (?deluded) on Vietnam's peace proposal. They term some ASEAN politicians as foolish and risky.

China's wrath, first of all, reflects its bitter attitude toward the Indochinese countries' proposal, which is considered by public opinion in Southeast Asia and the world over as a correct and practical proposal to build Southeast Asia into a zone of peace and stability. Over the past 3 years China has orchestrated what it called the Kampuchea issue to rally anti-Vietnamese forces and cover up its expansionist and hegemonist designs in Southeast Asia. China's current campaign is also for this purpose.

People in ASEAN know that the only problem facing the Indochinese countries is to oppose Chinese expansionism and hegemonism. They consider China as the biggest threat to their national interests. They also understand that presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea is at the request of the Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea to help wipe out the genocidal Pol Pot clique and remove China's threat.

Another reason for China's wrath is that the loose alliance between Khmer reactionary groups has not yet been set up and that the Pol Pot clique is in danger of being let down by its former supporters, including ASEAN countries.

The paper continued: Over the past 3 years China has closely colluded with U.S. imperialism and ultrarightist forces in the ASEAN countries to oppose the Indochinese countries. But the developments in the region are not to their liking. The revolution in the three Indochinese countries has still developed steadily. The friendship and relationship between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea have become an invincible strength to ensure each country's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity -- an important factor of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

The three Indochinese countries' consistent foreign policy of peace and friendship with other countries, moreover, enjoys great support from all parts of the world. The more China incites the ASEAN countries to oppose Vietnam, the more it exposes its true color.

WEINBERGER VISIT SAID TO REVEAL NE ASIAN 'PLOT'

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 14 -- Washington, Beijing, Tokyo and Seoul are joining hands to oppose the Soviet Union and undermine peace and security in Northeast Asia, says NHAN DAN today. Commenting on Washington's plot to increase "cooperation" with Japan, China and South Korea as revealed by U.S. Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger at a recent press conference, the paper notes that Reagan has sent many policy-makers to Northeast Asia. Weinberger, during his first official visit to that region, urged Japan to increase its military budget and talked about a Pentagon plan to modernize the U.S. forces in South Korea, it adds.

At Clark Airbase and Subic Naval Base the U.S. defence secretary underlined the importance of U.S. military bases in Japan, South Korea and the Philippines to the U.S. plan in the whole of Asia, NHAN DAN further recalls. What is also clear from Weinberger's trip is that the United States is frantically consolidating its strategic defences from the Pacific to the Indian Ocean, the paper remarks.

It continues: "Recent U.S. activites have increased tension in Asia and the Pacific to the detriment of peace and security in the region, but the dangerous plots hatched by the United States have been strongly condemned by peace-loving people, who want to see peace and security in Asia and the Pacific and who are determined to check all criminal adventures of U.S. imperialism and international reaction", NHAN DAN concludes.

MATERIALS ON FIFTH VCP NATIONAL CONGRESS

BK121212 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 6 Apr 82

[Conclusion of part II of report on party-building work by Le Duc Tho, member of VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, at the 27 March session of the Fifth VCP Congress held at the Ba Dinh Conference Hall in Hanoi — read by announcer]

[Text] 5. Enhance the militancy and vanguard role of party members, build a pure and strong contingent of party members.

Our party currently has 1,727,784 members. These members include outstanding militants who have been admitted through many revolutionary generations over the past half century and more. We highly appreciate the party's ranks with their fine revolutionary character, and the sacrifices, efforts and experience of numerous party members, regardless of when they joined the revolution.

In the recent change undergone by the revolution, many party members have steadfastly maintained their revolutionary quality and have quickly improved their capacity for work, thus proving themselves worthy of being vanguard militants and winning the trust and admiration of the masses.

The steadfastness of numerous party members in view of the recent historic turning point and great difficulties attests to the loyalty and experience of the party's ranks. However, in the present ranks of the party, aside from a number of party members who have declined and degenerated but have not yet been expelled, there still is a segment of party members who, in their ideal and action, do not fulfill, even to a minimum extent, their role as communists. Among this number, not a few have really lost the will to fight. In our judgment, this segment is no longer worthy of the title of party member and limits appreciably the fighting capacity of many party organizations.

All party members, regardless of their positions, must be communist militants imbued with an ideal and must act according to the party's lines. In the process of carrying out the party's political tasks through the various mass movements and through the issuance of party cards, we have further improved the quality of party members and have expelled unqualified persons from the party. In many places, however, this task has not been firmly carried out due to an incorrect understanding of party members' standards, sympathy and indulgence, and laxity in guidance by party chapter committees and by upper-level party committees and responsible organs.

Provincial and municipal party committee echelons should control the issuance of party cards and satisfactorily guide the reviewing of this task in each party chapter and each basic party organization. Wherever party cards have been issued in an unsatisfactory manner, the matter must be brought before the party chapters concerned for reconsideration. The masses' opinion on this matter should be sought, and party cards must be recalled from those persons to whom they were issued incorrectly.

The reviewing of party card issuance must be a broad political activity in the entire party carried out from party chapters upward on the basis of a through understanding of the fifth party congress resolution on work related to party members. In this political activity, we shall satisfactorily strengthen party committees; promote internal democracy to control the qualifications of party members; commend the progress made by party members since they received their party cards; and continue to improve the quality of party members and expel unqualified persons from the party.

We should resolutely expel from the party all bad, corrupt, opportunist and degenerate elements whose revolutionary will is paralyzed and who no longer have the masses' confidence.

We should also expel those whose fighting will has declined and weakened, who care only for the interests of their families and their own interests while neglecting the tasks entrusted to them or performing these tasks only perfunctorily, mainly for the purpose of preserving their party member title, and who are no longer capable of leading the masses effectively.

Such persons should not be kept in the party for any reason, even though they may have been credited with achievements in the past, and even though they may have made no mistakes as citizens.

We have for a long time persistently educated these party members. Preserving the party's sentiments for these comrades is a necessity. However, the highest sentiment must still be aimed at serving the interests of the party and the revolution. If we continue to allow such party members to stay in the party, this will only reduce the fighting strength of the party and lower the prestige of party organizations.

The removal of unqualified party members from the party must be strictly carried out and closely guided. Even if many members are to be removed, we must be determined to go ahead without hesitation. By so doing, it is certain that our party will become stronger, its leadership will become better and the masses' confidence in the party will grow much higher.

As for those party members who have poor knowledge and who are physically weak, we must seek ways to patiently help them make progress, assign appropriate jobs to them, and designate competent comrades to help them.

With regard to those party members who cannot make progress to improve their extremely poor awareness despite the education efforts of party organizations, they must be removed from the party.

We must not mistake demoralized and unqualified party members for those aging, physically weak and disabled comrades who are no longer capable of work and deserve rest and convalescence. For the latter, they need only to maintain their revolutionary qualities.

Party development must be carried out permanently and promptly. We must provide active guidance for granting party membership to those who have distinguished themselves in the mass movement, especially those workers who have been enlightened by the party's ideals, been trained and tested, have good political and educational backgrounds and extensive scientific, technical and managerial knowledge.

Since Directive No 72 of the party Central Committee Secretariat was issued, party development activities have improved with respect to ensuring party members' qualities. With this directive, the party has further overcome shortcomings in class concepts and in methods and procedures. But, in general, party development activities are still lagging. In some localities the party has been virtually sealed off, as evidenced by the admission of only a few new members. Many basic party organizations in the southern provinces and in high mountainous areas, though having very few members, have failed to admit new members. Among the members admitted to the party after the fourth party congress, 59 percent have been recruited from the armed forces.

Emphasis must be placed on giving greater attention to building the party ranks within the working class. Many provinces, cities and industrial complexes have made the mistake of neglecting the training of outstanding workers for admission to the party, have not made efforts in inspection, encouragement and in drawing experiences needed for guiding this task, and have failed to correct erroneous thoughts toward workers, especially among those who served under the former regime. In the period ahead, in cities and industrial complexes, the admission of new party members must be focused mainly on the working class.

As many cultural and artistic units and scientific research agencies have paid less attention to seeking party membership for competent writers, artists, literary and artistic researchers, scientists and cadres who have made great contributions to the party and have attached themselves to the latter, these units and agencies must correct these shortcomings, and must direct their attention toward the above targets in recommending party membership.

It is necessary to eliminate the practice by certain localities of granting party membership only to yes men and obedient people. Indeed, they are prejudiced against and have, out of fear, refused to train for admission to the party outspoken people who have the nerve to criticize their units and their supervisors for their shortcomings.

District and precinct party committees and basic party committees must find out outspoken people who have, out of their concern for the common cause, dared to denounce shortcomings and defend the truth; and must seek ways to train and educate them for admission to the party once they are qualified for this.

To enhance the quality of the contingent of party members it is required that we simultaneously enforce each of the three measures -- removing unqualified members from the party, recruiting new party members and educating and training party members through work assignments, study sessions, criticism, self-criticism and party discussions. In particular, emphasis must be laid on the need to improve the quality of party chapter activities and regularly maintain the system of party chapter activities. The party chapter must truly be the place where issues concerning party lines, policies and viewpoints are fully discussed; where party resolutions are ascertained and measures adopted for their scrupulous implementation; where a struggle is made in the field of viewpoints and principles for the defense of the party's lines and organization; and where revolutionary will and leadership capability are forged for party members. We must not mistake the activities of party chapters for those of the trade unions, administrative, specialized or service organs, or production units.

It is necessary to make criticisms and self-criticisms frankly and in a spirit of comradeship within the party chapter over issues concerning the party's lines, policies, principles and organization, and the revolutionary quality of party cadres and members. Specific shortcomings that can be rectified through daily mutual assistance should not be allowed to accumulate for criticism at party chapter conferences.

To enhance the quality of party members a crucial problem is to improve the qualifications of key cadres in grassroots units. Party committee members, first of all secretaries of party committees and party chapters, must really possess adequate qualifications and capabilities. They must be trained, guided and checked regularly by higher-level party organizations; and must be subjected to timely supervision and criticism by the party committee as a whole, party members and the masses.

The party Central Committee Secretariat will directly guide the annual program for training secretaries of grassroots party committees and a number of party committee members in general issues that are essential to the leadership of the party; and will charge the provincial and municipal party committees with the task of providing further guidance on points that are of interest ot the localities.

The party Central Committee's Propaganda and Training Department will coordinate with other departments to prepare the curriculum for this training program.

6. Train, correctly deploy and refresh the contingent of key cadres from top to bottom in accordance with the cadre plan.

As the cause of socialist revolution and national defense becomes more complex and the leading role of the party keeps expanding with each passing day, the decisive impact of the work related to cadres, especially the fostering, training and deployment of the contingent of key cadres, is felt more strongly.

Practical experience clearly shows that the precision of set lines and the accuracy and success in implementing set lines and policies depend finally on the quality of cadre work.

Our party has been successful in training and deploying the contingent of key cadres who are absolutely loyal to the revolution to meet the requirements of the national and democratic revolution. However, upon entering the new stage, belatedness in the fostering and deployment of cadres to meet the requirements for leadership and economic and social management is now a major shortcoming. With a change in direction of the revolution and the renewal of the system of economic management on the basis of profit-and-loss accounting and socialist business methods, there arises an even more actue need to urgently foster and deploy cadres in accordance with the new requirements. We must carry out this task intensively, but it is necessary to follow a sequence suitable to the scientific character of the process in advancing the socialist revolutionary cause with planning.

A. First, we must constantly pay attention to formulating and carrying out programs and plans for training and fostering cadres. To have enough qualified cadres for positively meeting the requirements of our tasks, the fundamental problem is to develop a cadre plan which will serve as a basis for preparing programs and plans for training and fostering cadres in accordance with both short and long-term requirements -- not only for the next 5 or 10 years but also for the more distant future. This is the central link of cadre work as a whole.

The main source of candidates for training to become leading cadres of the party and state consists of cadres who have had practical experience in work, production and combat at the grassroots level. It is necessary to select persons with promising prospects from within the movement and from the working apparatus of each sector for fostering and training.

From a more far-sighted viewpoint, we must create an extensive reserve right at the moment when students are selected for admission to party schools and colleges to be trained into leading, managerial, economic and technical cadres at the grassroots level. In the view of the party, to plan the selection of students is basically to plan their deployment. It is necessary to change the methods for selecting students for admission to the training schools mentioned above. When cadres are to be trained for certain echelons, localities and sectors, attention must be paid to select for training cadres, workers and cooperative members who have been tested in the mass movement and who have fulfilled the military obligation -- if they are young men -- from those particular sectors and localities.

Attention must be given to overcoming imbalances in the training of scientific-technological cadres and to putting an end to the situation in which cadres are trained and fostered unnecessarily and without calculating the results. It is important to train cadres out of workers, women, ethnic minority people and local cadres for the various localities and establishments, especially in the south and the mountainous regions. Specific and appropriate policies, systems and measures must be devised to promptly train this contingent of cadres.

Along with training new cadres, we must urgently formulate plans to foster a number of incumbent key leading cadres who have not yet had the opportunity to study in accordance with a curriculum suitable to each area and each region; and must prepare plans to supplement leading cadres with knowledge of new issues concerning theories, lines, policies and economic management, and of new developments of science and technology.

Attention must be attached to overcoming the tendency to neglect the training of students and cadres at party schools in the work conduct, methods for leadership and rules on party activities, and in the organizational structure, the work system and the work procedures of leading cadres. It is necessary to resolutely send leading cadres and their deputies to attend refresher training courses first in accordance with the plan; and to put an end to a situation in which cadres of lesser importance are sent in their stead because their superiors are busy.

B. Urgently deploy and reassign cadres.

It is necessary to make definite decisions to effect changes in organization and personnel in cases where the failure to carry out tasks has been clearly established as being connected, first of all, to the cadres in charge of the various echelons and sectors and of important organs and units. In the views of the masses, leading cadres at all echelons and in all sectors are representatives of the party whose task is to ensure the implementation of party lines, and persons who wield the power of the state of dictatorship of the proletariat. Changes in the system of economic management have necessitated the introduction of new, very stringent requirements for leadership by the party and management by the state. Therefore, the criteria for qualifications and capabilities of leading cadres have been raised to a very high degree with regard to quality. In view of this, the need for a change in the quality of the contingent of key cadres in the various echelons and sectors is objectively inevitable.

For a long time now, cadres have often failed to believe in the effectiveness of resolutions because in implementing them we have usually shown a lack of determination and decisiveness -- especially in changing and reassigning leading and key managerial cadres of the various echelons and sectors and of grassroots units who are obviously not qualified for their current positions. For a long period in the past, when assigning key cadres we often made the mistake of transferring cadres from one post to another at the same level -- even in cases where the cadres concerned had committed shortcomings -- or of transferring cadres from one sector to another, without paying much attention to promoting cadres from the lower echelons of those sectors. This practice resulted in a situation in which many cadres did not have the actual qualifications which their work required. In many cases, frequent transfers were ordered and the cadres concerned did not have sufficient time to develop their efficiency. This deployment has led to the existence of unspecialized and unqualified cadres who cannot fulfill their leadership and management duties.

The assignment of cadres is still being influenced by feudal attitudes toward ranks and positions in the party and the state apparatus, by subjective concepts arising from the failure to understand people and tasks, and by bureaucratism and conservatism in the management of cadres. We must resolutely implement Resolution No 10-NQ/TU of the party Central Committee and Resolution No 32-NC/TU of the Political Bureau on organization work; and must firmly grasp the attitude that the organization must be set up and cadres assigned strictly on the basis of the tasks in question and of the economic-technological requirements.

We must clearly define the criteria for cadres for each position. Once the criteria for cadres have been clearly established, we will give the necessary time to and create conditions for the cadres who are capable of meeting these criteria to surge forward and fulfill satisfactorily the tasks entrusted to them. As for those comrades who are obviously incapable of meeting the requirements of their tasks, we should resolutely and promptly demote them or reassign them to a more suitable field of work. If a cadre has reached retirement age, he should be allowed to retire; the cadre policy should not be cited as an excuse for letting him hold on to his position or seeking to reassign him to another equivalent position.

We should regard promotion and demotion as a normal action in assigning cadres. The interests of our work must be placed above everything else. Indulgence and sympathy are no reasons for us to be hesitant in assigning cadres since this will adversely affect our work. Good and capable cadres who are judged to be really capable of assuming new duties should be given special promotions.

In the criteria for key leading cadres of the party and state at all echelons and in all sectors and units, we should pay due attention to the political and professional criteria. The results of work, however, must be used as the ultimate measure of these criteria.

Absolute loyalty to the revolution and unanimity with the party's line are extremely essential requirements for all party and state cadres.

For leading cadres, aside from these requirements, the political criteria must also be reflected in their political level and exemplary socialist ethics. Concerning these ethics, emphasis must be placed on honesty, straightforwardness in struggling against negativism, abstention from placing one's personal interests and those of one's family and friends above those of the collective and the entire society, and refraining from puttingthe interests of one's own department and locality ahead of those of the state and the entire society.

As a cadre of the party or the state, one must have specialized knowledge as well as technical and professional management skills suitable for the nature of one's work and for one's position. In the new conditions, it is necessary to take into consideration the diplomas and past schooling of cadres. This, however, should not be done mechanically and emphasis should not be placed on diplomas only. On the contrary, the experience and real capabilities of cadres, and even their self-cultivated knowledge must also be considered.

Concerning cadres' capacity for leadership, we must pay attention to their ability to manage their apparatus and to rally the cadres and laborers under their charge, and their readiness to make decisions and to assume responsibility in carrying out their duties.

Measures should be adopted to use old and new cadres together so as to lower the still high average age of the contingent of key cadres and to ensure continuity in building the contingent of key leading cadres at each level and in each sector. It is necessary to rejuvenate the contingent of key leading cadres and boldly promote talented persons and promising cadres from the lower echelons, especially those who have matured in the basic units. We must overcome the conservatist and anachronistic tendency of assigning cadres without taking the nature of work into consideration. The state of mistrusting cadres and investing key cadres with several functions solely on account of their personal prestige must be resolutely abolished; otherwise, such a practice will lead to the key cadres working perfunctorily and many tasks not having any specific person exclusively in charge of them.

Deputy ministers should not serve concurrently as directors of production and business units; party committee secretaries must also not work as directors.

We must replace boldly and without delay those leading cadres of various organs and units who are currently incapable of taking in the party's line and policies and those who really can no longer direct work realistically, actively and effectively.

C. No less important is the need to change the methods of selecting and managing cadres. This work must be changed according to the following principles: ensuring the collective leadership and decision of party organizations in promoting key cadres; implementing scrupulously the principle of democratic centralism in promoting, selecting and taking disciplinary action against cadres; combining personnel management with work management and control; maintaining an objective and serious attitude in evaluating and making contact with cadres; promptly help cadres bring into play their strengths and correct their weaknesses; and opposing bureaucratism and formalism in the management of cadres.

Cadres must be assigned and promoted according to the system in which the self-criticism made by the cadres themselves are taken into consideration together with the observations of the organs which manage them. Knowledgeable cadres, party members and the masses, especially the subordinates of the cadres being considered for assignment or promotion, and the collectives vested with the authority to make decisions, must be consulted. Attention must be paid to collecting suggestions in a democratic manner for reference when promoting or demoting cadres. The contents of such suggestions, however, must be examined carefully and not mechanically or perfunctorily, especially in those units which have to cope with the problem of factionalism.

The quality of the contingent of cadres in charge of organizational work must be improved. The various departments, especially the organization departments at various echelons, and the organization offcies and bureaus of the various departments, ministries, services and production and business organizations, must be strengthened. These departments must be entrusted with the task of assisting the party committee echelons in managing key cadres in each field of activities. In carrying out this task, the departments must have the cooperation of the organization departments at the central and lower echelons.

The head of each section must exercise direct management of subordinate cadres. Leading cadres must directly help cadres under their supervision and discover and improve talented cadres.

Party chapters and executive committees of trade unions and the youth and women's unions must discover talented individuals in localities, units, sectors and their own organizations and recommend them to the central echelon and corresponding party committee echelons so they will be selected and improved. This must be done systematically.

D. To meet the requirements for the renovation of the task of improving, assigning and employing cadres, we must renovate in a systematic manner policies and regulations on the remuneration of cadres so as to be consistent with the new managerial system and the new position of various organizations. This is designed to encourage cadres to develop their talents.

The party must pay due attention to caring for the moral and material life of senior cadres, cadres who have rendered meritorious service and retired cadres through the application of policies and procedures that reflect the respect, affection and care of the party and people for these comrades. There must be organizations in charge of implementing and controlling the implementation of these policies and procedures. There must be practical policies and procedures on this matter in order to develop the lasting effect of specialists who are qualified in all respects. Feudalist views must be eliminated in the study and implementation of these policies and procedures.

Taking care of and developing the force of grassroots cadres is the party's major policy. Policies and regulations on remunerating grassroots cadres must be revised so as to be consistent with the importance of grassroots units.

7. We must adopt a new work method and shape a Leninist work ethic for the party. This is a major requirement for our party's leadership. Facts prove that adoption of correct work methods and behavior is an exceptionally important factor in ensuring the accuracy of decisions and transforming them into facts.

A. First of all, we must definitely renovate the method of preparing and issuing decisions especially on economic matters, along the line of improving the scientific character of work methods. In issuing accurate decisions, it is imperative to have a firm grasp of the actual situation and to ensure possession of accurate information. This requires that leading cadres get closer to the realities and that staff organs pay great attention to strengthening organizations, changing study methods and understanding the situation thoroughly.

Study organs must review the situation and utilize information to formulate plans on the basis of accurate information supplied to them. For their party, information organs and joint information units must provide information promptly, select information for dissemination and file reports in a timely manner in order to help leading cadres supervise study work and settle problems appropriately.

The opinions of the masses must be respected, and the views of subordinates must be collected and reviewed. Preparations for important decisions must be based on the study of different plans, close coordination among responsible organs at all levels and in all sectors, extensive use of the results of research institutes and the collection of opinions from persons who are well acquainted with the matter.

The Political Bureau and the Secretariat should directly guide efforts to resolve new and complex problems of great importance on an experimental basis; and only make decisions after studying the actual results of experimental work. Preparations should be made very carefully, to the point that even before making a decision, all arguments and reasons must be clearly analyzed in the main to ensure agreement on or selection of plans for its implementation. If an agreement cannot be reached, thorough discussions must be made conducted, but a compromising view must not be arrived at just out of deference or fear that the subsequent adoption of poor decisions may do harm in many respects. The lack of uniform understanding and implementation of resolutions will disperse and lessen the effectiveness of discipline in carrying out decisions.

We must pay attention to creating conditions so that decisions may be made by the party and state on the basis of scientific analysis. All economic plans, policies and viewpoints must be studied in a comprehensive and profound manner and with practical calculations. It is necessary to step up basic investigation, improve statistical work and firmly grasp the situation through analysis to meet the requirements of leadership. Regulations on decision making must be established from top to bottom in the spirit of ensuring that decisions are not made unless complete information is available, unless plans have been made to calculate their effectiveness, and unless all the procedures for decision making have been observed.

B. To make correct decisions simply means to define orientations for action. The crucial problem remains the organization of the implementation of decisions in order to turn them into reality. If we consider research in making decisions to be important, the organization of their implementation is ten times more so. It is necessary to resolutely overcome the tendency to gloat over one's first successful step -- feeling complacent over the decisions already made. Plans must be formulated to carry out resolutions with responsibility for their implementation clearly assigned to specific persons and organs, with a specified time of completion and specific persons and organs designated to keep track of, encourage, supervise and control their implementation.

Major resolutions of the party must be promptly established in specific policies, viewpoints and measures of the state so as to accelerate the implementation of these resolutions. Concerning issues in which no previous experience has been accumulated, work must be carried out on a trial basis before its widespread application. In the art of leadership and management, we must know which points and which links to concentrate our efforts and attention on and must attach special importance to inspection, review, recapitulation, drawing upon experience, giving commendations and awards, and promptly enforcing discipline.

C. The changing of the methods for making decisions and organizing their implementation in accordance with the aforementioned requirements is an important part of our effort to adopt Leninist methodology and work conduct. We must also carry out many other tasks to adopt at all costs this conduct with the aim of improving party leadership.

It is necessary to grasp even more firmly the need for unifying theory with practice, words with deeds, and policies with organization. The current wide separation of these aspects is an importance cause of the lack of effectiveness in organization and implementation. We must unify the revolutionary character with the scientific character in all activities, and link revolutionary ardor with organized actions and effective methods. The party must instill in the contingent of cadres a practical and realistic way of thinking and the habit of working with calculated results. It is necessary to urgently train leading cadres in the science of leadership and the science of management.

Each unit head must work in accordance with his functions and the operational procedures instead of according to his personal whim. It is necessary to set up and use the organization satisfactorily from the central level down to various other levels. The apparatus must be efficient and its administrators must be truly capable and knowledgeable. On the basis of functions and operational procedures, it is necessary to review the implementation of decisions in order to promptly give citations, commendations and awards or enforce discipline.

We must truly carry out the practice of self-criticism within the party and before the masses and must truly discuss measures for resolving difficulties in management with the people in order to advance the movement continuously. At 3- or 6-month intervals, and when there is a major task, it is necessary to employ the system of consulting the people and provide opportunities for the masses to criticize party cadres and members and party and state organs. We must strictly analyze social opinions in order to formulate viewpoints and policies in a timely manner.

8. We must pay attention to and always intensify party control work. Control work constitutes one of the key functions of party leadership and represents an important part of party-building work as a whole, especially at a time when the party leads the administration. To ensure effectiveness in organization, leadership and implementation, it is required that we pay the utmost attention to and intensify supervision and control over the implementation of decisions. Programs and plans must be mapped out to organize control work in a careful manner. Plans for activities of the party Central Committee Secretariat and the standing committees of the various party committee echelons must include a plan for control.

It is necessary to intensify party control work. This work must be upgraded scientifically to ensure timeliness, precision and a high level of effectiveness. This is a crucial task that must be carried out in connunction with planning by the various party committee echelons, control committees and party departments. Control over general issues concerning the implementation of party lines, policies and resolutions -- which is designed to encourage, supervise and guide implementation -- must be assumed by party committee echelons and departments in accordance with their functions and areas of responsibility. Control over cases involving violations of party statutes by party members -- which includes cases involving violations of the principles of party organization and activities and infringements of party discipline, the law of the state and qualifications of party members -- over the enforcement of discipline within the party, over party finances and so forth must, as stipulated in the party statutes, be assumed by the control committees at the central and various other levels. This task is of great significance in maintaining party discipline and contributing to a stable, strong and clean party.

Attention must be given to perfecting control committees at all levels. All activities must be subjected to strict control and all sectors must intensify their own control work. The improvement of the quality and effectiveness of party control work must be closely linked with the improvement of the effectiveness of state control work and the mass control work of the people's control network. Leadership without control is in reality the absence of leadership.

Conclusion: Pay attention to the auality and effectiveness of party-building work.

Dear comrades, the great successes of the Vietnamese revolution are also the successes of party-building work. We have displayed creativity in this work and have achieved results and drawn upon valuable experiences in this field. Many party committee echelons, party chapters, party organizations and party members have, through their actual work, gained valuable experiences in ideological and organizational work. We assert the basic and strong points of the party and the contingent of party cadres and members. Yet, we also clearly recognize the grave weaknesses and deficiencies of the party and of party-building work, especially in the economic and social fields.

The actual situation of the party's present ideological and organizational tasks shows that the quality and effectiveness of the party-building undertaking are far from meeting the requirements of the political task and are hardly worth the efforts made for this purpose. There are correct resolutions and directives on building and organizing the party, but cadres still do not understand and are not implementing them thoroughly. Many important related tasks have been done, but they have not been reviewed promptly in order to evaluate their results.

We must, first of all, point out that party-building work has not long been linked to the political task. Its major shortcoming has resulted from the fact that it has not been aimed at concretizing the party's lines and coordinated closely with the shaping of a new economic managerial system and that proper attention has not been paid to strengthening organization and improving cadres in order to accelerate the establishment of a new economic structure and new economic managerial procedures.

Party-building work has not yet been considered by party committee echelons as their primary task. Many party committee echelons and party cadres and members do not study the party statutes in order to carry out this task correctly. They have a habit of waiting for or relying on the guidance by the higher echelons.

Our duty is to pay due attention to developing strengths and overcoming such shortcomings in order to improve the quality and effectiveness of the party-building task and the organizational and ideological tasks. We must oppose the slackening of the ideological task. We must also oppose bureaucratism and formalism in party-building work. It is imperative to strengthen control work in order to accelerate the implementation of resolutions, disseminate good experiences, correct deviations and cut down on unnecessary paperwork and meetings.

The party statutes must be complied with scrupulously. Each party committee echelon and each party cadre and member must study carefully the party statutes, the documents that have been approved by the fourth and fifth party congress and which deal with party-building work, and the party's resolutions and directives on this task, in order to take the initiative in implementing them. They are the main basis for each party committee echelon to exercise leadership of the party-building task. Strict discipline must be observed by party committee echelons and party cadres and members in complying with the party statutes.

In the last analysis, the present shortcomings stem from the failure to carry out the party statutes scrupulously. Party-building work must really be the task of the entire party. Each party committee echelon, organ and party cadre and member is responsible for building the party according to its or his function and responsibility on the basis of compliance with the party statutes, party-building guidelines and the central echelon's resolutions and directives.

Party committee echelons and party cadres and members must be thoroughly imbued with party-building guidelines in order to improve the quality and the art of directing the party-building task. Realities of the carrying out of party-building work must be reviewed so that we will thoroughly understand the party-building guidelines with their new contents. Understanding and complying correctly with these guidelines will lead to creativity.

Along with reviewing our experiences in party-building work, we must study those of the CPSU and other fraternal parties in this matter -- parties which have preceded us in the socialist revolution.

The quality of the body of cadres in charge of organizational, ideological and control work must be enhanced by improving the incumbent ones and changing those who are no longer qualified for this work because they are qualitatively poor, unfair, subjective, bureaucratic, highhanded and corrupt, have abused their powers and worse still, have engaged in illicit transactions.

We must shape for each party echelon, organ and cadre entrusted with this work a result-minded way of thinking and a practical work method in directing the organizational and ideological tasks. We must equip leading and organizational cadres with the necessary knowledge of their specific work and the knowledge of economic management, science and technology and organizational science. This is imperatively necessary to help the Central Committee and party committee echelons improve the quality and effectiveness of the party-building task.

Dear comrade delegates, over the past half of a century our people, under the party's leadership, have endured countless sacrifices and hardships and won one victory after another. In the protracted struggle, our party -- founded, educated and trained by President Ho Chi Minh -- has thus far been highly worthy as a genuine Marxist-Leninist party with a force of stalwart cadres and members who are absolutely loyal to the fatherland and the people and to proletarian internationalism, a party which is united and single-minded in terms of its lines and is always worthy of the confidence of the people and friends all over the world.

The great victories which our country's revolution has won since the fourth party congress are also the victories of the party in the process of its maturity. The shortcomings in the party-building task as well as in the party's leadership must be considered as lessons of experience through which our party will mature even more remarkably.

Building the party has always been an important task that has decided all of the results of the revolution. Today, in the face of the ever larger-scale and complex socialist construction undertaking and of the very intensive national defense work, party-building task is all the more important and decides the country's future.

Acting upon the party statutes and the beloved and venerated President Ho Chi Minh's testament, we are determined to forge ahead in all respects in order to be worthy as the leaders and loyal servants of the people. We are convinced that with the fifth party congress' resolutions and on the basis of the experiences drawn upon the realities and efforts of the entire party in carrying out the above tasks, policies and measures, the party-building work will surge forward, meet the requirements of the political task, and certainly make great contributions to creating a consolidated strength of the entire system of proletarian dictatorship throughout the country and ensuring the successful fulfillment of the tasks set forth by the fifth party congress.

Dang Quoc Bao Speech

[Excerpts from speech by Dang Quoc Bao, first secretary of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Central Committee, at the Fifth VCP Congress -- recorded]

[Text] The party Central Committee's political report devoted an appropriate portion to youth activities in the new situation. I fully approve the contents, targets and measures mentioned on youth activities. Today everyone realizes more clearly youth's role and position in society. With this role and position, youth is a great class force that all class enemies in the past as well as the Chinese hegemonic expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces at present consider to be an object to direct their constant attack at.

Since thebeginning our party has always treated the task of building new men -- along with that of building up the new economy and creating a new production force in our country -- as a task of strategic significance for Vietnam's revolution. The party Central Committee political report has pointed to the need to share the responsibility among the state, the sectors, the organizations -- including the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union -- and all of society in organizing and educating youth.

A host of urgent matters confront youth and youth activities, requiring great efforts by the entire society. Our youth today live in a new era. Their levels in all aspects are raised. Their psychology, physiology, inclination, aspirations, desires and so forth are developed. They also differ in age level, regional residence, ethnic nationality, religion, profession, educational level, environment and so forth. Consequently we must seek to understand, and amass practical understanding and reasoning and adopt a scientific attitude in dealing with issues relating to youth and youth activities.

Taking up heavy responsibility from the party in organizing, training and fostering the young generation, the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union must actively and rapidly renovate its method of action so as to exploit all potentials of society in mobilizing the strength of the entire proletarian dictatorship system in its youth activities. On the other hand, the fact that youth and the youth movement are developing everyday demands that Youth Union activities be truly sharp, positive and close to the masses. They most overcome all manifestations of bureaucracy and passiveness and at the same time must oppose all the plots of the enemy, who is resorting to all sorts of strategems to trick the youth.

Dear comrades, the common line and social and economic strategy defined by the fifth party congress have pointed to the common objective of our country's revolution in the future. From this common objective, the immediate as well as long-term task of mobilizing the youth is to materialize the youth's vanguard position in the establishment and development of the right of socialist collective mastery of the working people, including youths, ensuring that youth firmly maintain the role of shock force in national construction and defense and at the same time to endeavor to train and foster the youth into new socialist men who are developed in all aspects and who faithfully and outstandingly carry forward the party's and nation's cause.

Our revolution is now entering a new situation. Our youth, educated and trained by the party, have shown their fine quality and have proved to be a major force standing at the forefront of economic, cultural, social battlefronts and in the fight against the enemy. Our people are entering the eighties with extremely great tasks and fierce trials. This requires that we urgently train and foster the new generation of people and teach them to link their lives to the country's destiny, to the people and to the socialist regime so that they will voluntarily stand up to cope with all difficulties and all enemies, discharge their obligation as the shock force that creates the new society and firmly defend the socialist fatherland.

For this reason, the task of teaching communism to youth becomes even more urgent. Acting on the sacred testament of most beloved Uncle Ho, to foster a revolutionary generation for the future is an extremely important and necessary task. First of all, we must step up teaching the party's lines and policies, the notion and spirit of collective mastery and the labor and national defense obligation, making the youth clearly see the plots and actions of Chinese hegemonic expansionism, which is colluding with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces and striving to oppose our country's revolution and the world revolutionary movement.

We must teach the youth about the struggle between the two paths -- socialism and capitalism -- about law, the revolutionary situation and task, proletarian internationalism and so forth. We must actively foster the young generation so that it will know about and feel proud of the heroic traditions of the nation, the working class, the party, the armed forces and the youth union. With a view toward helping them determine their revolutionary ideals in a positive and correct manner, we must equip youth with a scientific world outlook. We must train youth in revolutionary ethics, educate them to live, fight, work and study according to the great Uncle Ho's example.

In the organizing work, first of all we must attract the youth into various forms of political, cultural and profressional organizations, thus enabling them to find their positions in society and in their organizations and we must be concerned with the question of solving youth employment. In organizing the young generation, the question of decisive significance is the direct party leadership in building and consolidating the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union, the vanguard unit and the nucleus that unites all strata of youth.

With its function as the party's effective arm and trusted reserve unit, the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union must better fulfill the responsibility entrusted it by the party, namely, to care for and guide the teenagers and children and build up the Ho Chi Minh vanguard teenagers unit and the Ho Chi Minh children's unit. To care for and educate teenagers and children is the inevitable question of the proletarian revolution lying within the nature of the socialist regime. Consequently it is also the responsibility of the entire society.

Along with stepping up the youth's broad emulation movement at the grassroots level, we recommend that the party and the state entrust the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union with a number of industrial and agricultural projects at national, interprovincial, provincial or city level to be called "communist youth union projects," aimed at motivating the youth to contribute their efforts, train and involve themselves in socialist construction. In national defense, we must develop the positive effect of coordinating and combining the three forces, the People's Army, the people's security force and youth, to create a force for successfully implementing the tasks of combat readiness and fighting in defense of the fatherland to preserve political security, public order and social safety.

On the cultural and educational front, the youth union and teenagers unit must continue to contribute their efforts to pushing forward the "two good" emulation movement aimed at the objectives of raising the educational quality and training in revolutionary ethics; intensifying cultural, literary, sports and physical education activities; building a new lifestyle and new socialist men; eliminating the cultural vestiges of neocolonialism ad eradicating supertitious practices.

The youth are the shock force in production, economic construction and development, national defense and cultural and educational development. At the same time they are the shock force in the emulation movement to practice thrift and struggle against negative phenomena in the economy and social life.

NHAN DAN: IMPLEMENT VCP CONGRESS RESOLUTIONS

[NHAN DAN 12 April editorial: "The Necessary Conditions for Successfully Implementing the Party Resolutions in Light of the Fifth Party Congress Resolutions"]

[Text] The past 5 years have been a highly challenging period for the revolution in our country after it entered a new historic stage filled with extremely difficult and complex tasks. Through its trials, our party has shown all the more clearly its great abilities and creative talents, leading our people in overcoming numerous difficulties, advancing the revolutionary cause and creating a strong new strategic position for itself. The great majority of our party cadres and members, with their fine political quality and improving standards, are striving to fulfill their tasks.

The fifth party congress affirmed the strength of the party organizations and, at the same time, made a penetrating analysis of the shortcomings and weaknesses that must be overcome to increase the fighting capacity of the socialist revolution's vanguard unit. The political report read at the congress clearly pointed out: The party's leadership must be strengthened in all respects. Particular attention, however, should be paid to its ecnomic leadership. The entire party must deeply engage itself on the economic front, improve its style of leadership in economic affairs and enhance its capacity for and effectiveness in economic leadership.

This is the guideline for building the party in such a way as to meet the objective demands of the new stage. Improving the quality of the contingent of party cadres and members is the decisive condition for improving the quality of the party leadership. The successful implementation of the resolutions of the fifth party congress is decided by the Communists' capabilities and quality. The capabilities of party cadres and members are reflected in their ability to acquire a thorough understanding of the party resolutions and to organize their implementation.

Changing the management system is an important condition for implementing our socio-economic programs. An able cadre is a man capable of changing the forms of organization and management, the work methods and the operational systems to suit new requirements, overcome all manifestations of sluggishness, do away with the obsolete, vigorously promote new elements and exploit as best he can all potentials so as to overcome the difficulties in the economy and the people's life and to change the situation.

Cadres' capabilities are reflected in their organizational and managerial skills. For this reason, party cadres and members should be equipped with the necessary economic and scientific and technical knowledge. Their leadership and revolutionary qualities must also be improved.

The immediate task of all party organizations is to organize the implementation of the resolutions of the fifth party congress and carefully prepare their programs of action so that they may be discussed and decided upon at the second-phase local party congresses.

In light of the various resolutions, all party organizations are dutybound to review their leadership in all fields since the fourth party congress and determine the programs of action for their localities or basic units so as to fully carry out the two strategic tasks. They must also correctly implement the various policies and measures so as to achieve the four objectives by all means.

The primary criteria for assessing one's quality are loyalty to the fatherland's and people's revolutionary cause, total dedication to the struggle for the people's happiness and sense of organization and discipline in implementing the political line and organizational principles of the party and the law of the state. One's revolutionary quality must also be reflected in his attitude toward the struggle against the errors in the party and society and in his defense of and support for the party's cause against reactionary propaganda.

A militant communist must always live an honest life, judge himself severely, be industrious and modest and fulfill his duties under any circumstances. This will bring the greatest happiness for every one who is a communist. Capability and quality are the two things each of us must have to be a worthy vanguard militant of the revolution.

RESOURCES BOOM DECLINES -- Figures released by the Department of Industry and Commerce show a significant decline in Australia's resources boom in the last half of last year. A survey of major manufacturing and mining projects shows a fall in investment of almost 8 percent in the 6 months. Investment in projects classified as committed and final feasibility stages fell by $2.7 billion. That's about U.S. $2.0 billion. The survey found that the remaining cost of 366 projects was almost $33 billion, this compared with $35 billion in June. The minister for industry and commerce, Sir Philip Lynch, has blamed the investment decline largely on abandoned or deferred projects valued at $4.4 billion as well as on increased expenditures on several projects. GOLKAR PROTESTS ELECTION DISTURBANCES BY PPP

BK141022 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0700 GMT 14 Apr 82

[Text] The Central Executive Council of the Functional Group [Golkar] has made a strong protest against activities in the election campaign by the United Development Party [PPP] in Jakarta yesterday. It said that the PPP campaign in many ways breached the consensus established by all political parties and violated already established regulations. The offenses included the destruction of Golkar campaign posters on a number of streets in the capital city. The protest was filed with the commander of the Security and Order Restoration Command [Kopkamtib], Admiral Sudomo, today.

Admiral Sudomo promised the Golkar Central Executive Council that he would discuss the matter at a meeting with leaders of the three contending parties in the general election and the general election institute this Saturday [17 April].

Following his meeting with the Golkar leaders, Admiral Sudomo told the press that it was true that in the course of the PPP election campaign in Jakarta yesterday many offenses had been noticed. Overall, he added, they constituted a disturbance of security and order. The situation had been exploited by irresponsible persons who resorted to criminal acts. Due to the lack of order in the conduct of the PPP election campaign yesterday, eight teenagers died and 17 buses were destroyed.

Comparing it with the election campaigns conducted by other contending parties, Admiral Sudomo, speaking as Kopkamtib commander, said that the Indonesian Democratic Party's campaign was quite orderly. The campaign included a motorcade which took place last Saturday.

When asked by reporters as to what action could be taken in dealing with the offenses committed by contending parties in the election campaign, the Kopkamtib commander said that it could be in the form of a reminder and if need be, the Kopkamtib commander would exercise his authority to stop offenders from continuing their election campaign.

The protest made by the Golkar Central Executive Council against the PPP campaign would be forwarded by the Kopkamtib commander to the PPP Central Executive Council.

SUZUKI: DEFENSE BUILDUP NOT TIED TO U.S. DEMANDS

[Text] Tokyo, April 13 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday Japan will decide whether and how much it should build up its national defense independent of growing U.S. demands for a greater defense role by this country. "The United States has reason to call for (Japan's defense buildup), but we will decide for ourselves," Suzuki told the joint staff council chairman, Admiral Tsugio Yata. The government does not want the nation to get the false impression that Japan improves its defense capability under U.S. pressure, Suzuki added.

Suzuki was speaking at a luncheon meeting held at the prime minister's official residence. The meeting was also attended by the chiefs of the Ground, Maritime and Air Self-Defense Forces and Defense Agency Director General Soichiro Ito, a civilian. Earlier in the meeting, Yata and other officers called for expansion of Japan-U.S. joint military exercises and easing of restrictions on night training by airplanes aboard the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway, based at Yokosuka, southwest of Tokyo. Suzuki's remarks followed his statement last week underlining Japan's intention to defend sealanes up to 1,000 nautical miles from its shores on its own initiative, not on the basis of an alleged commitment to the United States to do so.

SUZUKI, MITTERRAND VIEW TRADE, OTHER ISSUES

[Text] Tokyo, April 15, (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and French President Francois Mitterrand Thursday both stressed the importance of the forthcoming Versailles summit of seven non-communist industrial nations for overcoming inflation and unemployment by revitalizing the suffering world economy, Japanese officials said. The meeting between Suzuki and Mitterrand came on the second day of the French president's state visit to Japan at the guesthouse in Tokyo and lasted some 70 minutes, according to the officials.

The French president, who will preside over the summit slated for June, said that the influx of Japanese goods into the American and European markets and the high U.S. interest rate, will be major themes of discussion at the summit. But he is opposed to denouncing Japan or putting Japan on the defendant's bench, he was quoted as saying. The trade frictions between Japan and other Western nations over Japan's huge trade surpluses should be solved through friendly dialogue among the parties concerned, he said.

Suzuki told Mitterrand that he hopes the summit will lead to a bright future and added that the essence of the trade problem is how to solve the difficulties through expansion of trade instead of through its reduction, through cooperation instead of conflict, and with sights on the future rather than on the past.

Officials said the two leaders also agreed to develop cooperation in science and technology.

Mitterrand pointed out that the two countries might be able to cooperate in development of nuclear power for peaceful use and of aircraft as well as railway technology. Suzuki and Mitterrand agreed that by doing so the two countries would be able to contribute to the development of Third World nations and to eliminate unemployment through creating new jobs, according to the officials. They agreed that experts of the two countries should start to study how and in what spheres cooperation is possible.

Suzuki and Mitterrand also agreed to establish cultural centers in both Tokyo and Paris to promote mutual understanding among Japanese and French people. Mitterrand revealed that France plans to stage an exposition commemorating the bicentennial anniversary of the French revolution in 1989 and offered an appropriate site on the Seine for the Japanese Cultural Center, which could also be used as a pavillion for the exposition, officials said.

In regard to the issue of disarmament, Suzuki said that as the one and only atom-bombed nation Japan desires peace and hopes that military balance can be attained at lower rather than higher levels. The U.N. special session on disarmament in June will provide a good opportunity to work toward this goal, he was quoted as saying. Suzuki stressed the need for a united Western attitude toward the special session in order to avoid having the discussion turned into an arena for communist propaganda, the officials said. Mitterrand emphasized that peace exists where a balance of power exists and added that there is military imbalance in Europe because of Soviet superiority in both conventional and nuclear arms.

SAKURAUCHI, FRANCE'S JOBERT DISCUSS TRADE ISSUE

[Text] Tokyo, April 15 (KYODO) -- French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert Thursday said France is looking forward to a buying mission Japan plans to send to France next month [to] alleviate Japan's dollar 1 billion surplus, Japanese officials reported. Jobert, accompanying President Francois Mitterrand on his five-day state visit, made the remark when he met Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi for 20 minutes.

The mission is to be led by Yoshizo Ikeda, president of Mitsui and Co. and is expected to be composed of representatives of major Japanese trading firms.

In the meeting Sakurauchi explained Japan's newly-decided measures to ease imports on French goods, including a 10-percent cut in duty in brandy. He also told Jobert that Japan in the past year bought 15 French-built helicopters and several talks on further helicopter purchases are under way.

Jobert welcomed the Japanese market-opening measures and said the trade friction between the two countries could be discussed at future meetings of the bilateral trade commission, Japanese officials said.

SOVIET OFFICIAL URGES EXPANDING USSR-JAPAN TRADE

[Text] Tokyo, April 14 (KYODO) -- Moscow's top trade official here proposed Wednesday that the present trade imbalance between the Soviet Union and Japan be solved through the expansion of trade. Victor B. Spandarian, Soviet trade representative in Japan, made the proposal in a speech at the Soviet business information exhibition now under way in Tokyo. He said that the Soviet Union suffered a dollar 1.3 billion trade deficit with Japan in 1981. Soviet imports from Japan totaled dollar 3.3 billion, compared with dollar 2 billion in exports to Japan.

Spandarian objected to any plan to resort to protectionism to balance the two countries' trade. He said the Soviets would not call on Japan for voluntary export restraints. The trade imbalance should be settled through the expansion of mutual overall trade, the official said. The trade official said Japan was the Soviet Union's No. 5 trade partner in 1981, compared with No. 2 the previous year. He attributed the change to the fact that Japan followed the United States in applying economic sanctions against the Soviet Union following the Afghanistan and Polish disturbances.

Spandarian predicted that the Soviet Union's global trade in the next five years would increase 22.5 percent over the past five years. He said the Soviets have agreed to supply a total of 100 million metric tons of coking coal to Japan between 1979 and 2000.

KIM IL-SONG AWARDED TITLE OF HERO OF DPRK

[Text] Pyongyang, April 15 (KCNA) -- The Central People's Committee of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea issued a decree on awarding the title of the Hero of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to the great leader of our party and our people Comrade Kim Il-song on his 70th birthday. The decree dated April 15, 1982, reads in part:

The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the national hero and the great leader of the revolution who, by leading the arduous Korean revolution to victory, saved our nation from the crisis of survival or fall and has brought prosperity and grandeur to the country, performing immortal feats that will shine long in the annals of the country. The 50-odd-year-long history in which he has led the Korean revolution, taking upon himself the destinies of the fatherland and the nation, has been a history of a glorious struggle in which he has devoted his all to the liberation of the country and its prosperity and development, to the freedom and happiness of the people, and a great revolutionary history in which he has made an immortal contribution to the accomplishment of the cause of national liberation, class liberation, socialism and communism, under the banner of chuche.

In the early period, he powerfully roused the whole nation to the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle under the revolutionary banner of down-with-imperialism, founded the anti-Japanese guerrilla army, the revolutionary armed force of the Korean people, and organised and led the heroic anti-Japanese armed struggle, thereby terminating the brutal Japanese imperialist colonial rule and accomplishing the historic cause of national liberation.

Under the complicated and difficult conditions of a fierce class struggle after liberation, he, on the basis of the precious achievements and experiences attained in the flames of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, founded in good time the Workers Party of Korea, a revolutionary party of chuche type, and strengthened and developed it into a mighty revolutionary vanguard, founded the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the genuine fatherland of our people, and developed our revolutionary armed force into a modern regular army to put in the hands of our people an invincible weapon of the revolution and construction and turn our country into a dignified sovereign and independent state.

In the face of the complicated situation in which the territory was bisected by the U.S. imperialists, he indicated the outstanding line of founding a democratic base and led the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution without delay to a thorough fulfilment, thus turning the northern half of the republic into a powerful base of the Korean revolution.

In the grim period of the fatherland liberation war when the destiny of the nation was at stake, he defeated the U.S. imperialist aggressors, the chieftain of world imperialism, and firmly defended the independence of the fatherland and the sovereignty of the nation, started d.S. imperialism on the downhill run and inspired and stimulated the anti-imperialist, anti-U.S. struggle to a new upsurge.

After the war he indicated an original line of the socialist revolution and successfully fulfilled the historical tasks for the socialist transformation of the old production relations, establishing the most superior socialist system on this land and built a powerful socialist country with mighty independent heavy and light industries and a developed agriculture in a short period on ruins to which everything had been reduced.

After the establishment of the socialist system, he propounded in a comprehensive manner a revolutionary line and policy of struggle for completely realizing the independence of the working masses and roused the whole party and the entire people to the fulfilment of the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, to powerfully push ahead with the cause of modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea.

He set it forth as the supreme task of the nation to reunify the divided country and has made all his efforts to dispel the tragedies of the split nation and open up a bright future of a reunified Korea, putting his heart and soul into it. In the whole period of his revolutionary activities, he showed deep concern for the liberation cause of the world working class and the oppressed nations and actively supported and encouraged the struggle of the people for building an independent new world against imperialism and made immortal contributions to the cause of anti-imperialism and independence and the overall development of the international revolutionary movement.

Respected Comrade Kim Il-song is, indeed, a great thinker and theoretician who brightly lights the course of independence and road of revolutionary victory, an outstanding military strategist who opened a new era of the national liberation revolution in colonies and the anti-imperialist, anti-U.S. struggle by defeating two imperialisms in one generation, the genius of revolution and construction who has led to shining victories all the revolutionary struggles of our people for sovereignty and independence, communism and socialism, and the great leader of the people who brings to most splendid realisation the desire of the nation and the ideal of the working people.

For his great exploits in the long course of the revolutionary struggle, he enjoys undisputed trust and boundless reverence of the whole nation and deepest respect of the world progressive people.

The Central People's Committee of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, representing the unanimous will and desire of the entire Korean people, decides to award the title of Hero of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea together with Gold Star Medal and Order of National Flag First Class to the great leader of our party and our people Comrade Kim Il-song, who has accomplished immortal heroic feats for the fatherland and the nation and made a great contribution to the revolutionary cause of the working class by leading our revolution at its head for the long period of more than half a century, on the occasion of his 70th birthday.

Kim Il-song Banquet Speech

[Text] Pyongyang, April 15 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, made a speech at the banquet he arranged on April 14 in honour of the party and government delegation of the Republic of Zambia led by His Excellency Kenneth David Kaunda, chairman of the United National Independence Party of Zambia and president of the Republic of Zambia. Follows the full text of the speech:

Your Excellency Esteemed President Kenneth David Kaunda, dear guests from Zambia, comrades and friends: I am very much delighted today to have met Your Excellency Esteemed President again and be seated here together. It seems only yesterday or the day before that we had meaningful meetings at Pyongyang and Belgrade. You have such a brotherly sense of duty that you have revisited us. This bears eloquent testimony to the depth and sincerity of our friendship.

Considering that our fraternity affords an example of relationship between friends maintaining independence, I would like to offer a warm, hearty welcome to your visit to this country.

The present complicated and tense international situation demands that the Third World countries advocating indendence take concerted action in firm unity. In this context, it is highly important for leaders to exchange visits for consultation and promote the common cause of independence against imperialism. If the Third World countries maintain independence and strengthen their solidarity and cooperation, expanding and developing the Nonaligned Movement, they can isolate and weaken imperialists, check and frustrate their manoeuvrings of aggression and war, safeguard peace and national independence and successfully push ahead with the work of establishing a new international economic order.

Your current visit to our country will not only increase our intimacy as brothers and comrades-in-arms but also serve as a momentous occasion in strengthening the friendly and cooperative relations between our two countries and consolidating the unity of the nonaligned and Third World countries. Our countries, both being developing Third World countries and member states of the Nonaligned Movement, march shoulder to shoulder towards the common goal of anti-imperialism and independence. We have the same ideological and political concepts and take the same approach to international issues, too.

It gives me pleasure to have such a good friend as you in Africa, who adhere to independence and solve all problems, attaching centrality to man. Esteemed comrade president is widely known as a prominent political leader and a staunch anti-imperialist fighter in Africa, for since the earliest days of your political activity, you have devotedly fought for the freedom and happiness of the Zambian people and the complete liberation of oppressed and humiliated Africa.

Today the Zambian people are striving to realize the idea of building "socialist humanitarian society" originated by Your Excellency President. We express our strong solidarity with your just cause, firmly convinced that under your outstanding leadership there will be definitively established in Zambia an independent and prosperous new society devoid of exploitation of man by man, a model independent country in Africa.

Particularly, we give active support to and will continue to express unreserved solidarity with your valiant struggle to firmly defend your country's sovereignty and achieve the complete liberation of Africa under the difficult situation where aggressions, subversions and sabotages are ceaselessly carried out by imperialists and racists. At the same time, we resolutely denounce the South African racists for their savage suppression of the struggle of the Namibian and South African peoples for freedom and liberation and for their continued invasions of the neighbouring frontline states and extend our full support to and firm solidarity with the peoples of that part of the world in their just struggle for the complete liberation of Africa.

The Zambian party, government and people have helped us most conscientiously, always attaching the greatest importance to their obligation as comrades-in-arms and brothers. Comrade president, you regard our people's sufferings caused by national division as your own, and have conducted great activities for the reunification of our country in the international arena and have been the first to support our new proposal for national reunification. For this we would like to express our deep thanks to you and the fraternal Zambian people.

Your Excellency Esteemed President, now is an age of independence and no force can check the worldwide trend towards independence.

In order to forcefully promote the aspiration and trend of the times, we have, in my view, more things to do from now than what we have already done.

We hope that you will play a greater role in expanding and developing the Nonaligned Movement and achieving victory for the cause of independence against imperialism and fight on hand in hand with us until we have built a peaceful and independent new world free from all manner of domination and subjugation.

I do not celebrate my birthday, but I am hugely delighted today to meet you, my old friend from a far-off land, again and have an opportunity to further deepen our friendship.

May I propose a toast: To eternal friendship and solidarity between our two peoples and the prosperity and progress of the Republic of Zambia, to solidarity among the world's people advocating independence, to the long life and good health of esteemed Comrade President Kenneth David Kaunda, to the health of the guests from Zambia, and to the health of comrades and friends present here.

SK141234 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0306 GMT 14 Apr 82

[Speech by O Chin-u, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee and who is identified by unidentified speaker as "minister of the People's Armed Forces," at ceremony held in Pyongyang on 14 April to dedicate Arch of Triumph -- live]

[Text] Representative comrades participating in this function celebrating the 70th birthday of the great leader; respected leaders of foreign parties, states and governments; Pyongyang citizens; and foreign comrades and friends: Significantly greeting the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and reflecting the unanimous desire of all the people, we are here to hold a grand ceremony to dedicate a magnificent arch of triumph which we have built at the foot of historic Moranbong Hill.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song triumphantly returned to Pyongyang and exchanged the first greetings with the people here at the foot of Moranbong Hill after achieving the liberation of the fatherland by victoriously organizing and leading the grim anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle for 20 years following his embarking on the road of revolution with a great will to achieve the liberation of the fatherland.

The construction of an arch of triumph at this revolutionary, historic site is the manifestation of our people's firm will to highly extol and glorify generation after generation the immortal achievements attained by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and is an event of great honor in more brilliantly glorifying the 70th birthday of the respected and beloved leader. [applause]

Entrusted by the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee, I warmly congratulate all party shock-brigade members and all the people throughout the country, including Pyongyang citizens, who sincerely offered aid for the construction of this Arch of Triumph, on having performed great exploits by participating in this construction work with ardent loyalty to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. [applause]

Participating in this meeting are party, state and government leaders of various foreign countries and foreign comrades and friends who are visiting our country to celebrate the 70th birthday of Comrade Kim Il-song, the respected and beloved leader of our party and people. This pleases our people, who are marking a great national hoiliday and makes this ceremony dedicating the Arch of Triumph more significant.

I warmly welcome party, state and government leaders of various foreign countries and foreign comrades and friends who are present for this ceremony and are sharing our joy. At the same time, I extend deep thanks to foreign comrades and friends for showing their sincere faith in the construction of the Arch of Triumph. [applause]

Comrades, at this moment when we are about to dedicate the Arch of Triumph after building this towering arch on a historic site, we review with excitement the immortal achievements which the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has attained for the fatherland and the people by leading the grim but glorious struggle to liberate the fatherland and achieve the freedom and liberation of the people, holding aloft the revolutionary banner of chuche. Since embarking on the road of revolution during the darkest period of Japanese colonial rule, taking responsibility for the destiny of the fatherland and the people, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song helped enact a basic change in the status of our fatherland and people by leading all the revolutionary struggles and construction work of our people to a single, straight road of victory over a long period of more than half a century. [applause]

Holding in high esteem the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song as leader and following his leadership, our fatherland has greeted an unprecedentedly great heyday of prosperity in the long history of 5,000 years. Our people have become a powerful, dignified people who independently pioneer their own destiny. [applause]

Holding the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in high esteem as a leader, the Korean people, who were once deprived of their country by foreign imperialists because they failed to greet an outstanding leader and were forced to suffer the status colonial slavery, have ended the long history of suffering and created the history of glorious struggle and victory. [applause]

Because the great Comrade Kim Il-song has invented the immortal chuche idea and because he has illuminated the advance path of the revolution, the Korean revolution, once facing a crisis of death and ruin, has greeted a great era of advance and victory under the banner of independence. Because he has organized and led the heroic anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, our people have overthrown the Japanese colonial rule and achieved the historic cause of the fatherland's liberation. [applause]

The victory of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle achieved under the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's leadership was a historic event making the land of 3,000 ri overflow with excitement and delight caused by the liberation and unfolding of future path of endless happiness and prosperity for our people. [applause]

The minds of all Korean people in greeting the great event of national liberation focus on recalling the time when, under the Japanese imperialists' brutal colonial rule, they always held in high esteem and revered the respected and beloved Gen Kim Il-song as the symbol of national liberation and a great sun. All the people longed for the glorious time when they could greet him. On 14 October 1945, our people proudly greeted this historic time here — at the Plaza of Triumph.

After having a triumphant homecoming by accomplishing the cause of national liberation and without resting after protracted and grim struggles, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song energetically forged ahead with the work of laying a foundation for building a new fatherland. As a first step he declared the founding of our party -- the militant staff headquarters of the Korean revolution -- to the world. He then exchanged the first greetings of triumph with all Korean people. [applause]

The historic Pyongyang mass meeting respectfully greeting the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Plaza of Triumph was a truly national festive event, unprecedented in the long history of our country. [applause]

The enthusiastic cheer which resonantly echoed at the Plaza of Triumph when the people greeted the respected and beloved leader whom they had admired even in their dreams and when they shouted, "Long live General Kim Il-song!" was a eulogy of warm thanks extended by all the people to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for regaining the lost fatherland and for opening a broad road [passage indistinct] and a loyal pledge of our people to hold the leader in high esteem and follow him forever.

When General Kim Il-song, a great patriot whom Korea had produced and the hero of the nation, appeared before the people on the historic day when the beautiful land of 3,000 ri was divided and extended warm greetings and encouragement to all the people, the meeting site was overflowing with great excitement and delight. In the historic speech which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song delivered on that day before the welcoming crowd, he said the masters of the liberated fatherland were the Korean people themselves. He then said: Now is the time our Korean people should joint efforts to build a new, democratic Korea. The people of all walks of life should rise in building a new Korea by displaying their patriotic zeal. Those who have strength should actively contribute to founding the country with strength; those who possess skills, with skills; those who have money, with money. Indeed, all the people who love the country, the people and democracy should firmly unite and build a democratic, independent country.

The great leader's speech at the time of his triumphant homecoming which echoed from Moranbong Hill and spread throughout the fatherland, was the solemn declaration of independence by our people who had cut the iron shackles of the Japanese imperialists' colonial rule and achieved freedom and liberation and was a chuche program for founding the country, illuminating the path to be traversed by the liberated Korean people. [applause]

By vigorously advancing under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song for nearly 40 years since the advance path toward building a new fatherland was illuminated at the Plaze of Triumph, our people have enacted an epochal change in building a new fatherland and a new society and have taken a great leap toward progeress and civilization. [applause]

Under grim circumstances in which our people's national territory was divided, our people have established the most advanced socialist system by repelling the class enemy's wicked maneuvers and the U.S. imperialists' armed aggression and by brilliantly carrying out a two-stage social revolution. They have transformed our country, which once suffered severe scourges of war, into a powerful, independent and self-reliant country capable of defending itself. All these are the fruition of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's wise leadership and the chuche idea. [applause]

Conveying endless admiration and reverence and ardent loyalty from all the people on this significant occasion, I extend the utmost honor and the warmest thanks to Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and people, for liberating the fatherland by initiating the chuche cause in our country and by leading the grim and protracted anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and for providing our people with today's glory and happiness by leading the struggle to build a new fatherland and a new society to the straight road of victory following liberation. [applause.]

Comrades, reflecting our people's loyal desire to bequeath the great leader Comrade Il-song's immortal revolutionary activities and achievements to our posterity generation after generation, the Arch of Triumph has risen as a great monument in the era of the KWP.

Situated near Kim Il-song Stadium, which has been magnificently built, reflecting our people's unanimous desire to glorify forever the historic Moranbong stadium where the great leader made a historic speech, the Arch of Triumph adds significance to the immortal memory of this historic plaza.

Engraved on the arch -- an excellent artistic blending of our people's traditional architectural style with modern, aesthetic values -- is "The Song of General Kim Il-song" -- an immortal revolutionary song, and chronicle of the period when, embarking on the road of 20-year-long bloody struggle to achieve national liberation, the great leader returned home triumphantly after attaining this end. Thus, the arch solemnly notes the respected and beloved leader's glorious revolutionary activities and his precious revolutionary achievements with immortal letters.

The image of Mt Paektu -- a holy revolutionary mountain -- engraved on the 60-meter-high Arch of Triumph vigorously shows the deep and strong root of our revolution developed by the great leader, reflecting our people's firm will to inherit and complete the chuche revolutionary cause which began in the forests of Mt Paektu. [applause]

The engraved images of members of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army advancing to the peal of a trumpet signalling advance under the order issued by the respected and beloved leader, of members of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army, men, women, children and people of all walks of life, who are warmly welcoming the leader's triumphand homecoming, and of workers lively joining the struggle to build a new Korea, holding aloft the leader's speech on triumphantly returning home, shine as an immortal picture showing our people's endless admiration, reverence and loyalty to the great leader. [applause]

Indeed, the Arch of Triumph is matchlessly precious and magnificent in its revolutionary content and size. In architectural style and artistic sense, it is a new, unique, great monumental edifice.

The course of building the Arch of Triumph has been a period of heroic struggle in which our construction workers and people fully demonstrated wisdom, talent and lofty loyalty. Fully showing ardent loyalty to the great leader and mass heroism, party shock-brigade members have successfully built the Arch of Triumph -- an immortal, great monument -- in less than 2 years by performing labor feats. [applause]

Every structure and image on the Arch of Triumph show the great leader's glorious and brilliant revolutionary activities and achievements and creative wisdom displayed by party shock-brigade members, planners and sculptors who have made arduous efforts to inherit these activities and achievements generation after generation by perfectly depicting them. Reflected even in a tree and a flower planted around the Arch of Triumph are warm sincerity shown by workers, peasants, soldiers of the People's Army and the People's Security Force, members of public security agencies, youths, students, men, women, overseas compatriots and many foreign friends. [applause]

The grand monumental Arch of Triumph, which symbolizes our people's unanimous will to highly praise the immortal revolutionary achievements which the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has attained for the fatherland and the people and to tenaciously struggle to the end to complete the chuche revolutionary cause under the leadership of the party and the leader, will note forever the respected and beloved leader's greatness and will shine forever. [applause, shouts]

Comrades, the erection of the Arch of Triumph in the historic site of revolution, where the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song returned in triumph after liberating the fatherland and exchanged his first greetings with the people, is the glory and pride of our people. By cherishing this great national pride and honor deep in our hearts and studying and inheriting the glorious and brilliant revolutionary activities and immortal revolutionary achievements of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we should vigorously continue the struggle to establish the chuche-oriented revolutionary view of the world, to strengthen the firm unity and cohesion of the party and society on the basis of the chuche idea and to achieve the completion of the revolutionary cause of chuche.

All party members and working people should expedite the complete victory of socialism and the cause of national reunification by more vigorously waging the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture, upholding and following the party's task of modelling society on the chuche idea. Under the banner of anti-imperialism and independence, we will, in the future, too, vigorously continue to struggle against imperialism, for the building of an independent and peaceful new world and for the victory of the cause of nonalignment and socialism by firmly uniting with all progressive peoples of the world.

The future of our people, who are advancing with the ever-victorious leadership of the KWP, upholding the banner of the great chuche idea, will be promising. The road of our revolution will be more victorious. [applause]

Let all of us more vigorously struggle to complete the revolutionary cause of chuche by rallying around the party Central Committee headed by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. [applause]

Long live Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and people! [applause and shouts] Long live the KWP, the organizer and encourager of all victories of the Korean people! [applause and shouts]

[Report on speech by Yi Chong-ok, member of the Presideum of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee and premier of the DPRK Administration Council, at the Kim Il-song Stadium inaugural in Pyongyang on 11 April -- with portions recorded]

[Text][Begin Yi Chong-ok recording] Comrades, under magnificent circumstances in which all the people throughout the country greet the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as the greatest national holiday with a feeling of endless reverence and admiration and ardent loyalty, we hold a grand ceremony to mark completion of Kim Il-song Stadium. Kim Il-song Stadium, situated at the foot of historic Moranbong Hill, is a historic place which reminds us of the great leader's historic revolutionary activities. Thirty-seven years ago, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, triumphantly returning home after achieving the liberation of the fatherland by victoriously organizing and leading the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, had his first meeting with the people at the foot of the Moranbong Hill and made a historic speech, indicating the road to be followed by the liberated Korean people.

Our people unanimously and ardently desired to name the stadium after the respected and beloved leader, picturing the noble image of the great leader who made a triumphant speech before the Korean people who greeted the liberation. Today's ceremony marking the completion of Kim Il-song Stadium is a historic event brilliantly glorifying the function of celebrating the 70th birthday of the respected leader. This ceremony will be recalled forever in the history of the fatherland along with the immediate history of the great leader's triumphant return home. [applause]

Entrusted by the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee, I warmly congratulate all party shock brigade members, construction workers and volunteers throughout the country in performing proud feats by enthusiastically participating in the construction of Kim Il-song Stadium. [applause]

Comrades: at this hour when we are proudly proclaiming the completion of the Kim Il-song Stadium, named after the respected and beloved leader, to the whole world, we recall the great leader's immortal revolutionary achievements in the historic plaza of triumph.

In the dark period when the dark cloud of Japanese rule hung low over the country and the fate of the country and the nation was at stake, the great leader, who had launched onto the road of revolution by shouldering the destiny of the fatherland and nation, surmounted difficulties and hardships with the banner of the chuche idea held aloft and led the 20-year anti-Japanese armed struggle to victory, smashing the Japanese aggressors and achieving the historic cause of the fatherland's liberation.

Opening up before our liberated people was a resplendent future for a new Korea. At that historic moment, our people waited for the glorious day when they would hold in high esteem the respected and beloved leader -- the lodestar of liberation and sun of the nation -- and greet the leader. Our people greeted the meaningful historic day here at the Plaza of Triumph on 14 October 1945. [applause]

The great leader, who had made a triumphal return with a new spring of liberation, has waged a struggle for constructing a new, rich and dignified fatherland, founded our party -- the general staff of revolution, and exchanged the first greetings of triumph with our people.

Moranbong Public Stadium, the site of the Pyongyang city mass rally welcoming the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's triumphal return, was filled with people who had rushed there that morning. The stadium was seething with the people's endless happiness and pleasure of seeing the long-dreamed-of general and was filled with their boundless admiration and warmth for him.

At 1 p.m. that day, the great leader came on stage. Those who participated in the mass rally, tens of hundreds of thousands in number, were so emotionally stirred as to shout: "Long live Gen Kim Il-song." Acknowledging the enthusiastic welcome accorded him, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song made a historic speech under the title: "Every Effort for Construction of a New Democratic Korea."

In the speech, the great leader noted our people's proud achievement of national liberation after crushing the wicked Japanese imperialist aggressors, set forth the historic task to build a new Korea in the liberated fatherland and called on the nation to unite and unanimously turn out to build a new democratic Korea. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: It is time for the Korean people to unite in order to build a new democratic Korea. People from every social spectrum should turn out to build a new Korea, displaying a patriotic enthusiasm. People should make active contributions to building the state by making available their strength if they have it, knowledge if they have it and money if they have it. The people who love the country, the nation and democracy should unite and build a democratic, independent and sovereign state.

No sooner had the great leader concluded the historic speech than a storm of applause arose again at the rally site. The storm of applause echoed around the fatherland. The storm of applause that arose at the rally site, shaking the sunny land of 3,000 li, was a song of thanks from the 30 million compatriots dedicated to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation, who regained the lost fatherland and opened a bright road for national resurrection. It was the sound of the boundless loyalty of our people, who were determined to uphold the leader from generation to generation and erect a new, prosperous democratic Korea.

Since he illuminated the path for construction of a new fatherland, the great leader has been leading our people on the single road of victory and glory. [applause]

Under the wise leadership of the great leader, our country, which had been ignored, has now become a socialist power which enjoys independence, self-reliance and self-defending capabilities and which the world's people envy. It is the chuche fatherland, a model socialist country which radiates pride throughout the world. Our people, who had been maltreated and disdained, have now become the most dignified and proud people in the world. [applause] [end Yi Chong-ok recording]

He continued to say: Thanks to the glorious party center, the might of chuche Korea and the honor and dignity of our nation radiate brighter rays upon the world. Based on the formulation of the great leader's revolutionary ideology, the glorious party center elucidated the program of remodelling society on the chuche idea. With outstanding and tested leadership, he has unfurled on this land an era of national prosperity and is leading our party and people on the single road of struggle for the ultimate victory of the revolutionary cause of chuche.

Reflecting the boundless admiration and burning loyalty of the builders engaged in the stadium expansion project and the people participating in the rally, he extended the greatest honor and warmest thanks to the great leader of our party and people Comrade Kim-Il-song -- who embarked on the road of revolution at an early age, created the immortal chuche idea, brilliantly carried out the revolution and construction, liberated the fatherland and erected in this land a boundlessly prosperous socialist power and has provided our people with today's glory and happiness -- and to the glorious party center.

Noting that the historic Moranbong stadium has now taken on a new look, taking the respected leader's esettmed name, thanks to our party's noble will to add luster to the immortal revolutionary relics and achievements of the great leader for many generations to come and great solicitude to provide our people with a great palace of sports culture and thanks to the people's burning loyalty, he continued to say:

[Begin Yi Chong-ok recording] Members of party member shock-brigade teams and constructors who are boundlessly loyal to the party and the leader vigorously carried out the stadium expansion project, which began 21 October last year soon after Pyongyang youths finished the mass gymnastics games celebrating the Seventh Congress of the LSWYK.

The project of rebuilding and expanding the stadium required high-level, sophisticated technology. Even in light of the construction speed of our era, which people call miraculous, this project was a difficult and vast one which required 1 year and 6 months to complete. However, party shock-brigade members and construction workers, who had always been loyal to the call of the party and the leader, rose as one in the construction work with an ardent resolve to complete the reconstruction and expansion of the stadium within the winter season. Although the project faced difficulties from the first step, party shock-brigade members and construction workers made a breakthrough 10 days after they had started construction by breaking 1,500 cubic meters of structure and rock and by digging several cubic meters of soil. The loyalty shown by party shock brigade members and construction workers was hotter than fire. They ran, carrying one gravel container atop another, not even feeling short of breath. Braving the extreme cold of minus 20 degrees centigrade, they ran, carrying loads and ascending and descending the 50-60-degree-angle steep steps which were difficult to climb even without a load.

Vehicle and excavator operators speedily transported construction materials. At the initial ground-digging site, college students performed heroic exploits by plugging broken water-pipes with their breasts in the cold weather.

Party shock-brigade members and construction workers invented and used a new heating method to prevent mortar from freezing by building shelters on steps at the stadium and by installing boilers and inclined stoves, thus improving the quality of the construction.

There was no difficulty that party shock-brigade members and construction workers could not overcome. The demand of the party was a work assignment which they accomplished without fail. Facing difficulties to lower the grand viewing platform, they adopted a bold and innovative method of lowering it without removing steel beams by utilizing the wisdom of the masses. Thus, they performed proud miracles in completing this difficult work not in 40 days but in 4 days.

During the reconstruction and expansion period, central and local party organizations actively assisted supply work for the project. Correctly understanding the significance of the project, plants and enterprises preferentially supplied materials, equipment and parts needed for the construction. All the people throughout the country, including Pyongyang citizens, sincerely offered aid.

Indeed, in a short time of less than 5 months, the Kim Il-song Stadium has completely changed its appearance into a modern, leading and topnotch stadium in size, architectual style and furnishings. This is due to the ardent loyalty shown by party shock-brigade members and construction workers. The new stadium is taller than the previous one. Its seating capacity has been nearly doubled. The seats of the stadium on 44 steps are so designed that fabricated, linking chairs and individual chairs will be placed on these seats. If individual chairs are used, the stadium will accommodate 55,000 spectators. If linking chairs are used, it will accommodate 100,000 spectators. A nearly 30 meter-wide canapy will be put up over the seats. Thus, the stadium has assumed a perfect appearance as a modern stadium.

The grand viewing platform demonstrates the special nature of the stadium. The grand viewing platform is so built that, with the rostrum as a center, the front of the stadium is a half-moon shape with a lighting device used on the rostrum to produce a harmonious effect with the canopy. There are rooms on the roof of the stadium to facilitate the carriage of materials for the decoration of the flanks of the grand viewing platform. Thus, a large, broad picture will be shown on the back of the grand viewing platform with high relief, resembling that shown on the stage in a theater.

The playing ground of the stadium has been lowered 1.5 meters from the bottom of the seats so that spectators can have a good view of collective gymnastics and other sports games on the field. The playing field is covered with artificial turf.

The stadium is furnished with modern technical equipment and cultural, welfare and utility facilities. There are 32 exits in the stadium to enable spectators to leave in 8 minutes. The Kim Il-song Statium is furnished with a large, modern playing field -- to provide a place for major party and government functions, grand collective gymnastics and other sports games -- along with modern equipment.

Facing the Arch of Triumph, with the Moranbong Hill at the back and viewing the Ulmil and the Choesung platforms -- the lasting witnesses of the great leader's historic speech at the time of his triumphant homecoming, the Kim Il-song Stadium increases the graceful charm of the surrounding area, which recalls historic revolutionary activities.

By performing miracles and enacting an innovation in rebuilding the stadium, we have vigorously demonstrated to the world the invincible might of our people firmly united around the party and leader. [applause]

Comrades, the Kim Il-song Stadium, which has been enlarged and modernized, is a place where major political and cultural functions of the party and the government and sports festivals and games will be held. It will play a significant role in our people's political and cultural life.

The grand collective gymnastics which will be shown at great festivals and which will display various rhythmic physical movements in harmony with the colorful and changing background will vigorously demonstrate the invincible might of our people firmly united around the great leader with a single ideology and will be displaying our people's wisdom, courage, strong organizational trait, spirit of discipline and collectivism. [applause]

Various international and domestic sports games will be held at the stadium, thus raising the sports and cultural level of the workers and enabling our people to enjoy a cultural life. Indeed, it is great honor and pride for our people to possess the Kim Il-song Stadium -- a great, modern and leading sanctuary of sports and culture. [applause]

We should be proud of being members of the nation, have the chuche-type revolutionary outlook of the world by closely studying and mastering the history of the glorious, shining revolutionary activities and immortal revolutionary achievements of the respected and beloved leader and continuously and vigorously struggle to achieve the final victory of the chuche revolutionary cause by firmly uniting around the great leader. [applause]

Holding aloft the instructions put forth by the great leader at the sixth party congress and in his new year message, all party members and workers should enact a new upsurge on all fronts of socialist construction by vigorously carrying out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural.

By correctly maintaining and efficiently operating the Kim Il-song Stadium, which recalls the great leader's revolutionary activities, we should glorify it forever along with the great leader's historic, triumphant homecoming, thus more fully demonstrating the appearance of the stadium as a grand sanctuary of modern sports and culture and making the daily life of our people more civilized.

Let us all firmly unite around the party Central Committee led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and more tenaciously struggle to achieve the final victory of the chuche revolutionary cause. [applause]

Long live Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and people! [applause, shouts]

Long live the glorious KWP, the organizer and encourager of all victories of the Korean people! [applause, shouts]

MINISTER PREDICTS IMPROVED TIES WITH PRC, USSR

[Text] Minister of National Unification Son Chae-sik yesterday predicted the improvement of relations with mainland China and the Soviet Union will be made during the 1980's through exchanges of visits and opening of trade. Such an improvement of ties between Seoul and those countries, he said, will weaken Pyongyang's attempt to communize the whole Korean Peninsula by force. This would possibly serve as an occasion to develop the South-North relations in a peaceful way, the minister said.

Speaking on the "role of university students and the peaceful reunification" at Konkuk University, Minister Son forecast the death of North Korea's Kim Il-song in the future will surely bring about a collective ruling system in the North to be based on pragmatic and realistic approach rather than ideological orientation. In that case, the Seoul-Pyongyang relations would be improved, Minister Son predicted.

Son asked university students to grasp overall situations and pictures in tackling communism including its absurdity and Pyongyang's false unification policy. He warned against North Korea's scheme to disturb the stability of the republic by fanning anti-government activities in the South.

PROGRESS SEEN IN MILITARY DIPLOMACY WITH NONALIGNED

[Text] Minister of National Defense Chu Yong-pok told the National Assembly yesterday the government is making progress in what he called military diplomacy toward Third World countries.

In testimony before the Defense Committee, Chu said technological standards of the nation's defense industry have been rated as "excellent" by a U.S. technological survey team. The nation is capable of repairing fighter bombers damaged in war and the capability will be expanded pending a presentation by the United States of maintenance equipment, he said. The minister briefed the committee on the results of the recent Korea-U.S. annual Security Consultative Meeting and the Team Spirit 1982, a joint Korea-U.S. military exercise. In reply to lawmakers' queries, he said it is true that the nation has started producing fighter-bombers as a result of a steady accumulation of technological knowhows, he said.

The high working-level security meeting which was agreed upon during the consultative meeting is designed to discuss the effective operation of the consultative meeting and ensure a successful execution of agreement, he said. The United States will provide Korea with foreign military sales loans including low-interest direct loans beginning in 1984, he said. The nation is conducting various military exercises superior in scale and quality to those of North Korea, and the Team Spirit military exercise will be improved to maintain a military edge over North Korea, he said.

Touching on the situation facing the Korean Peninsula, he said North Korea is feared to step up its military provocations against the Republic of Korea, if Communist China and the Soviet Union should improve their relations. The nation should establish a self-reliant defense system and strengthen the Korea-U.S. allied defense mechanism to prepare against a possibility of North Korean military provocations, he said.

GATT OFFICIAL ADVISES ROK TO OPEN DOMESTIC MARKET

[Text] Seoul, April 14 (YONHAP) -- M.G. Mathur, visiting deputy director general of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), advised South Korea Wednesday to shift its industrial structure toward the more capital and technology intensive industries and to open up its markets. At a lecture-meeting arranged by the Korean Traders Association, Mathur said the increasing uncertainty in international trade could be a matter of "particular concern" to a country like Korea in the face of rising labor costs and protectionist steps affecting labor intensive exports. Mathur said Korea has already demonstrated its export power. An equally important source of power, which is sometimes overlooked, derives from the ability to open domestic markets to foreign exports, he said.

Mathur said a steady and fast expansion of export volume would be "indispensible" for Korea. He also said Korea should continue to have access to foreign capital markets and attract the capital needed for investment and paying off debts.

BALANCE OF PAYMENTS IMPROVES IN FIRST QUARTER

[Text] The nation's balance of payments has improved quite a bit during the first three months of this year thanks to the reduced current account deficit, Economic Planning Board (EPB) sources said yesterday. The current account deficit as of the end of March shrank to $441 million, down $915 million from $1,356 million posted during the same period last year. Revenues from tourism, insurance and shipping, as well as trade from the current account. Inflow of long and short-term foreign capitals and inducement of short-term offshore credits through commercial banking institutions, however, remained far from impressive during the cited period, the sources said. The net increase of long-term foreign capital during the cited period amounted to a mere $220 million as compared to $964 million registered during that period last year while the inflow of short-term capital showed a negative increase rate of $10 million during the January-March period as compared to the $622 million net increase registered a year earlier, according to EPB.

Despite the poor performance of capitals and loans inducement, the country's balance of payments has improved impressively during the first quarter of the year owing to the reduced imports and stabilized prices of raw materials. The nation's merchandise exports as of the end of March amounted to $4,823 million, an increase of 19.5 percent from the same period last year while imports grew by 18.8 percent to generate $410 million in trade deficit. The comparable figure during the first quarter of last year stood at $1,059 million. The nation also saw a dwindling deficit on invisibles, revenues from tourism, shipping, banking and government transactions, during the cited period. The negative figure in this sector during the three month period came to $136 million down from last year's $383 million, according to EPB statistics.

The foreign exchange holdings came to $6,249 million as of the end of March, down 642 million from the end of last year, the statistics show.

USSR PROTEST OF U.S. CBW ACCUSATIONS SUPPORTED

OW150552 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1712 GMT 14 Apr 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 14 Apr (MONTSAME) -- The Mongolian public wholly supports the Soviet Government's note which resolutely condemns another U.S. slanderous campaign alleging that the Soviet Union has a bearing on the use of chemical weaponry in Laos, Kampuchea and Afghanistan, the newspaper ULAANBAATARYN MEDEE (NEWS FROM ULAANBAATAR) writes.

The world public, especially peoples of Asia, know well that precisely the United States, grossly violating the UN charter and other international norms, launched a chemical war against the peoples of Indochina, the after-effects of which still linger on. Precisely the United States go on arming the Afghan counterrevolutionaries with chemical weaponry, and precisely the U.S. President has donated 60 billion dollars to manufacture chemical weaponry.

Back in 1925 the Soviet Union initiated an agreement banning the use of chemical and bacteriological weaponry. The U.S., the newspaper stresses, grudgingly joined in the agreement half a century after it was signed in Geneva. And the attempts of the U.S. to slander the consistent and principled external policy of the Soviet Union in order to whitewash its own dirty tricks against peace and security are not to deceive the world's public opinion, the ULAANBAATARYN MEDEE concludes.

KAMPUCHEA Editorial

[Text] Phnom Penh, 13 Apr (SPK) -- The journal KAMPUCHEA dedicated the editorial of its latest issue to the festival of Chaul Chhnam Thmei, the traditional New Year of the Kampuchean people, which starts today.

Throughout the country, the journal says, this new year is welcomed in the joy of the return of a new and stable life under the regime of the PRK. No one will ever forget that 8 years ago, in the same period, the Kampuchean society sank in the abyss of genocide of Democratic Kampuchea following the misfortunes sowed for 5 years by the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys. Violence and vengeance were rife; families were separated; blood and tears flowed; everyone lived in fear, misery and famine; the valets of Beijing also forbade religion, abolished education, knocked down schools and monasteries and so on. There was no longer any Chaul Chhnam Thmei.

The central organ of the front went on to say: From now on, this sinister society is gone. A glorious life imbued with hope has been born again throughout the country. The Kampuchean people live in freedom and democracy, confident in the new regime.

The journal recalled the progress in all fields achieved by the new Kampuchea in the wake of the overturn of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime and paid homage to the memory of the patriots who fell for national liberation and, in particular, the Vietnamese combatants who gave their lives for the liberation of Kampuchea and the defense of its independence. The journal calls on the people to redouble their revolutionary vigilance to defend the fatherland, security and social order and to preserve the joy of the people, joy that our enemies, who seek to impede the advance of our revolution, cannot bear.

CHAN VEN AT KOMPONG THOM FRONT COMMITTEE MEETING

[Text] Phnom Penh, 6 Apr (SPK) -- The front committee of Kompong Thom Province, 150 km north of Phnom Penh, recently reviewed its successes during the past 3 years and set tasks for the future. Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State and vice chairman of the KUFNCD National Council, and Khieu Kanharith, deputy secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council, attended this meeting, which rallied members of the front committee, monks, cadres and delegates of mass organizations in Kompong Thom.

Over the past 3 years, thanks to the just leadership of the KPRP, to the efforts exerted by the population and to the devoted assistance of Vietnam, Kompong Thom Province has made considerable progress in all fields. In the first year of liberation, 1979, it planted 60,000 hectares of rice, and in the following year, despite drought and floods, it planted 89,500 hectares of rice and more than 9,270 hectares of subsidiary crops. Up to 25 March 1982 the population sold 14,300 tons of paddy, or 3,800 tons above plan, to the state. The transport, education and health services made brilliant progress. Fisheries, handicrafts, forestry and animal husbandry are making great strides.

On this occasion, Chan Ven recalled the important role of the front in the defense and reconstruction of the country and affirmed that without national union and international solidarity, particularly solidarity with Vietnam and Laos, we cannot complete any revolutionary task.

LABOR COOPERATION AGREEMENT WITH USSR PRAISED

BK150510 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 12 Apr 82

[Text] The agreement on labor cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union signed a year ago has effectively contributed to Vietnam's construction. In an article on the significance and results of labor cooperation between the two countries, Minister of Labor Dao Thien Thi wrote: The Soviet Union has helped Vietnam train scientists, technicians, economic managers with university and higher qualifications and skilled workers specializing in various economic and technical branches.

The Soviet Union has sent tens of thousands of experts to Vietnam to help build economic, cultural, scientific and technical establishments and train and improve the skills of Vietnamese cadres and workers. The Soviet Union has also provided accommodation and education at Soviet universities, colleges, institutes and vocational schools to hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese students, postgraduates, researchers and workers.

The Soviet Union and Vietnam have over the past years strengthened their cooperation in a new form -- bilateral labor cooperation. The Soviet Union has undertaken to help Vietnam train and improve the professional skills of Vietnamese workers at Soviet factories in such branches and jobs as decided by the Vietnamese side with a view to accelerating Vietnam's socialist industrialization.

Under the study and work system, Vietnamese workers will in a period of 5 to 6 years receive vocational training and improve their professional skills as well as their general knowledge and score for themselves the industrial working style. In the process, they will also contribute to communist construction in the Soviet Union.

Vietnamese workers enjoy the same rights and interests as their Soviet colleagues in the same job with regard to wages, social welfare and insurance and other rights. The Soviet offices and factories employing Vietnamese apprentices will ensure their material, cultural and spiritual welfare such as accommodation, clothing and other facilities, and create a necessary sentimental environment for them to work, study and live as comfortably as at home.

This cooperation will help improve the professional skills of a large number of Vietnamese workers and broaden the range of trades and professions as required by Vietnam's socialist construction.

In the first year of implementing this cooperation agreement, several thousands of young Vietnamese -- male and female -- were signed on as apprentices in thousands of jobs at Soviet factories. Wherever they learned and worked at engineering factories, coal mines, chemical plants, textile factories and so on in the provinces of Astrakhan, Volgograd, Rostov and Zhdanov and others, they had received their warm and fraternal welcome.

This year the Soviet Union and Vietnam will further strengthen their labor cooperation with increases in the numbers of jobs and learners. A number of Soviet factories will experiment on the massive training of technicians and workers for a complete factory.

ACTION TO REALIZE CONGRESS RESOLUTIONS URGED

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN editorial: "Stir Up a Vigorous and Broad Movement for Revolutionary Action" -- date not given]

[Text] Translating the resolutions of the party congress into realities is a process that requires persevering struggle and a great effort by our entire party, army and people. Only by acquiring a profound understanding of the congress resolutions, effecting a drastic change in the organiztion of their implementation and, at the same time, launching by all means a vigorous, broad and steady mass movement for revolutionary action can we successfully implement the historic resolutions adopted by the congress.

Revolution is a cause of the masses. All revolutionary tasks can be successfully carried out by a mass movement for revolutionary action. The party Central Committee political report at the fifth party congress clearly pointed out: A revolutionary movement is possible only when the working people really exercise their collective mastery and vice versa.

By exercising its leadership, the party must initiate by all means a truly broad and vigorous mass movement. The development of the Vietnamese revolution has shown that our people have extremely great creative talents and revolutionary potentials. The successful mobilization of these creative talents and potentials would create an enormous strength for the entire nation to overcome any difficulty and trial and successfully to fulfill the two strategic tasks of building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland.

Bringing into play the working people's collective mastery and promoting a broad socialist emulation movement in all establishments, all units, all localities and all sectors will create a new spirit and new strength to push back and curb the current manifestations of negativism and vigorously to develop the positive elements successfully to carry out all tasks.

To make a vigorous mass movement for revolutionary action possible, all party committee echelons, mass organizations and state organs should work in close coordination, maintain direct contact with the basic units and go deeply into the masses to strengthen their socialist consciousness and patriotism, thereby enabling them to acquire a thorough understanding of the country's revolutionary situation and their immediate tasks and constantly enhancing their sense of responsibility in the task of building and defending the fatherland.

Educational work must be carried out simultaneously with the organization of practical activities. Concrete forms of activities and measures and suitable policies must be promptly adopted. The three interests must be harmoniously associated in the production establishments. A seething revolutionary spirit must be promoted in labor and in the performance of official duties. At the same time, importance must be attached to improving the masses' material and spiritual life. The forces of party and youth union members must be sent out to lead the mass movements. New elements should be quickly discovered and promoted. Progressive experiences should be promptly applied. Front rank models should be constantly multiplied.

To achieve good results, the movement for revolutionary action must be a socialist evaluation movement aimed at attaining well-defined objectives and meeting specific demands. These objectives and demands must be clearly reflected in the practical norms and work programs assigned to each person and each organization according to their conditions, their duties, their plans and their functions. Each person must act in close coordination with his organization in the movement for revolutionary action. Each movement for revolutionary action must be aimed at achieving unity of action between the individual and the organization, thereby promoting high efficiency.

The mass movement for revolutionary action should not stop at its initial spirited stage. It should develop constantly in depth and in the quality of its practical activities. Only in this way can it achieve steadiness and resolve the problems posed by life. We should overcome the maladies of ostentatiousness and formalism, which only waste money, prevent the achievement of practical results and jeopardize the movement itself.

Recently, especially during the more than 6 months since the emulation movement to score achievements in honor of the fifth party congress was launched, new elements and experiences have appeared in a number of localities, units and establishments that are being emulated and studied in many places. These new elements and nuclei of emulation should be promoted and developed nationwide.

By launching a vigorous movement for revolutionary action, our people's armed forces in all parts of the country or currently performing their international duties are determined to ceaselessly sharpen their vigilance, stand ready to fight and fight victoriously to smash all enemy schemes to wage a war of destruction. Working in coordination with the people's public security forces, they are determined to firmly maintain political security and public order and safety.

It is necessary for all units to make an all-out effort to improve the quality of military training. They must scrupulously implement the slogan that the entire army act in accordance wtih the regulations, satisfactorily maintain its weapons and equipment, perform its economic-building tasks well, actively increase production and strictly practice thrift.

Competition among various units to achieve emulation targets should be closely coordinated with their efforts to fulfill their tasks. Such competition should not be considered to be a mere propaganda stunt. All commitments made by the units involved in such competition should be regarded as obligations which must be fully discharged. Each task and each stage of the emulation movement must be fulfilled completely. The results of such emulative activities must be checked and announced. The units involved should exchange their experience so as satisfactorily to fulfill the five objectives of the campaign to develop the fine character and to increase the fighting strength of the people's armed forces.

The present emulation movement for revolutionary action among our people's armed forces must be aimed at effecting a drastic and marked change for the better in all echelons by all means. Especially in the basic units, the movement must help them quickly overcome their weaknesses and achieve a high quality in all respects.

All programs of action of organs and units and of both the front and the rear must be aimed at achieving the highest objective of building our army into a revolutionary people's army that has an iron will to achieve victory, strict discipline and impeccable conduct, that is increasingly standardized and modernized, that maintains an ever higher level of combat readiness, and that is always capable of fulfilling any task entrusted by the fatherland, as stated in the party Central Committee political report presented at the fifth party congress.

NEED TO BUILD UP COASTAL DEFENSE FORCES STRESSED

[Editorial: "Building Militia and Self-Defense Forces in the Coastal Areas"]

[Text] Our country's coastline is long. Our territorial seas are large and have a very important position in the political, economic, security and national defense fields. Our country's sea areas are contiguous with those of China, and the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists are daily and hourly sending armed vessels to encroach on our territorial seas, conduct spying activities, hinder the normal work of our fishermen and threaten our national security. On the other hand, they are also making intensive preparations for invading our country from the sea in conjuction with their inland attacks when conditions permit.

Our sea areas are dotted with numerous river mouths and ports, and the imperialists and international reactionaries are trying to take advantage of our off-guard moments to send in spies and commandos to establish contact with local reactionary elements in an attempt to carry out their dark schemes such as causing unrest or enticing bad elements illegally to go abroad by sea.

Therefore, in our effort to strengthen national defense and defend the fatherland's security, building firm and strong militia and self-defense forces in the costal areas is one of our fundamental and regular tasks and, at the same time, a pressing requirement. On by strengthening the coastal militia and self-defense forces everywhere -- from hamlets, villages, organs and enterprises along the coast and on offshore islands to fishing fleets and flottilas, sea transport units and river months -- can we, together with our forces, create a combined strength with which to defeat the current war of multifaceted sabotage of the Beijing expansionists and any war of aggression that they may launch against us.

The militia and self-defense forces in coastal districts, and especially in the villages and establishments along the coast and on offshore islands, must be well organized and regularly strengthened. They must remain politically stable, vigilant and highly ready for combat in order to detect and promptly foil all of the activities conducted by the enemy in violation of our territorial seas and to capture all the enemy scouts, commandos and spies trying to infiltrate our country and the illegal sea emigrants.

The most important task is to launch a deep and broad propaganda and education campaign in all establishments and detachments to make every member of the land or sea militia and self-defense forces fully aware of the important position of the sea areas and the heavy responsibility of the coastal militia and self-defense forces in defending the fatherland and maintaining security in the coastal areas. The coastal militia and self-defense forces must be trained in both sea and shore combat techniques and tactics and must be thoroughly conversant with the various regulations, laws and procedures for coordinated action in dealing with various cases involving violations of our sovereignty in the sea areas.

Some of the villages along the coast or on offshore islands are specialized solely in fishing while others also engaged in farming, producing salt, planting industrial crops, small industry and handicrafts and so forth. Therefore, it is necessary to consider shore and sea combat tasks along with the requirements for production organization in organizing each militia and self-defense detachment to ensure both production and combat readiness.

Villages having fishing and transport forces must organize and equip their militia and self-defense personnel in a way suitable for their production by considering whether they engage in production with mechanical equipment or with manual labor; whether they oeprate in coastal waters or far from shore, whether their fishing trips are long or or short and so on.

To overcome the weakness resulting from the fact that the coastal militia and self-defense forces often operate at great distances from their command center, the utmost attention must be given to building and consolidating communications and liaison cells and watch towers and ensuring smooth and constant communications between distant sea areas and coastal areas, between sea and shore and islands and between the militia and self-defense forces with the other armed forces. In this way mutual assistance will be readily available for both production and combat purposes.

The self-defense units belonging to state-owned fleets of fishing trawlers and transports constitute an important force operating on the sea. They must be built and satisfactorily consolidated into naval units and fleets to join the navy in serving as a core force for carrying out production and providing protection for production activities on the sea.

Standing on the forefront to guard the fatherland's seas day and night, the leading cadres of the militia and self-defense forces always play a decisive role in enhancing the fighting strength of every detachment, naval unit and naval fleet. Therefore, this contingent of cadres must be made firm and strong and well organized both quantitatively and qualitatively, and we must avoid upsetting its organization by introducing major changes unless it is really necessary to do so.

Attention must be given to assigning newly inducted youths from villages along the coast and on offshore islands to the navy so that after fulfilling their military obligation, these youths, upon returning to their localities, will serve as the nueclei of coastal militia and self-defense forces units. They are also an inexhaustible source of manpower for reinforcing the contingent of militia and self-defense forces cadres in this important theater of operation.

Through the activities conducted by the militia and self-defense forces of the localities to defend our sovereignty and maintain security in the sea areas, all establishments must intensify guidance, draw upon experience and promptly formulate plans for consolidating and developing the coastal militia and self-defense forces so as to make them firmer and stronger with each passing day.

BORDER DEFENSE FORCE ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED

[Summary] The border defense force command recently celebrated its 23d anniversary. Attending the ceremony were large numbers of cadres and combatants from various units, agencies and schools. Addressing the ceremony, the commanding general of the force pointed out the achievements of the force in the past 23 years. On behalf of the force's cadres and combatants, he pledged to the party Central Committee to develop the force even more steadily through training and to defend the country's border firmly. The force launched an emulation drive to "develop its traditions and score outstanding achievements in combat and duty performance" for the period 3-26 March.

"Border defense units that are fulfilling international obligations have upheld their sense of internal and international solidarity and have coordinated closely with friendly troops and the local authorities to mop up and eliminate many enemy remnant troops hiding in the forests. At the same time they have actively propagated and stimulated the people to build a new lifestyle, helped the local people to accelerate production and stabilize their daily lives and won the confidence of and respect from the people in areas where they have been stationed.

"Various units in the northern border areas have coordinated with militia, public security force and army units to strengthen patrols along coastal and border areas and closely follow up the enemy's schemes and acts.

"Various border defense posts -- such as the K, T, H, P and M posts -- have together with friendly units promptly eliminated many Chinese scouts who intruded into Vietnamese territory. Officers and combatants of these units have also overcome numerous difficulties in weather conditions and rugged terrain while building many fortifications, communications trenches, observation posts and dozens of combat-supporting projects as 'projects greeting the VCP congress.'

"Various stations, posts and units that are performing their duties at the southwestern border, in coastal areas and on islands have actively coordinated with naval, public security, militia and self-defense forces in patrolling the border areas and closely controlling vessels and boats sailing in and out of river mouths, seaports and bays. They have discovered many violations of border defense regulations and illegal border crossings. They have captured and detained a number of foreign boats violating Vietnamese territorial waters for fishing and collecting intelligence."

Various units of the border defense force have also coordinated with district and hamlet cadres to organize study courses for the people of various nationalities to enable them to understand the party's lines and policies and to enhance their vigilant spirit in order to foil the psychological warfar and espionage activities and the multifaceted war of sabotage being waged by the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists against Vietnam. They also helped the local authorities in tasks concerning party building and the strengthening of militia and self-defense forces, cooperatives and production collectives, thereby contributing to maintaining political security and social order and safety at the border areas.

SON LA HOLDS CONFERENCE ON NATIONALITY POLICY

[Text] The Party Committee and People's Committee of Son La Province recently held a province-wide conference of representatives of Hmong tribesmen to review the implementation of the party policy on nationalities and to discuss the orientations for national construction and defense in the areas inhabited by the Hmong.

Attending the conference were Lo Van Hac, vice chairman of the Nationalities Council and deputy head of the party Central Committee Nationalities Department; Cam Ngoan, vice chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the provincial people's committee; and Hoang No, secretary of the Party Committee of Son La Province.

The conference heard a report by a representative of the provincial people's committee on the outstanding achievements recorded last year by the armed forces and people throughout the country in socialist construction and national defense, to which great contributions were made by the Hmong people.

Over the past 5 years the Hmong people in Son La have closely united with people of other fraternal ethnic groups, joined the collective work units of cooperatives and work-exchange teams and set up a total of 12 permanent settlements. Many villages now have fairly large areas for planting wet rice. In recent years almost all of the Hmong people have gradually been able to meet their own grain and food needs. In a number of cooperatives -- such as the Pa Che and Bo Ngang (Moc Chau), Lao Kho (Yen Chau), Pu Xeo (Song Ma), Huoi Ren and Phieng Ban (Thuan Chau) and others -- the life of the Hmong people has taken a complete turn for the better. Apart from meeting their own needs, many cooperatives and families of cooperative members have annually contributed hundreds of tons of corn, rice, potatos and manioc to the state. The spiritual life of the Hmong people in the settlements has been markedly improved. Twelve out of the 18 Hmong villages now have dispensaries and schools and 2 have electricity.

Upon reaching school age, Hmong children are now admitted to schools as are those of other fraternal nationalities. Many persons of Hmong descent are now holding key positions in state organs and army units.

The conference discussed the orientation for production, construction and national defense and called for the development of settlements, preserving up-river forests, zoning lands for the cultivation of medicinal plants, breeding rare animals, training cadres and promoting a civilized lifestyle.

PROGRESS OF 'SETTLED FARMING' MOVEMENT NOTED

BK141234 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 5 Mar 82, pp 1, 4

[Text] Despite numerous difficulties involving materials, capital and food during 1981, 150 mountainous districts in 22 provinces throughout the country have launched a movement for settled farming and settled life in accordance with the motto "the state and the people work together."

Over the past year 1.6 million people of various nationalities who used to live a nomadic life have come down to the low-lying areas to build new hamlets and villages for settled farming and a settled life.

Instead of waiting for the state to supply capital, materials and foodstuffs various provinces -- such as Thanh Hoa, Ha Son Binh, Binh Tri Thien, Quang Nam-Da Nang and Lam Dong -- have striven to overcome numerous difficulties and actively launched the movement for settled farming and settled life by integrating the local people's creativity with all local assets. Quang Ninh, Ha Son Binh, Nghe Tinh and Dac Lac Provinces have launched various emulation drives to fulfill their plans. Many localities have launched movements beneficial to settled farming and a settled life. These include wet-rice planting in Bac Ha, Hoang Lien Son Province; building material bases for settled farming and a settled life in Lam Dong Province; combining tasks concerning settled farming and a settled life with those of building fighting fortresses in the northern border provinces; and combining land reclamation tasks with afforestation, industrial crop planting and water conservancy in Nghe Tinh and Gia Lai-Cong Tum Provinces.

In 1981 various settled farming and settled life areas reclaimed 5,000 hectares of virgin land and planted rice on 2,326 hectares. Lam Dong, Binh Tri Thien, Thanh Hoa and Ha Son Binh Provinces made fine progress in land reclamation and planted grain and food crops on most of their reclaimed land. The settled farming and settled life areas in these provinces built 136 small water conservancy projects, which can supply water to thousands of hectares of wet-rice ricefields and subsidiary crops. They repaired 595 kilometers of roads and built 11 drawbridges, including the 100-meter Nam Dong bridge in Binh Tri Thien Province. This bridge cost more than 1 million dong, of which the state provided 310,000 dong and the rest was donated by the people in various new economic zones and settled farming and settled life areas. They also built 140 public welfare establishments -- including 75 schools, 75 public health posts and maternity wards, 14 nurseries -- and dug 525 ponds and wells.

Along with reclaiming land for cultivation and building public welfare establishments, various settled farming and settled life areas in 1981 also planted 685 hectares of industrial crops and more than 3,000 hectares of forest and built hamlets and villages for the resettlement of 6,650 families, mostly in the southern provinces.

All these provinces will continue to accelerate the building of material bases to stabilize the people's life in the settled farming and settled life areas, focusing particularly on land reclamation, expanding ricefields, developing water conservancy projects and combining grain planting with the planting of industrial crops, afforestation and forest protection. They will encourage the people to participate in settled farming and settled life movements in their localities and will consolidate cooperatives and production collectives in order to enable the people to help one another in production and in building their daily life. They will continue to uphold the motto "The state and the people work together," pay attention to the investment of capital and materials in various key areas such as the border areas and the Tay Nguyen and western areas of the former fifth zone.

HOANG VAN KIEU SPEECH TO FIFTH VCP CONGRESS

OW151235 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 14 Apr 82

[Excerpts of speech by Hoang Van Kieu, chairman of the State Nationalities Commission, at the Fifth VCP Congress -- recorded; date not given]

[Text] Our party's line and policies toward nationalities have always been consistent and correct and have developed through the various stages of revolution. Continuing to implement the party's nationality policy reflected in the fourth party congress resolution, we must, in the new situation, simultaneously carry out two strategic tasks, to successfully build socialism and to effectively defend the socialist fatherland.

We must pay attention to developing our economy and culture and to improving, step by step, our people's livelihood in order to gradually overcome the differences in the level of development among the nationalities in the course of our nation's advance. In performing this task in the past, we have shown many strong points and gathered many experiences, but we also have had shortcomings that we have not been able to review satisfactorily. Making surveys of the economic situation, livelihood, and cultural level of the nationalities in the various localities serves as the basis for formulating policies and measures in developing the economy, cultural level and living conditions of our compatriots. While redistributing the work force countrywide, we must urgently promote sedentary farming and settlement patterned after models that have emerged in the respective regions. Satisfactorily promoting sedentary farming and settlement is not only a pressing economic requirement that helps preserve our national resources, but also a major part of the nationality policy. Under the principle of encouraging nationality laborers to voluntarily work in state farms, state forests, construction sites and enterprises, we will continue to consolidate agricultural cooperativization in the north and steadily lead southern nationality farmers onto the path of collectivization. We must attach importance to developing the collective economy while properly encouraging the development of the family-based economy. While promoting and coordinating agriculture and forestry, we must endeavor to develop local industries, small industry, handicrafts and traditional occupations and trades, expand communications and transportation and satisfactorily carry out distribution and circulation.

The mountain region and the border areas, which have been ravaged by Chinese troops in the past, are experiencing many more difficulties in production and the people's livelihood. We must, through various methods and measures, assist our compatriots in stabilizing and expanding production, and see to it that supplies of essentials reach the intended recipients. We must continue to promote educational, public health and cultural work, gradually implement educational reform so as to enhance the quality of education and review educational activities in the mountain region so as to ensure the application of more efficient methods and measures. Besides promoting cultural activities countrywide, we should search for and develop the valuable assets of nationality cultures and encourage new literary and artistic works with nationality themes. We must do a good job in carrying out the policy on nationality writing promulgated by the state. We must further step up public health and sanitation work, especially at the grassroots level, and pay attention to putting to good advantage the traditional medical recipes and treatment methods of the nationality compatriots. We must further strengthen the unshakable solidarity among the nationalities countrywide in order to successfully build socialism and effectively defend the socialist fatherland. We should keep in mind and propagate widely, for educational purposes, President Ho's teaching: The compatriots of Kinh, Tho, Gio Rai, E De, or Banar nationality, or of any other nationality, are all children of Vietnam; they are blood brothers. We hang together in life and death; we share weal and woe; we provide mutual assistance. Rivers may dry up, mountains may erode, but our solidarity will never weaken. We are determined to pool our forces to steadfastly preserve our freedom and independence. Now that the entire Vietnamese people are united in a monolithic bloc of unprecedented strength, no reactionary force can divide them.

The Vietnamese land is the common property of all Vietnamese nationalities, who share weal and woe. Every inch of land within our fatherland's borders is the sacred property of all nationalities living in beloved Vietnam who are resolved to defend it at all costs. President Ho once said: We would rather sacrifice everything than lose our country and live in bondage.

We must consolidate all basic party organizations, administrations, and mass organizations and intensively train nationality cadres in all fields. We must, primarily and rapidly, train leading and managerial cadres, especially for the district and grassroots levels. We must have projects and plans for training nationality cadres, with attention paid to training cadres for each locality and nationality, so that each nationality will have a core of cadres who are absolutely loyal to the party's revolutionary cause and are capable of providing leadership in implementing political tasks in the locality. Under the leadership of the various party committee echelons, all sectors are responsible for training nationality cadres for their own use.

By intensively consolidating and developing the basic party organizations and mass organizations and training nationality cadres, we realistically ensure the right to collective mastery of the people of all nationalities in reunified socialist Vietnam. We must endeavor to strengthen solidarity among nationality cadres who should work together. The important resolutions to be unanimously approved at this congress, including the one dealing with nationality policy, will certainly be warmly welcomed by the people of all nationalities.

I am fully confident that all party committee echelons, state organs and mass organizations, on the basis of thoroughly grasping party policies and the work of their echelons and sectors, will devise concrete measures for satisfactorily carrying out the party's line and policies on nationalities in order to score increasingly greater achievements in nationality work.

NHAN DAN EMPHASIZES INCREASED GRAIN PRODUCTION

[NHAN DAN 10 April editorial: "Concentrate Efforts on Accelerating Grain Production"]

[Summary] Grain is one of our people's most essential commodities. A shortage of grain, particularly marketable grain, will adversely affect our social life, and restrict the pace of our comprehensive economic development. "The fifth party congress concluded that grain and food are the most urgent and fundamental problem that must be solved to stabilize and improve the people's livelihood. With the present population our country's population will be 60 million by 1985.

"In calculating the needs of the entire society -- including part of the grain for the peasants, nonagricultural producers and reserves -- if we want to solve the grain problem successfully by 1985, our entire country must produce at least 19 to 20 million tons, the target set by the fifth party congress. To achieve this target, from now until 1985 grain production must be increased by 1 million tons each year."

Except for the big cities and industrial complexes, localities specializing in industrial crop cultivation, localities having large areas of forested land and localities with special natural conditions should strive to achieve a balance of grain and food production within a framework of production and consumption suitable to their specific conditions.

"Efforts should be made by all localities throughout the country to increase the rice yield and expand the rice area rapidly so that by 1985 we can produce 16 to 16.5 million tons of rice. To achieve this target in the Third 5-Year Plan, efforts must be made to expand the cultivated area by an average of 500,000 hectares and to attain more than 400 kg of paddy her hectare."

It is necessary for all localities throughout the country to consider intensive cultivation as the main guideline while actively carrying out multicropping, opening up more virgin land and forming more high-yield rice areas. The north should rely mainly on green manure to increase its rice output while the south should expand its rice area by carrying out multicropping and land reclamation along with increasing the rice yield.

If we want to achieve the total target for grain production as planned, it is necessary to continue to expand the subsidiary crop area. Every province and district should assess its soil and other conditions to determine their crop allocation. "To expand the subsidiary crop area steadily so that it can represent 18 to 20 percent of grain output, plans must be formulated to build the material and technical bases in support of intensive cultivation gradually and efforts must be made closely to combine cultivation with processing and introduce subsidiary crops into the people's diet."

With their great potentials and abundant land, the provinces in the Mekong River and Red River Deltas have been specified by the party congress as the country's two major grain-producing regions. All sectors should concentrate on assisting these two regions while paying adequate attention to other grain-producing areas. "All sectors and echelons are dutybound successfully to fulfill the grain production target set forth by the fifth party congress."

RESOLUTION ON MEKONG DELTA AGRICULTURE MOVEMENT

[Text] The Vietnamese Confederation of Trade Unions and the Ministry of Agriculture have met to discuss and issue a joint resolution on launching a movement among the workers and civil servants to implement the resolution of the Council of Ministers concerning agricultural development in the Mekong River Delta. The resolution says:

In order to exploit the potentials of the Mekong River Delta and turn this region into a major grain- and food-producing area, trade unions and the administration at all levels must carry out effective propaganda and educational work among the workers and civil servants to enable them to clearly understand the policies of the party and the state concerning agricultural transformation and development of the region.

In addition, they must encourage every person to come to work in the region voluntarily; help the provinces in the region train a large and strong contingent of workers and civil servants in order to meet the needs arising from agricultural development; launch a revolutionary movement among the workers and civil servants; develop various professions and occupations; and build more production and work establishments to provide direct help to agricultural production. This is aimed at implementing the policy on agricultural transformation and development in the region.

EMULATION CONFERENCE HELD IN HAI HUNG 10 APR

[Text] According to a Voice of Vietnam radio station correspondent, a conference was held in (Con Son), Chi Linh District, Hai Hung Province, on 10 April by the party Central Committee Emulation Department to review the results of the emulation pledge for 1981 and to sign the 1982 emulation pledge among the provinces in the Bac Bo Delta and midland regions.

Comrade Nguyen Tho Chan, head of the party Central Committee Emulation Department, read a report highlighting the achievements recorded by the seven Bac Bo Delta and midland provinces -- Hai Hung, Thai Binh, Ha Nam Ninh, Ha Son Binh, Vinh Phu, Ha Bac and Bac Thai -- in the process of emulation to fulfill many specific norms provided in the 1981 emulation pledge. The report also presented the nine basic experiences acquired in implementing and directing the emulation pledge between these provinces.

One of these basic experiences is the implementation of the pledge to emulate in over-fulfilling the state plan -- a good form of emulation which is based on the system of economic management and in combination with the fulfillment of the state plan. Through the emulation pledge, all leaders in charge know how to assume greater responsibility and play an exemplary role in implementing it, as well as to motivate the masses intensively for their participation. They also know that the implementation of the emulation pledge must be carried out regularly and tenaciously.

The conference heard the views presented by the heads of the delegations from various provinces on their advantages and difficulties in fulfilling the emulation norms and on the good experiences they have acquired in overcoming difficulties to implement the emulation pledge satisfactorily.

Through its assessment the party Central Committee Emulation Department decided that Hai Hung Province, which has taken the lead in implementing the 1981 emulation pledge among other provinces in the delta and midland regions, should have the honor of receiving the banner awarded by the Council of Ministers.

In an atmosphere of joy and enthusiasm over the fine success of the fifth party congress and the initial results obtained in the 1981 emulation pledge, the heads of the delegations from these seven Bac Bo Delta and midland provinces signed the emulation pledge for 1982. They also expressed the determination to successfully implement the resolution of the fifth national party congress through the fulfillment of many specific norms.

[Text] The National Front won 10 seats uncontested when nomination closed in the parliamentary elections about 2 hours ago. The National Front, which is the government in power, is contesting all the 154 parliamentary seats. It is also contesting all the 312 seats in the 11 state assemblies. The first parliamentary seat to be won was the deputy prime minister, Datuk Musa Hitam, in the southern state of Johor in peninsular Malaysia. In Sarawak, the chief minister, Datuk Patinggi Haji Abdul Taib Mahmud, was one of those who was returned unopposed. Apart from the 10 wins in the parliamentary contest, the National Front also picked up 7 state seats. However, in the northern state of Perlis, an opposition party, the Pan-Malayan Islamic Party, secured a seat unopposed. The nomination of the National Front cadidates was rejected on technical grounds.

The prime minister, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed, is facing a straight fight with the deputy president of the Pan-Malayan Islamic Party, (Jaji Yusof Rawa), in the parliamentary seat of Kubang Pasu.

The elections are being called earlier than scheduled because the ruling party, the National Front, is seeking a fresh mandate so that it can press on the development (?plan) in a firm and vigorous manner. Elections were last held in 1978. The front held 133 seats in the House of Representatives, which is now being dissolved. Of the opposition, Democratic Action Party held 30; the Pan-Malayan Islamic Party, 5; Sarawak People's Organization, 1 and independent , 2. All the state assemblies, which have also now been dissolved, were controlled by the National Front. The election commission has put its machinery in top working order to ensure the elections on the 22d of this month proceed smoothly. In the states of Sabah and Sarawak, polling will be scheduled from the 22d to the 26th.

FRENCH OFFICIAL COMMENTS ON SINGAPORE VISIT

[Excerpts] Singapore, 13 Apr (AFP) -- French Minister of Research and Technology Jean-Pierre Chevenement left here today for Tokyo after a two-day private visit during which he had mainly political talks with Singapore leaders.

Mr. Chevenement, who arrived here after an eight-day official visit to Indonesia, said he had been impressed by the general assessment of the political situation in Southeast Asia painted by Singapore's First Deputy Prime Minister Sinnathamby Rajaratnam. The minister said he had had a very interesting exchange of views with Mr. Rajaratnam, who had outlined his views on ways to normalise the political scehe in the region.

Regarding France's diplomatic ties with Vietnam and French aid to that country, Mr. Chevenement said he had encountered no animosity on the part of the Singapore leaders. He pointed out that the diplomatic links were a long-standing affair and that as far as aid was concerned, France's $33 million assistance to Vietnam was only about one-third of Sweden's $100 million aid to that country.

During his two-day visit here, Mr. Chevenement also met Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan and Trade and Industry Minister Tony Tan. Regarding trade between Singapore and France, Mr. Chevenement said this was mainly on a business-to-business basis rather than between governments. The French Government was interested in seeing wider commercial links between the two countries, and this question would no doubt be taken up during a forthcoming visit here of French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert, said Mr. Chevenement.

SUZUKI VOICES CONCERN ABOUT U.S. TRADE REQUEST

[Text] Tokyo, April 16 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki expressed concern Friday over U.S. request for Japan's total liberalization of agricultural products terming it as an "unexpectedly stiff attitude." Suzuki revealed this when he received Sakue Matsumoto, vice minister of agriculture, forestry and fisheries, and Hiroya Sano, director general of the ministry's economic affairs bureau, to hear their reports on the latest talks with the U.S. on the issue.

Noting that the U.S. is sticking to the total liberalization of agricultural products, they explained to Suzuki that Washington was being very stiff, despite Japan's request to reconsider such attitude and be more realistic.

Suzuki expressed the hope to negotiate the matter on the basis of Article 22 of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Meanwhile, Kichiro Tazawa, minister of agriculture, forestry and fisheries, stressed that there is no room for agricultural products to be included in the second round of Japan's measures to open wider its market to be mapped out on May 7. Speaking to newsmen after a Cabinet meeting, he noted that the U.S. was requesting total liberalization of 22 agricultural products.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON MITTERRAND'S VISIT

Nuclear Weapons Appeal

OW161242 Tokyo KYODO in English 1142 GMT 16 Apr 82

[Text] Tokyo, April 16 (KYODO) -- Visiting French President Francois Mitterrand Friday appealed to the United States and the Soviet Union to mutually and simultaneously divest themselves of their nuclear weapons in such a way as to maintain the balance of power between the two camps. But he displayed a dogged resolve for France to maintain its nuclear force for its own defense.

In a speech to the Diet, the French president said that if a power vacuum existed anywhere in the world the international situation could be seriously jeopardized.

Mitterrand expressed concern about the nuclear arms limitation talks between the U.S. and the Soviet Union in Geneva and called on Japan to actively speak up for nuclear disarmament along with France.

But he added that he became aware that France's defense was impossible without its own nuclear arms, although he had been opposed to nuclear weapons for 20 years as an opposition party member.

Trade Friction Discussed

[Text] Tokyo, April 16 (KYODO) -- Secretary General Susumu Nikaido of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party stressed Friday that the problem of trade frictions should be solved through multinational consultations. In a meeting with visiting French President Francois Mitterrand, Nikaido said Japan is not the only country that should be blamed for the trade friction and said efforts for a solution should be made in consultations at the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). He also expressed the hope that the Versailles summit of Western industrialized nations in June will become a turning point for revitalization of the world economy.

Japanese officials said the president told Nikaido that it is not proper to criticize only a single country and revealed that France, as the host country for the coming summit, did not plan to subject Japan to criticism.

On other problems of mutual interest such as global peace and development aid as well as the high interest rates in the United States, Mitterrand said they should be solved through mutual cooperation and not by levying criticism on a single country. Nikaido agreed with Mitterrand's views and explained that the LDP's diplomatic policy is based on a "peace diplomacy" adding that his party wanted to deepen Japan-France friendly ties and contribute to global peace.

Speaks at Business Luncheon

[Text] Tokyo, April 15 (KYODO) -- French President Francois Mitterrand Thursday made an indirect request to Japan to open its market wider to foreign products. Speaking at a welcome luncheon in Tokyo sponsored jointly by five major businessmen's organizations, including the Federation of Economic Organizations (Keidanren), the French chief executive said French high technology products are selling well in the United States. He asked why it was difficult for such products to gain access to the Japanese market.

On behalf of about 250 business executives present, Yoshihiro Inayama, Keidanren president, said that Japanese business circles would continue working for closer economic ties between Japan and France and Japan and Europe in the years ahead.

Mitterrand stressed the importance of cooperation between the two countries in the area of industry and technology.

While questioning the openness of the Japanese market, he also pointed out the lack of efforts by French enterprises to gain access.

Mitterrand said France would welcome investments by Japanese interests. The French leader also emphasized the necessity for Japan and France to join forces in restructuring the international monetary system and in establishing a new order in the international monetary field. Mitterrand said excessively high interest rates and erratic flunctions in exchange rates would reduce the desire of businesses to make investments, thus, in effect, criticizing the United States for its high interest rates.

The French leader hoped that Japan, a major economic power, would contribute more to world peace.

Over half a century since then, shouldering our nation's destiny and heavy burdens of the Korean revolution, he has always led the revolutionary cause of chuche along the road of victory through manifold hardships and ordeals, thereby delivering our nation out of the grimmest crisis and bringing about independence, sovereignty and everlasting prosperity to the country. Kim Il-song Speech

[Text] Pyongyang, April 16 (KCNA) -- The Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea arranged a grand banquet at the Kumsusan Assembly Hall on April 15 in celebration of the 70th birthday of the great leader of our party and our people Comrade Kim Il-song.

Follows the full text of an address made by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the banquet:

Esteemed heads of state and foreign guests, Dear comrades and friends: Heads of state and high-ranking party and government leaders from a number of friendly countries in the world and distinguished personages and many friends from foreign countries have come to our country and are warmly celebrating my birthday. This is a great honour for me, and I am deeply grateful for it.

Allow me also to express my heartfelt thanks to the members of the congratulatory delegations of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification and of the South Korean people who have come to the northern half of the republic to congratulate me at the risk of their lives, and the members of the congratulatory delegations of Korean nationals in Japan and overseas Koreans and many other congratulatory delegations who have visited their socialist motherland with a warm compatriotic feeling. Also, I would like to offer my greetings to the entire South Korean people and overseas Koreans.

My deep thanks go to our party and the government of the republic, revolutionary comrades of many years standing, all cadres and the entire party members and people for having arranged various functions and congratulated me on my birthday. This time I have been profoundly touched by the ardent, hearty congratulations extended to me by foreign friends and many comrades and the entire people. The great affection and trust shown to me by revolutionary comrades and people strengthen my revolutionary resolve to come up to their love and expectations without fail by doing more work for the country and the people from now.

For me, the happiest thing is to be loved and supported by the people, and the worthiest thing is to serve them. I wish to live on, enjoying their love and support, and it is my revolutionary duty to fight for them to the last. Ever since I set out on the revolutionary road, I have always been loved and supported by the people. It is entirely because of the utmost love, protection and sincerest help from my comrades and people that I have been able to carry on my revolutionary activities in good health until today when I am 70.

It is the workers, peasants and the rest of people who have invigorated and encouraged me and given me conviction at every difficult period of revolutionary struggle. It is also none other than the people who have given us wisdom and taught us ways and means so that we could lead the revolution and construction in the right direction. It is also our people who have resolutely defended a new line and policies we put forward at each stage of the revolution and construction and carried them out displaying heroism and self-sacrificing spirit. Indeed, the people have always been my devoted protectors, grateful benefactors and excellent teachers.

We have been strongly supported and loved by the people and wage our struggle believing in and relying on them throughout the whole course of the arduous and protracted revolutionary struggle. That is why we have been able to overcome all hardships with success and gained brilliant victories in the revolution and construction. When we enjoy the people's love and support and believe in their strength and rely on them, we can endure any bitter trial and emerge victorious from any difficult struggle. This is a truth which we discovered in the practice of the revolutionary struggle. We grasped this priceless revolutionary truth in our struggle and kept it as our unshakable revolutionary creed. This is the secret which enabled us to hold fast to the revolutionary banner of chuche to the end and led our revolution straight to victory despite all the difficulties and complexities.

More than half a century has elapsed since we set out on the revolutionary road. Our revolution has advanced a long way under the banner of the chuche idea. But our struggle is not over, we have a lot of work to do. We must reunify the divided country, achieve the complete victory of socialism, build in the homeland a communist paradise good to live in, thereby to accomplish the revolutionary cause of chuche.

To consummate this cause, we should continue with our struggle without being carried away by our successes and further strengthen the unity and cohesion of the revolutionary ranks. We are not allowed to stop our struggle even a moment. The life of a revolutionary should begin with struggle and end with struggle. The revolution should be carried from one generation to another. Uninterrupted struggle and continuous advance is the requirement of revolution and the tenor of a revolutionary's life.

Ensuring firm unity and cohesion of ideology and will of the revolutionary ranks is the key to the victory of our future struggle to reunify the divided country and model the whole of society on the chuche idea. We must firmly defend and keep strengthening the monolithic unity and cohesion of our revolutionary ranks, which have been achieved through the revolutionary struggle over half a century. This unity and cohesion should be based on the chuche idea and centred on the Central Committee of the party; it is confirmed with a lofty sense of revolutionary obligation and faith. Only the unity and cohesion centred on one pivot with one ideology and based on the sense of revolutionary obligation and faith will be everlasting and surmount any tribulations and ordeals.

All cadres and party members and the rest of people should firmly equip themselves with the chuche idea and rally around the Central Committee of the party with one ideology and purpose. When the revolutionary hard cores of our party and all the cadres and party members and the entire people fight on courageously, rallied closely around the Central Committee of the party with a single heart and will, there will always be victory and glory ahead of us and the revolutionary cause of chuche will be splendidly consummated.

Comrades and friends, present here are heads of state and high-ranking party and government leaders from a number of countries and many other foreign friends. We are very much pleased that we are gathered here with our close comrades-in-arms and friends from many countries who are advancing shoulder to shoulder in the same ranks under the banner of independence. So many envoys of friendship have taken the trouble to come a long way from different continents and regions of the world and offer us warm congratulations. This unequivocally shows the ardent feelings of comradeship and noble sense of revolutionary obligation which have developed amid our joint struggle for independence against imperialism. I consider it a great honour and happiness to have many excellent comrades-in-arms and friends like you in different parts of the world. We highly value amity with and duties towards international comrades-in-arms and friends and the progressive people around the world and will strive to promote them.

This is an age of independence. As the days go by, more and more nations on the globe are advancing on the road of independence and the fierce current of independence is sweeping over all continents. We should strive to bring independence to the whole world in step with this strong trend of the times towards independence. Making the whole world independent is the unanimous desire of the peoples of all countries who advocate independence. It is humanity's sacred common cause of wiping out imperialism and colonialism from this earth and realizing complete sovereignty for all countries and nations. Only when the whole world becomes independent can the danger of a new world war be completely eliminated, a lasting universal peace guaranteed and an independent, prosperous new society built with success in all lands to conform with the people's desire and ideal.

If they are to win the cause of global independence, the peoples of all countries who champion independence should work together, unite solidly and closely cooperate with one another. The might of the people lies precisely in the might of their unity. Their united force is unconquerable either in a country or on a worldwide scale.

If they firmly maintain independence and develop a powerful joint struggle in close unity, the peoples of non-aligned nations and all newly-emerging countries will be able to isolate and weaken the imperialist forces, succeed in thwarting their aggressive and interventionist moves, defend the sovereignty of the country and nation and realize independence throughout the world.

As in the past, so also in the future, the Workers Party of Korea and the government of our republic will, under the banner of independence, friendship and peace, actively promote the relations of friendship and cooperation with the peoples in all lands who advocate independence and will make every effort to increase unity and solidarity among the independent forces of the world. Through the joint efforts and active struggles of the worlds people who defend independence, the unity and solidarity of the independent forces will strengthen on a global scale with each passing day and the cause of independence for the whole world will triumph brilliantly.

Dear comrades and friends, availing myself of this meaningful gathering overflowing with feelings of noble revolutionary comradeship and warm friendship I would like to pledge my wholehearted, lasting devotion to the revolutionary struggle to reunify our country independently, model the whole society on the chuche idea and make the whole world independent, and may I propose a toast:

To the long life and good health of the esteemed heads of state from many countries, our intimate brothers and comrades-in-arms.

To the health of the high-ranking party and government leaders, preeminent figures, many foreign friends and diplomatic envoys from different countries of the world; to the health of the members of the congratulatory delegation of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification and the South Korean people's congratulatory delegation, the valiant fighters who came from the field of righteous battle against U.S. imperialism and its stooges; to the health of all the revolutionaries and patriots of different strata in South Korea; to the health of the members of the congratulatory delegation of Korean nationals in Japan, the congratulatory delegation of overseas Koreans and all other congratulatory delegations, who have come to their socialist homeland, from Japan and other countries across oceans and continents, and all Koreans abroad; to the health of all our cadres, party members, workers, farmers, soldiers, working intellectuals and the rest of our people, who are boundlessly loyal to the party and the revolution and to the health of all comrades present here.

[Text] Pyongyang, April 15 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, made a speech at a banquet given on April 14 in honour of the party and government delegation of the Guinean Revolutionary People's Republic headed by Comrade Ahmed Sekou Toure, secretary general of the Guinean Democratic Party, president of the Guinean Revolutionary People's Republic and foremost leader of the Guinean revolution. The speech reads in full:

Esteemed Comrade President Ahmed Sekou Toure, guests from Guinea, comrades and friends: It gives me a great pleasure today to meet you again, respected Comrade President Ahmed Sekou Toure, my most intimate friend and brother, in Pyongyang, the capital of our country. I warmly welcome you with respect as most honoured guest of our party, state and people and myself, with intimate, warm feelings of an old comrade-in-arms and comrade.

You, respected comrade president, paid a state visit to our country in October 1979, and then attended the sixth congress of our party in October 1980 which delighted our people, and added brilliance to the annals of friendship between our two countries. This time you, comrade president, made another long journey to come to us. This clearly shows that we are on specially intimate terms and that friendship and solidarity is indestructible between the peoples of Korea and Guinea who are on the same front of the struggle for the victory of the cause of anti-imperialism and independence.

I have never celebrated my birthday till now. Even on my birthdays I used to work among the people, talking with them over state affairs as usual. In fact, I feel happier among them than anywhere else. I intended to spend my birthday this year, too, acquainting myself on the spot with the successes achieved in the endeavours for implementing the decisions of the sixth congress of the party and with preparations for this year's farming. But I am having this remarkable time with you, esteemed comrade president, and many other foreign friends on a kindly visit to us. I consider that the visit of friends from different regions and countries of the world is an expression of deep trust and exceptionally warm friendship toward us.

Today we visit each other, crossing continents and oceans. This fully shows the aspects of our era advancing along the road of independence. When we started the revolution in our youth, most countries were yet under colonial domination. Under the situation it was very difficult for us to meet with each other. But today nearly all countries have achieved national independence and are advancing hand in hand for the common cause of anti-imperialism and independence.

The fraternal Guinean people were able to realize their age-old desire for national liberation by finding in your person the foremost leader of the revolution in their country. The success gained by them along the independent road of socialist development under the correct leadership of you, comrade president, since their independence is a success for all of us. The Guinean revolution is playing a great part in accelerating the complete liberation of Africa and the Guinean Revolutionary People's Republic is positively contributing to the strengthening and development of the Nonaligned Movement. We highly estimate the brilliant exploits performed by you, comrade president, in the course of the protracted revolutionary struggle and consider it great joy to have you, outstanding, faithful and energetic revolutionary fighter, as an intimate comrade-in-arms in Africa.

The path of revolution is not a smooth one as we have experienced alike. We have victoriously traversed the rigorous path of revolution, pulling through manifold trials and difficulties because our comrades and people have devotedly fought with us on the road of revolution and because we have been given support and encouragement from foreign friends. We always remember, among others, the positive support which you, Comrade Sekou Toure, and the party and state and people of Guinea have given us with a high revolutionary sense of duty. The bonds of friendship today linking Korea and Guinea are based on the common aim of building an independent and prosperous new society free from exploitation and oppression. For this common purpose and desire, Asia and Africa are interlinked and the Third World is vigorously advancing towards independence, sovereignty and socialism.

Esteemed comrade president, alarmed by the intensified revolutionary struggle of the world's progressive people today, the imperialists are making desperate efforts to maintain their sphere of influence and subordinate again newly independent countries. In order to counter these manoeuvres of the imperialists, it is imperative to reject all manner of domination and subjugation and strengthen solidarity and cooperation among all countries which advocate independence.

We believe that if the countries of newly emerging forces advocating independence hold fast to the principle of self-reliance, firmly unite politically and closely cooperate economically and technically with each other, they will be able to display great strength, firmly defend national independence and dignity and achieve the independent development of their countries. The Korean people will firmly unite with the fraternal Guinean people and strive to expand and develop the relations between the two countries in all fields, political, economic and cultural.

At this happy occasion of meeting again and sharing comradely friendship with you, a most intimate comrade-in-arms of mine, I ask you to convey the friendly greetings of myself and our people to the Guinean people, and would like to propose a toast to the indestructible friendship and solidarity between the Korean and Guinean peoples, to the prosperity of the Guinean Revolutionary People's republic, to the solidarity among the Third World peoples, to the good health and long life of esteemed Comrade President Ahmed Sekou Toure, to the health of dear guests from Guinea and to the health of all comrades and friends present here.

PREMIER WARNS ABOUT NORTH'S MILITARY ADVENTURISM

[Text] Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun said yesterday that North Korea might resort to military adventurism to find a breakthrough in its isolation from international society, caused by its economic recession and its efforts to cement the system of hereditary succession. He also dwelt on the need for bolder and continued implementation of social campaigns not only to drive out negative psychological attitudes in three fields but also to reform the people's moral life.

Premier Yu made the remarks in an address during the opening ceremony of a two-week briefing session on national security which was held at the Sejong Culture Center in Seoul.

"At this time, we need to look around ourselves and our neighborhood, and should wipe out bad habits of corruption, inflation, and disorder," he said. "We should cement a solider foundation for realization of a just society we are now pursuing by correcting erroneous public attitudes and values one by one," he went on.

Premier Yu also called upon all the people to become specialists armed with economic knowlege to take the lead in accomplishing a second economic take-off. "Enterpreneurs should double their efforts to seek a responsible management of their businesses as main pillars for national economic growth." "Laborers need to lead the van in leading frugal life, while farmers should do their utmost to increase the production of staple grains," Premier Yu stressed.

He also called for particular efforts among the people to further firm up the already-consolidated stable foundation whatever difficulties come ahead. "We have already obtained a good lesson through past experiences that we should never achieve economic and social stability without political stability." "We also learned that it is impossible to realize peaceful transfer of political power without economic and social stability," he emphasized. He strongly appealed to the people to do their best for fresh national development in a new era based on the already-secured stable foundation.

The annual briefing sessions will last until the end of this month, attended by about 200 leading figures from each province.

KIM IL-SONG BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION CRITICIZED

[Editorial: "Lackluster Cult of Kim Birthday"]

[Text] The senseless ado North Korea is making about the birthday anniversary of its chieftain Kim Il-song stands in painful contrast with the silenced outcries of the shackled population of the communist-held territory for the bare necessities of life and minimum degree of human dignity. The sane world sees in the current happenings in Pyongyang a testimony to the absurdity and anachronism of that particular variety of totalitarian communism practiced in the northern part of the Korean Peninsula.

The North Korean despot and his lackeys have long tried to turn Kim's 70th birthday, celebrated yesterday, into the heyday of the dynasty of the Kim clan. However, they find the much-touted birthday celebrations a largely unpopular affair. The self-appointed title role player and a handful of supporting actors were there, but the gallery to which they were playing had only a sparse audience. The faint applause turned out to be a far cry from the officially organized fanfare that appealed to none but a handful of men around the dictator.

A number of delegations including the one headed by North Korean Premier Yi Chong-ok made a round of visits to many capitals early this year for the purpose of soliciting "commemorative missions" on the occasion of Kim's birthday.

But that hard sell did not pay off. Few European communist parties sent delegations. The Soviet Union and Communist China, Pyongyang's two big brothers, gave the cold shoulder by not sending any official mission.

Indications are that Beijing is displeased with the personality cult of Kim Il-song. Both Beijing and Moscow were apparently inclined to rebuff the fantastic idolization of their former protege by refraining from dispatching a delegation. Only the governments and socialist parties of some minor leftist-leaning or nonaligned countries were represented at the anniversary events.

The joint conference of the North Korean Workers Party Central Committee and the Supreme People's Assembly called this week appears to be getting nowhere. Its failure to officially nominate Kim Il-song's son, Kim Chong-il, as heir apparent, belying widespread predictions, suggests an intense succession struggle which besets the process of consolidating the dynastic rule of the senior and junior Kims.

The most loyal group dancing to Pyongyang's pipe is the runaway Federation of Korean Residents in Japan made up of pro-Pyongyang leftist expatriates. The radical group enforced a campaign for offering "gifts of loyalty" to its master. A staggering amount of money, 5 billion yen, had been collected. It was spent in buying such sundry scarcities as watches, soft drinks and toilet paper. Three million blankets were reportedly purchased for shipment to North Korea.

These facts suffice to illustrate the depths of impoverishment, misery and stupidity into which the Pyongyang regime has sunk its helpless people. Their deprivation of both bread and freedom was proven again by the latest report on 105,000 political and ideological undesirables herded into concentration camps. North Korea under Kim is hardly a place for staging a birthday spree.

Kim Il-song will go down in the history of communism as the unprecedented author of a cult which deifies his entire family and of a hereditary monarchy in the name of a perverted people's republic. His system is getting increasingly isolated in the world community, even among its fellow parties. Excessive regimentation and economic failures make it more untenable at home today.

OPPOSITION URGES CANCELING U.S. RICE IMPORTS

[Text] The rival political groups of a National Assembly subcommittee on the rice import scandal agreed yesterday to recommend that the government cancel its projected import of 370,000 tons of American rice this year. The nine-man subpanel of the Assembly Economy-Science Committee also decided to ask the government to change the current rice import system in such a way as to leave imports to private businesses.

The parliamentary recommendation will be contained in a report of the subpanel, which inquired of the administration about the real picture of the nation's rice imports for more than a month after the exposure of an alleged payoff scandal involving officials of the Office of Supply (Osrok).

The subcommittee is expected to conclude drafting a report on its activities today. The report writing has been delayed because of the sharp disputes over its contents between the rival party members. In its 13th meeting yesterday, the subcommittee, however, failed to narrow different views between the conflicting members on whether it would recognize the Osrok had imported rice at high prices and excessively as requested by the minority side.

The minority groups claimed that a parliamentary request for the administration's apology for the rice deal scandal should be inserted in the report. The majority Democratic Justice Party members strongly rejected it. During a marathon meeting, which lasted until late in the evening from 11:30 a.m., the DJP lawmakers insisted that the subpanel make it clear in the report that no Osrok officials had received bribes from U.S. rice dealers in the course of purchasing foreign rice.

SINO-U.S. TIES OVER TAIWAN ARMS DEAL VIEWED

[Editorial: "Taiwan Arms Deal"]

[Text] After months of clamor accompanied by behind-the-scenes negotiations, Washington and Beijing appear to have found a discreet way of staving off a potentially disastrous head-on clash over the sale of U.S. military spare parts to Taipei.

The Reagan administration, braving the objections of the Chinese communists, formalized its bid on the $60 million deal for the Nationalist Chinese on Taiwan this week by asking for congressional approval, which by all indications is certain to be accorded. The action followed a backoff by President Ronald Reagan last January, who in the face of Beijing's vehement protests retracted his earlier plan to replace Taiwan's aging jet fighters with more advanced models, and his spokesmen were emphatic in describing the pending deal as involving no weapons of any kind.

On the part of Communist China, it promptly lodged a strong protest with the United States over the proposal. But the response was short of a drastic reprisal such as downgrading bilateral ties from ambassadorial level to that of charge d'affaires -- a retaliation that has a precedent in relations with the Netherlands last year over its proposed sale of two submarines to Taiwan and that has been frequently suggested with regard to the American move.

Though harsh in rhetorics, the Chinese protest features a tone of compromise by stating that it has "taken note" of U.S. assurances that the package at issue is not a new arms sale and that no military transfers to Taipei will be considered while Washington and Beijing are negotiating a settlement of their dispute over Taiwan. In fact, the case has not been closed and it has every chance of taking a worse turn. First of all, the spare parts deal is only part of a long-standing arrangement designed to enable the Nationalist Chinese to maintain a "sufficient self-defense capability" under the Taiwan Relations Act, which was enacted shortly after the normalization of Sino-American relations in January, 1979 under the previous U.S. administration.

Facing the two powers is the fundamental issue as to how long the American arms supply program under the act or the current suspension of military transfers to Taiwan should last -- a time limit which Beijing wishes to see immediately imposed, insisting that the American approach is a ploy to "create two Chinas" and an act infringing on China's sovereignty. In this regard, the latest Beijing protest made it essentially obscure whether it represented another strong objection or conciliation, leaving much room for interpretation.

For all that, the way Washington and Beijing are managing their disagreement -- that is, in the present stage -- seems to amply reflect their fervent aspirations to find a breakthrough and thus to preserve their mutually beneficial relations, which marked the tenth anniversary of the Shanghai communique last February.

It may not be an anticlimax after months of tough rows, as put by some observers. But their interactions -- still precarious on a fine line distinguishing between weapons and spare parts -- can be taken as underlining the shrewd tactics employed by both parties to save their faces and more importantly pursue their strategic interests, which notably meet in the crucial need to check Soviet expansionism.

If the dispute over Taiwan is an unavoidable acid test of the Sino-American relationship, its settlement in whatever form will have much bearing not only on their international standings, but also on the regional and global situations, that of the Korean Peninsula vitally included.

PRESIDENT SAN YU MEETS VOTER REPRESENTATIVES

BK121608 Rangoon Domestic Service in Burmese 1330 GMT 12 Apr 82

[Excerpts] President U San Yu, assembly representative from Bahan Constituency, explained the seventh meeting of the Second People's Assembly and the first and second meetings of the Third People's Assembly at a meeting held in Saya San Hall, Kyaikkasan Grounds, at 0800 today. Also present at the meeting were Burma Socialist Program Party [BSPP] General Secretary U Aye Ko, BSPP Joint General Secretary Brig Gen Tin U, BSPP Central Executive Committee members, BSPP secretaries, BSPP Central Committee members, members of Rangoon division regional party committee, People's Assembly representatives in Rangoon, officials of the divisional people's council, 1,231 voter representatives from Bahan Constituency and 220 observers.

Speaking at the meeting, U San Yu said the economic situation of the country improved in 1980-81. This, he said, was because production sectors were able to increase the production of goods. He also said the party, the state and mass and class organizations must take special care in extensively and effectively implementing the measures to improve the state economic situation as underlined by President U Ne Win on the final day of the seventh meeting of the Second People's Assembly.

Continuing his comments on the seventh meeting of the Second People's Assembly, U San Yu said the important point mentioned in the report of the State Council is the drafting of the citizenship bill. The law commission has completed the draft by compiling suggestions of the people and the advice given by the party chairman. Plans are being made, he said, to present the bill before the people again so as to obtain suggestions and to make the bill more complete.

Regarding the implementation of economic plans presented to the assembly by the Council of Ministers, U San Yu said the target for 1981-82 was to raise the national net output and services value by 5.7 percent. But the actual growth was 6.7 percent. One hundred and four percent of the plan was implemented, he said, and the state economy, therefore, developed according to our expectations.

Regarding the objectives for the Fourth 4-Year Plan presented by the Council of Ministers, U San Yu said that the objective of the Fourth 4-Year Plan -- which begins in 1982-83 and ends in 1985-86 -- is to increase the gross national product and value of production of goods and services up to 21.28 billion kyat and to achieve an average yearly growth of 6.2 percent. The objective for 1982-83 yearly plan is to achieve the gross national product and services value of 17.68 billion kyat and to increase it by 5.9 percent. The economy of the country steadily grew in the Third 4-Year Plan and good conditions were created for further progress, he said. Based on these conditions, the working people must individually as well as collectively work diligently to the best of their physical and spiritual abilities to implement the objectives of the Fourth 4-Year Plan passed by the people's assembly.

FOREIGN MINISTRY STATEMENT REJECTS U.S. CHARGES

[Text] Phnom Penh, 15 Apr (SPK) -- Today the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the PRK issued a statement rejecting the charge by the United States that Vietnam used chemical weapons in Kampuchea, Laos and Afghanistan [as received]. The text of the statement reads:

The U.S. State Department has just submitted to the U.S. Congress a report accusing the Soviet Union and Vietnam of using chemical weapons in Laos, Kampuchea and Afghanistan. This repeated slander campaign by the United States is nothing but a tactic aimed at covering up their own criminal acts in the use of toxic chemical products during their war of aggression against the Indochinese countries and, recently, on 12 and 14 February 1982, against the PRK through the Thai authorities. Moreover, it is aimed at diverting world opinion from the criminal decision of Washington to embark on the arms race and to produce chemical and biological weapons on a massive scale. With these mendacious allegations, the United States also seeks to sow division among the peoples of Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam, while intensifying their collusion with the Chinese expansionists in their maneuvers against the revolutionary work of the three Indochinese countries.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the PRK -- a country that is a victim of U.S. toxic chemical weapons -- rejects the slanders of and energetically condemns the U.S. Government, which is guilty of using chemical and biological weapons in flagrant violation of the 1925 Geneva Convention.

HENG SAMRIN SENDS GREETINGS MESSAGE TO CASTRO

[Text] Phnom Penh, 16 Apr (SPK) -- On the occasion of the 21st anniversary of the Playa Giron victory, KPRP Central Committee General Secretary and Council of State Chairman Heng Samrin sent a greetings message to Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba Central Committee and president of the Cuban Councils of State and of Ministers. The message said among other things:

The victory of the Cuban people at Playa Giron over the mercenaries on the payroll of North American imperialism, recorded by history as a shining example of the failure of the mercenary invasion, and showed the anti-imperialist position of the heroic Cuban people in their just struggle to safeguard their country's sovereignty and territorial integrity. It constitutes a solid bulwark for the countries of Latin America, Africa and Asia, which are struggling to consolidate and preserve independence, peace, freedom, democracy and social progress.

We are convinced that the spirit of the Playa Giron victory will always animate the fraternal Cuban people in their revolutionary work to score greater successes and to foil all sabotage, intimidation and provocation maneuvers of the United States and international reactionaries. I assure you that the Kampuchean people remain, and always will remain, on the side of the fraternal Cuban people in the face of the U.S. threats and provocations, the message stressed.

VODK CARRIES KHIEU SAMPHAN NEW YEAR STATEMENT

BK151400 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 14 Apr 82

[Statement by Khieu Samphan, prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea, on the occasion of the traditional national new year and the 7th anniversary of Democratic Kampuchea -- dated 15 April; read by announcer]

[Text] Respected and beloved compatriots, dear comrades in arms, cadres, male and female combatants: Today, our entire nation and people are celebrating our traditional national new year, welcoming the Year of the Dog, Buddhist Era 2525. Our traditional national new year is linked with 17 April, which is the 7th anniversary of Democratic Kampuchea.

On this occasion, I would like to wish all our respected and beloved compatriots and comrades in arms the best of health and a valiant struggle spirit, and may you score more new victories in the struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators in defense of and for the survival of our Kampuchean nation, territory and race.

This year, as in previous years, our entire nation and people -- young and old men and women in the Democratic Kampuchean-controlled areas, the regions temporarily controlled by the Vietnamese enemies and the Kampuchean people inside and outside the country alike -- are celebrating our traditional national new year and our national day with a firm determination to struggle to defend our national traditions, identity and spirit and to ensure the survival of our Kampuchean fatherland forever.

The Vietnamese enemy aggressors have used every possible means to change and destroy our national traditions and civilization. Therefore, we are all uniting in the struggle to defend and preserve our national traditions and civilization. The Vietnamese enemies have waged a war of aggression to exterminate our Kampuchean race. We are uniting to carry out a war to defend our beloved Kampuchean nation, race and territory against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors until they are all driven out of our beloved Kampuchean fatherland. This is the significance of our traditional national new year and our national day at the present time. We are struggling against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators.

Until this year -- during three rainy seasons and four dry seasons -- the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators have made efforts to destroy the struggle of our Kampuchean people under the leadership of our Democratic Kampuchean Government, but they cannot wipe out this struggle. Therefore, in the coming rainy and dry seasons, they will be unable to demolish the struggle of our Kampuchean people under the leadership of our Democratic Kampuchean Government.

The strength of the Vietnamese enemy aggressors is declining on their battlefields of aggression in Kampuchea as well as in Vietnam. It is true that our struggle still has to go through many complicated twists and turns because the Vietnamese enemies have made efforts to redress their situation and have attempted more maneuvers. But although they are making efforts to improve their situation, any changes will be purely superficial.

This year, we are celebrating our traditional national new year and our national day at a time when the struggle of our nation and people under the leadership of our Democratic Kampuchean Government against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators is improving in all fields -- military, political, and diplomatic. The Vietnamese enemies are becoming increasingly bogged down -- militarily, politically and diplomatically -- both in Kampuchea and Vietnam.

Militarily, the Vietnamese enemies have become completely bogged down since the end of the rainy season. In this dry season, they have become even more bogged down. During this dry season, the strength of the Vietnamese enemies has been eroding all over the country. This is reflected in the fighting quality and morale of their soldiers, who have increasingly deserted, mutinied and fired on each other. They lack food and clothes. The health of their soldiers is also deteriorating.

More specifically, with regard to their fighting forces and fighting quality, they are decreasing as follows:

In the areas of eastern Kampuchea -- such as Ratanakiri, Stung Treng and Kratie Provinces, the eastern region and the southwestern region -- during this year's dry season, the biggest Vietnamese operation force was only of company size. Therefore, their fighting forces are smaller than those operating during the dry season of 1980 and 1981 when their operation forces were generally of battalion size and sometimes they mounted operations at the regimental level.

In the central areas of Kampuchea -- such as Kompong Speu, Kompong Chhnang, Western Kompong Cham and Kompong Thom Provinces -- the Vietnamese operation forces are also decreasing. During the fighting, when we engaged them they rapidly retreated, leaving their guns and the corpses of their soldiers.

There are few Vietnamese enemy forces in the eastern and central regions of Kampuchea, because they have withdrawn their forces for operations in the western battlefield in order to show that they will have some combat initiative. But even on the western Kampuchea battlefield, their operation forces in this dry season are weaker than in previous dry seasons. In previous dry seasons, they fought strongly against us and still had fresh troops with which to wage operations. During this dry season and up to the present, they have not had sufficient forces to operate against us in such areas as western Leach and north Sisophon. On the Samlot battlefield, the Vietnamese enemies do not have enough forces to carry out any major operations. The reason for this is that they simply lack the forces.

In fact the Vietnamese were forced to withdraw their troops to defend their positions on the Moung and Route 5 battlefields which we have just opened.

Battlefields on which the Vietnamese enemies made efforts to initiate some operations during this dry season are the Koh Kong Leu, the Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey-Preah Vihear-Western Kompong Thom, the Chhep-Thalabarivat and the south Sisophon battlefields.

On the Koh Kong Leu battlefield, the Vietnamese enemies made efforts to regroup their forces already stationed on this battlefield and to send more reinforcements from the southwestern region and Route 4. They attacked us three times. Their first operation involved more than 1,000 troops. The second was waged by about 400 soldiers. The third operation was waged with about 300 soldiers. Therefore, these operations are not strong as in previous dry seasons and they are decreasing in intensity. During each operation, they were seriously smashed by our national army and guerrillas.

On the Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey-Preah Vihear-western Kompong Thom battlefield, the Vietnamese enemies gathered some 10,000 troops to attack us beginning in October 1981. But these forces are not the concentrated task forces of previous dry seasons. They are the fragments of stationary troops mustered from this very battlefield in addition to the fragmentary troops called in from western Kampuchea and the central region.

In October, November and December 1981 and January 1982, they attacked and occupied a number of our Democratic Kampuchean-controlled villages. But after waging guerrilla activities to cut their supply lines in the rear and cut them into pieces we have impaired their forces. They have been disabled and have experienced great losses and difficulties. At the end of February 1982, we succeeded in taking back all the villages and communes in these regions.

Since the beginning of March 1982, we have increased our military activities on the portion of Route 6 between Siem Reap and Kompong Thom and in the region west of Siem Reap. We have expanded our operations against the Vietnamese enemies down to the Tonle Sap region. We have enlarged a number of our controlled areas along the shores of the Tonle Sap in Chikreng and Stoung Districts.

On the Chhep-Thalabarivat battlefield, the Vietnamese enemeies' operation forces are not as large as in previous dry seasons. They gathered their scattered forces on this battlefield and added some troops drawn from the eastern and central areas of Kampuchea in an attempt to attack us from behind. They established their defense lines to prevent us from attacking them deep inside their territory. But even so we attacked and impaired them. We attacked their supply lines from behind, causing them to suffer large casualties and experience many difficulties. They could not withstand all of this and were forced to retreat.

The Vietnamese enemies have made many efforts to change their situation on the south Sisophon battlefield, as on other battlefields. The Vietnamese forces conducting military activities in this battlefield are basically existing forces that have been stationed here for a long time, drawn from Trang, Kamrieng, Ta Kong and Sanke Cha. New forces brought in from Battambang and Phnum Sampeou but there have been no new battalions or regiments. They grouped these fragments of forces to attack us on this battlefield in an attempt to sweep our forces from this region and crush us in the Phnum Malai and Mak Hoeun areas.

This attempt was part of their psychological war and tricky propaganda maneuvers on the international scene. It was designed to dupe international opinion into believing that there is no more Kampuchean problem and that they have complete control of all Kampuchean territory. Up to now, although they have seized some of our territories in the southern part of this battlefield, their military and psychological war maneuvers on this battlefield have basically failed. They were forced to shift the bulk of their troops to defend their supply lines due to our attacks and guerrilla activities against them from their rear. This caused them to suffer a shortage of forces which hampered their push. They were stalled and became sitting ducks, surrounded and eroded by our guerrillas every day.

On the south Sisophon battlefield, our comrades in arms of the Democratic Kampuchea National Army and guerrillas are determined to transform this battlefield into a mass graveyard for the Vietnamese aggressors. They are determined to participate with other combatants on all battlefields all over the country to fight and inflict maximum casualties on the Vietnamese enemies.

In sum, on all battlefields throughout the country, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors cannot extricate themselves from their total impasse.

On the other hand, in this dry season, the Vietnamese enemies have systematically increased their use of toxic chemical weapons. They have used them before, during and after their operations. They have increased their use of toxic chemical weapons, on the other hand, in order to continue massacring our people. On the other hand, they have used them as supplementary weapons to cope with our attacks because they lack forces. Therefore this use of toxic chemical weapons is, strategically speaking, their weakness; it is not a sign that they are strong.

In addition, they have made efforts to oppress and kill our people and systematically and generally conscript Khmer soldiers, thus causing greater misery to our people. This does not take into account the famine that the Vietnamese enemies have used as a weapon to kill our people and the other forms of massacre against our people that they have successively used.

However, in doing so, the Vietnamese show that they are militarily weak and are losing their strength. They are politically weak because the Kampuchean people's resistance against their war of aggression is mounting in intensity.

The Kampuchean people are resolute in uniting their forces to attack the genocidal Vietnamese enemy aggressors under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government. This is clearly manifested on the Kampuchean battlefield, where 250,000 aggressor troops of the Le Duan authorities and their 50,000 administrators -- a total of 300,000 aggressors -- have been deeply bogged down for the past 3 rainy seasons and 4 dry seasons.

Our Kampuchean people support the Democratic Kampuchean Government and the Patriotic and Democratic Front of the Great National Union of Kampuchea [PDFGNUK]. The Democratic Kampuchean Government and the PDFGNUK are resolutely determined to share life and death with the nation and people and to overcome all obstacles and hardships in leading the people to wage the struggle right on the battlefield. Moreover, our people have become better aware of and more imbued with the PDFGNUK political program and have greater trust in it. They are more enthusiastic in joining forces to struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors in all forms under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government and PDFGNUK.

As for the Vietnamese enemy's plan to surround villages and systematically and generally conscript Khmer soldiers, it is only a last-ditch measure. First, no matter how hard they try, the Vietnamese cannot induce the Khmer people to serve in the army willingly. With the support of the populace, the draftees hide themselves and escape conscription. Second, the few who fail to dodge the draft refuse to go into battle, for they understand very well the slogan of the Democratic Kampuchea National Army and guerrillas, which goes: "Khmers do not take up arms to serve the Vietnamese enemy aggressors; Khmers do not fight fellow Khmers."

In short, this situation shows that, first, the Vietnamese are completely and totally in a military impasse. And second, they are at a complete and total dead end politically.

The Le Duan Vietnamese enemies are not only bogged down on the Kampuchean battlefield; they have more serious difficulties in Vietnam because of the implementation of their aggressive and expansionist schemes and their Kampuchean race extermination policy. This policy has failed due to increased opposition from the Vietnamese people and youths. The Vietnamese economy is crumbling.

The Vietnamese party, army, state and society are plagued with internal rifts.

Serious and profound splits are seen in the war command of the Le Duan authorities as they came unavoidably and unconcealably into the open during the Fifth VCP Congress. The trend of these splits is that they can only become more widespread and profound. In this situation, the Le Duan authorities' policy of aggression against Kampuchea cannot escape final defeat. The only way out for the Le Duan authorities in their attempt to redress their deadlocked situation on the Kampuchean battlefield is to resort to misleading diplomatic maneuvers. An overwhelming number of peace- and justice-loving countries in the world, however, have increasingly realized the true nature of the aggression and expansion by the Le Duan Vietnamese. They see more clearly that they are cat's-paws for the implementation of the Soviet Union's aggressive and expansionist strategy in Southeast Asia. For this reason, both the Le Duan Vietnamese and their Soviet bosses are meeting with greater difficulties in the conduct of their misleading diplomatic maneuvers regarding the Kampuchean question.

On this occasion, the entire Kampuchean nation and people, the Democratic Kampuchean Government and the Democratic Kampuchea National Army and guerrillas would like to express once again their deepest thanks to all peace- and justice-loving countries the world over -- especially the ASEAN countries -- for their assistance and support for the just struggle and national cause of the Kampuchean people and for their consistent activities in the international arena, demanding that the Le Duan Vietnamese abide by the UN resolutions on Kampuchea and the resolution of the international conference on Kampuchea by unconditionally withdrawing all their aggressor troops from Kampuchea and allowing the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny without any outside interference.

We appeal to all these peace- and justice-loving countries to continue to support our Kampuchean people's present struggle, categorically and firmly demanding that the Le Duan Vietnamese withdraw all their aggressor troops from Kampuchea. We appeal to them to continue to check and eliminate all diplomatic nameuvers by the Le Duan Vietnamese and their Soviet bosses, who are attempting to bury the UN resolutions on Kampuchea and avoid implementing them. As long as the peace- and justice-loving countries in the world continue to join forces to bring constant pressure to bear on the Le Duan Vietnamese along with the efforts and struggle of the Kampuchean people under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government right on the battlefield, it is certain that the Le Duan Vietnamese will be forced to withdraw all their forces from Kampuchea. Then Kampuchea will recover its independence and peace. Then the Kampuchean people will be free from the danger of the Le Duan Vietnamese special war of genocide. And then will Southeast Asia be free from the danger of a war caused by the Le Duan Vietnamese aggressors and expansionists and their Soviet bosses.

Dear compatriots and all comrades in arms who are cadres or male combatants and female combatants, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors have been strategically defeated. They continue, however, to struggle and thrash about. They and their Soviet bosses still have many military, political and diplomatic maneuvers in store. Therefore, our struggle still has to go through many more twists and turns. Our entire nation and people must heighten the banner of the great union for rallying national forces on the basis of the PDFGNUK political program in order to enhance the struggle against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, territory swallowers and exterminators of the Kampuchean race in all forms until they are all driven out from our beloved Kampuchean territory.

Every Kampuchean, wherever he may be, of whatever political tendency and political shade, as a Kampuchean and as a Kampuchean patriot, must contribute his force to the best of his ability and possibility and wage all forms of struggle as best he can against the genocidal Vietnamese enemy aggressors until they are driven out from our beloved Kampuchean territory in order to save our Kampuchean nation and race so that our Kampuchean nation and race can survive.

Also on this propitious occasion, the Democratic Kampuchean Government would like to appeal to all comrades in arms who are cadres or male combatants and female combatants of the Democratic Kampuchea National Army and guerrillas, in all units and all battlefields throughout Kampuchea, both at the front and in the rear, to continue to raise the glorious banner of courageous struggle, unite as one and pledge to struggle with determination in the fight against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, annexationists and exterminators of the Kampuchean race until they are driven out from our beloved Kampuchean territory.

The Kampuchean nation and people will certainly prevail over the genocidal Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressor! The Kampuchean nation and race will certainly survive and live forever!

NHAN DAN SCORES U.S. CHEMICAL WARFARE CHARGES

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 15 -- The United States cannot whitewash its crimes with allegations about the use of "toxic chemicals" by Vietnam and the Soviet Union. "The U.S. psychological warfare is brazen to the extreme," the paper [NHAN DAN] says. "And although public opinion has exploded all false evidence by the U.S. State Department, the Reagan administration is bent on continuing this slander campaign."

Noting that Washington's old allegations have been rejected as groundless even by quite a number of American scientists, the paper points out that the White House is trying to imitate Goebbels' propaganda. "Its noisy smear campaign is aimed at warding off mounting protests in the United States and elsewhere against its frenzied efforts to step up the arms race and prepare for chemical warfare," the paper says.

"It must be pointed out," the paper continues, "that the United States has developed and stockpiled various kinds of toxic chemicals and has used them on a large scale. The United States used chemicals weapons in the Korean war. It sprayed Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea with hundreds of thousands of tonnes of chemical poisons, killing hundreds of thousands of people with grave consequences to many generations. Gas bombs made in the United States have been seen in El Salvador."

"So Washington's slander ... is also a smokescreen to cover up the criminal chemical sprays in Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea ... and this malicious campaign, conducted with Beijing's assistance, is part of the U.S. strategy of opposition to the Soviet Union and the socialist community, to international peace, detente and security," NHAN DAN stresses. "Washington already guilty of the biggest chemical war of modern time, is trying to prepare for a bigger one. But it cannot run away from severe condemnation of progressive mankind." the paper concludes.

CORRECTION TO DENIAL OF U.S. CHEMICAL CHARGES

Hanoi VNA in English at 0730 GMT on 16 April transmitted a correction to the item published in the 14 April issue of the DAILY REPORT, page K 1, headlined "Spokesman Denies U.S. Toxic Chemical Charges," making the penultimate paragraph, penultimate line read "1925 Geneva Protocol" (instead of "1925 Geneva Convention").

BK160944 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 5 Apr 82 p 3

[Article by Minister of Labor Dao Thien Thi: "Accelerate the Labor Cooperation Between Vietnam and the Soviet Union]

[Text] The agreement and the protocol on labor cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union, which was signed a year ago, have brought positive and highly significant results for the socialist construction undertaking in the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

The Soviet Union has helped us train cadres, scientists, technicians, economic managers with university and higher qualifications and skilled workers specializing in various necessary economic and technical sectors. In many forms and with many measures, the Soviet Union has sent tens of thousands of specialists to help Vietnam build economic, cultural and scientific and technical establishments and to train and improve the skills of Vietnamese cadres and workers. The Soviet Union has also provided accomodations and education at Soviet universities, colleges, institutes and vociational schools to hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese students, graduate students, researchers and workers. These students, cadres and workers, along with those who have been trained in other fraternal socialist countries and right in our own country, are becoming core forces in industrial enterprises, organs, institutes, and universities and vocational schools and assuming important duties in all sectors of the Vietnamese national economy.

Pursuant to the spirit of the treaty of friendship and cooperation between the two countries, over the past year Vietnam and the Soviet Union have expanded their comprehensive cooperation in a new form -- bilateral labor cooperation.

The Soviet Union has undertaken to help Vietnam train and improve the professional skills of Vietnamese workers at Soviet factories.

They have been trained and improved in sectors and jobs in accordance with the SRV's necessary requirements, especially those for the future years in the stage of accelerating the country's socialist industrialization and the building of the material-technical basis of socialism and of developing many necessary economic and technical sectors and jobs for the national economy.

The form of training and improvement of professional skills consists of studying while practicing in productive labor. Working in Soviet enterprises under the study and work system, Vietnamese workers will, over a period of 5 to 6 years, receive vocational training and improve their professional skills as well as their general knowledge, score for themselves the industrial working style, acquire the qualities and ethics of the working class, mature step by step into professionally skilled workers and become an enlightened and trained work force of the Vietnamese working class. Vietnamese workers working and studying in the Soviet Union for the sake of their love of the Vietnamese fatherland will strive to become professionally skilled in order to return to build their country. At the same time, while engaging in productive labor, they will also contribute to communist construction in the Soviet Union. Associating ardent patriotism with the genuine internationalist spirit, the Soviet Government has provided Vietnamese workers with special care. The Soviet Union gives equal treatment to Vietnamese and Soviet workers. Vietnamese workers enjoy the same rights and interests as their Soviet colleagues in the same job with regard to wages, social welfare and insurance and other rights. The Soviet offices and factories employing Vietnamese apprentices will ensure their material, cultural and spiritual welfare such as accomodations, clothing and other facilities and create a necessary emotional environment for them to work, study and live as comfortably as at home.

This measure of labor cooperation will ensure the basic and advanced training of many skilled workers for Vietnam, enhance the quality of such training, prolong the time for learning skills through actual labor and broaden the range of trades and professions as required by Vietnam's socialist construction.

In the first year of implementing this cooperation, due to the common efforts of both the Soviet and Vietnamese sides, the agreement concluded by the two governments was carried out well, fulfilling the 1981 plan for manpower, work structure, quality standards and time. Thousands of Vietnamese workers -- male and female both skilled and unskilled -- are studying and working on thousands of jobs in Soviet factories in those localities with suitable weather conditions. After a period of stabilizing their living conditions, they have begun improving their skills in productive labor. Many have quickly familiarized themselves with living and working conditions in the Soviet Union. They have rapidly learned the Russian language and understand the working and professional regulations. Many of them have fulfilled the factories' norms and begun to enhance their role in production and win the confidence of the Soviet cadres and people. Wherever they are learning and working -- at engineering factories, coal mines, chemical plants, light industry plants and textile factories in the provinces of Astrakham, Volgograd, Bostov and Zhdanov -- they have received good care and a warm welcome. Leading cadres of various Soviet ministries and sectors, the comrades in charge of joint enterprises and factories and the leaders of local administrations and party organizations, trade unions, youth unions, women's associations and large number of Soviet workers, all consider the Vietnamese workers studying and working in the Soviet Union as their brothers and have provided them with attentive care and favorable conditions in which to live, work and study.

The first results are positive and promising, proving that the policy of labor cooperation is correct.

In 1982 on the basis of the agreements concluded between the two states and experiences derived from the first year of implementation, Vietnam-USSR labor cooperation will be accelerated vigorously by further expanding the range of trades and professions, increasing the quantity of manpower and beginning to experiment with uniform training methods in certain factories with the proper conditions.

We will struggle to organize and correctly implement all the agreed-upon plans and revamp and improve the selection of workers to meet the qualitative and structural requirements of various trades and professions and the management of workers in order to develop the positive aspects of cooperation. We should create all favorable conditions for these workers to study, work and live so that during their stay in the Soviet Union they can quickly mature and improve their standard of knowledge individually and collectively, turning themselves into the core forces of socialist construction in Vietnam in the coming years.

The Vietnamese workers who are studying and working in the Soveit Union have begun to organize themselves in close cooperation with the Soviet trade unions and youth unions. They have maintained and steadily developed the fine traditions of the Vietnamese nation, have acquired the advanced experiences of the Soviet working class and have resolved to be worthy of the attentive care -- full of internationalist feeling -- of the Soviet party, government and people by fulfilling their work and study in the fraternal Soviet Union, striving to achieve their labor, production and study plans in order to greet the success of the Fifth VCP Congress.

VO NGUYEN GIAP CHAIRS FORESTRY SYMPOSIUM

[Text] The Ministry of Forestry, accredited by the Council of Ministers and assisted by agricultural and other responsible sectors, recently organized the first symposium to discuss the combination of forestry and agriculture in production. Attending the symposium were representatives of branches and sectors from the central, provincial, city and district levels and representatives of various state farms, forestry sites and cooperatives.

Vo Nguyen Giap, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, chaired the symposium. Nghiem Xuan Yem, vice chairman of the National Assembly and a number of forestry and agricultural scientiests were also present.

The symposium discussed various key topics, one of which was "Vietnam's great potentials in land, labor and natural resources." Forests are very valuable natural resources of our nation that have not been rationally exploited and used. Their abundance is decreasing, however, since forest areas have become increasingly limited. The irrational exploitation of their natural resource potential and the separation of agriculture from forestry have brought about unsolvable consequences in production and in the people's daily life at present and for the future.

The root causes of this situation are many, yet one of the most important causes is that the forestry sector knows only about forests and pays special attention only to exploitint forests, while ignoring afforestation and protection of forests. By the same token the agricultural sector is interested only in agriculture and does not realize the relationship between forests and agricultural production.

The symposium noted that an urgent requirement at present is to stop tree-falling practices immediately, restore land that has been left fallow and make it fertile in order to turn "an inch of land into an ounce of gold," to produce more materials and accumulate more properties.

Through scientific analysis and concrete reports, the symposium affirmed that only through a mode of production combining both agriculture and forestry can these urgent problems be solved. Various reports made by 15 model units of localities and the report based on an investigation conducted in many areas by the Forestry Science Institute have presented details, effects and processes in building agricultural and forestry production models under several fruitful and diversified forms of combination.

The combination of agriculture and forestry is a strategic task that must be satisfactorily carried out in the mountainous, midlands, delta and coastal areas, on islands and at cooperative, state farms, forestry sites, enterprises, organizations, schools and hospitals, and in the army and by individual families. It is necessary to provide cadres and the people with more information and knowledge on the combination of agriculture and forestry in order to create a seething movement among the masses to carry out this task successfully.

The symposium unanimously agreed that to carry out tasks concerning the combination of agriculture and forestry in the days to come, the following basic goals must be fulfilled:

-- Quickly cover almost 10 million hectares of bare hills and eroded and seriously degenerated forest land with greenery to turn them into fertile lands and increase the greenery coverage over our country's natural area to 40-50 percent in order to balance the ecology firmly and protect the environment;

-- Firmly protect and effectively develop and exploit available forest in order to be able to supply more forestry and agricultural products to the national economy;

-- Contribute to impelmenting policies on establishing a rational division of labor throughout the country, building long-term inhabitant areas and helping the mountainous a areas to gradually catch up with the delta areas;

-- Fully exploit all kinds of land to produce more products and materials, especially wood, food and grain, pharmaceutical substances, goods for export and raw materials for industrial and handicraft sectors.

Well motivated, the people of various natonalities such as Cham, Hor, Ragley and Katou have succeeded in educating, enlightening and returning many of the miscreants to their normal honest living.

In the coastal areas, the People's Public Security Force has cooperated with the border defense forces and the local authorities in consolidating the militia and self-defense forces units. RICE PROTECTION MEASURES, PRODUCTION REPORTED

[Text] All localities have been active in carrying out measures to prevent and control insects in order to protect the winter-spring rice crop. All cooperatives, production collectives, solidarity production teams and peasants throughout the country are concentrating on caring for the crop by actively preventing and controlling insects from now until the harvest.

The recent period of prolonged cloudy weather has provided good conditions for insects, especially rice blast, to develop. In the north, there have been nearly 100,000 hectares of rice affected by insects, an increase of more than 6,000 hectares over the figure recorded by late March. The hardest hit areas are in Thanh Hoa with 21,000 hectares, Ha Nam Ninh with 20,000 hectares, Binh Tri Thien with 20,000 hectares and Thai Binh with 12,000 hectares.

Teams have been organized in many localities to inspect ricefields, classify the quality of rice, determine proper guidelines for tending the rice and detect and actively control insects. In Ha Nam Ninh Province, of the total rice area nearly 50 percent is good, more than 40 percent is fairly well developed and more than 10 percent is poorly developed.

Cooperatives are weeding and applying additional fertilizer to more than 50 percent of the fairly and poorly developed rice areas. Many cooperatives in Ha Nam Ninh, Ha Bac, Vinh Phu, Thanh Hoa, Nghe Tinh and Thai Binh Provinces and Hanoi and Haiphong municipalities have consolidated and directed their vegetation protection teams to coordinate with cooperative members in receiving work quotas for inspecting ricefields, detecting insects and using both chemical and vegetal insecticides to protect the rice.

In protecting vegetation during this crop season, many cooperatives have paid much attention to actively preventing and controlling pests which -- though few and scattered now -- might develop quickly in sunny weather and when the rice grows ears.

In the south, cooperatives' production collectives and peasants are simultaneously caring for the belatedly planted winter-spring rice and harvesting the early planted rice while plowing land for the summer-fall rice cultivation.

As of 5 April the south has harvested 193,000 hectares of winter-spring rice or 35 percent of the total area. The provinces from Thuan Hai southward have harvested 42 percent of the total area. Long An, Tien Giang and Kien Giang Provinces have completed the harvest. The harvest has produced a satisfactory yield, at the rates per hectare of 45 quintals in An Giang, 40 quintals in Dong Thap and 25 quintals each in Tien Giang and Hau Giang. The southern provinces and cities have also plowed 133,000 hectares of land for the summer-fall crop and have thus far planted more than 8,300 hectares of the 1982 crop of summer-fall rice.

AFP ASSESSES INDONESIAN ELECTION, NOTES VIOLENCE

[By Gilles Bertin]

[Text] Jakarta, 16 April (AFP) -- Despite the virtual certainty that the ruling party will win, 27 people have been killed and hundreds injured in sudden and unexpected violence during the opening weeks of campaigning for the Indonesian legislative elections on May 4. The assured success of the ruling Golkar Party has by no means led to public apathy. Indeed, Indonesia's three main political parties are campaigning with a vigour which is increasingly worrisome for the authorities because of the uncontrollable passions aroused. Some of the fatalities that resulted from those passions have been accidental, while others were caused by riots which the Indonesian press has been instructed to cover "with moderation" for security reasons.

The election campaign will cost the country the equivalent of $230 million, not counting the security requirements. The contestants are the Golkar Party, with 232 seats in the present parliament, the Moslem United Development Party (PPP) with 99 seats and the Indonesian Democratic Party (PDI) with 29.

Rioting in Jakarta on March 18 resulted in at least 11 deaths and more than 180 injured. The agitation has now apparently spread to the provinces, where the two opposition parties have sometimes joined forces to resist intimidation by the Golkar Party reported by several Jakarta dailies. Partisans of Golkar's chief rival -- the Moslem PPP -- have since the March 18 riots been blamed for causing the trouble. But, in fact, it is the PPP which has suffered the greater number of deaths. Some Jakarta sources have alleged that four out of eight people killed in a "traffic accident" during a PPP campaign rally on Tuesday [13 April] were murdered by a rival group.

The current trial of persons allegedly responsible for the March 18 riots, as well as that of certain "Moslem extremists," is proof of the government's firmness towards the opposition. Analysts said that such extreme firmness, coming on top of the excessive violence and reported intimidation attempts during the campaign, could spark renewed agitation.

Meanwhile, the two principal formations -- the Golkar and the PPP -- have both been appealing to the Moslem vote, which amounts to 90 percent of the population. The election campaign literature has been strong on slogans and weak on programmes. While the PPP has concentrated single-mindedly on Islam, Golkar in addition to the religious theme, has taken credit for the country's development drive. The PDI, meanwhile, has wooed the voters by claiming the mantle of former president Sukarno, the hero of independence.

Governmental control over the election process means that there will be no major change in the composition of the new parliament, observers said. This is especially true in rural areas where 80 percent of the population resides -- 150 million inhabitants, including 82 million voters. That control even spreads to the campaign posters displayed in the villages, which almost uniformly tout the Golkar Party.

In the face of such strong governmental advantages, the aim of the PPP and PDI parties is to prove that they have obtained increased public support. They hope to do this by increasing the number of their seats in parliament, where the elected members will be balanced by a roughly equal number of nominated members comprising 75 from the armed forces and 25 others.

Despite the prevailing climate of insecurity and the threats made by national security chief Admiral Sudomo, Defense Minister General Andi M. Yusuf said yesterday that security was guaranteed and that anybody could take part in the campaign without constraint.

Observers noted that the armed forces seemed to have adopted a less aggressive and more detached attitude than in the past. The campaign is seen by intellectuals as primarily an opportunity to assess the evolution of the various political forces operating in Indonesia, where several million young people will be voting for the first time.

Further Reportage

[Text] Jakarta, 16 April (AFP) -- Armed troops and policemen fired warning shots into the air today in a bid to disperse a free-for-all between members of the ruling Golkar (Functional Group) Party and its main opposition rival, the Moslem United Development Party (PPP). At least six people were injured in the fight that occurred when a Golkar procession passed through a PPP-controlled suburb of Jembatan Jeling in Grogol, eyewitnesses said. The fight, the biggest since the start of the current general election campaign, involved hundreds of Golkar and PPP youths who battled each other with iron bars and knives. Women and children screamed and fled in panic as troops fired with automatic weapons, the eyewitnesses said. "It is just like a war and it is so chaotic. Everybody ran to avoid stray bullets, they added.

Golkar had just ended a fourth round of campaign rallies with hundreds of truckloads of Golkar youths passing through Jakarta streets, causing prolonged traffic jams. A spokesman of the Jakarta garrison said today firm action would be taken against those trying to cause disorder and trouble in Jakarta. He did not elaborate but he was believed to refer to "shoot on the spot" order if necessary.

National security chief Admiral Sudomo today warned the Moslem newspaper PELITA (TORCH) that it would be banned from publishing if it continued to carry reports that could heat up the current political situation. "The consensus between the press and the government stipulates that the press should not publish news or reports that could cause a stir or might heat up the political situation," he told newsmen. The leading Indonesian news magazine TEMPO has been banned for allegedly violating the consensus.

Meanwhile Information Minister General Ali Murtopo told a Golkar campaign rally that Golkar would move against "those troublemakers" if the authorities failed to deal with them. He was referring to the riots that ruined a Golkar rally here on March 18. The disturbances had been sparked off by a Molotov cocktail attack on the rally. Golkar should not fear to face those trying to disrupt public order, he said, adding "Golkar will act itself if Kopkamtib (Peace Restoration Command) fails to deal with the troublemakers."

FRENCH PRESIDENT MITTERRAND DELIVERS DIET SPEECH

[Text] Tokyo, April 16 (KYODO) -- French President Francois Mitterrand called for closer political, economic and cultural ties between France and Japan in a speech in the Diet Friday. The president said that political contacts between the two countries have been insufficient and he hoped serious bilateral and international problems would be solved through more frequent contacts and closer consultations.

Mitterrand proposed cooperation to help developing countries, overcome the current world economic crisis and also in the field of science and technology. He said inflation, unemployment and balance of payments problems could be solved if all nations cooperated with one another.

The French president, who is to host the forthcoming Versailles summit of seven major non-communist nations, assured Japan that it would not face accusations or a tribunal because of its huge trade surplus with Europe and North America in the summit meeting. But the disputes between Japan and other Western bloc nations should be seriously and frankly discussed to determine how to settle these problems in favor of all parties concerned, he added. Mitterrand also called on Japan to cooperate in developing alternative energy sources since the two countries both suffer from an energy shortage.

His 50-minute speech, including interpretation, was generally welcomed by Diet members and public visitors in the assembly hall of the lower house. It drew a slight stir among the opposition members when he justified France's nuclear force. Mitterrand said that the defense of France was impossible without its own nuclear deterrent.

[Text] Saproro, April 17 (KYODO) -- Two Japanese fishing boats appear to have been captured by Soviet patrol boats in the western Bering Sea, east off Karaginsky Island near the Kamchatka Peninsula, the Maritime Safety Agency said Saturday.

The two boats were identified as the 349-ton No. 81 Yoshi Maru with 25 crew and the 349-ton Fukui Maru carrying 23 crew. They sent emergency signals to the MSA headquarters in Otaru saying they were being inspected by a Soviet warship around 4:30 a.m. Friday. No further communication was received, however. The two fishing boats left Kushiro port early April to fish in waters off Kamchatka Peninsula until early May.

Laying the foundation of the revolutionary movement in Korea in your teenage years, you organized and led the patriotic movement and heroic struggle of the Korean people against the foreign imperialist rule and for freedom and independence and, after liberation, organized and led the struggle for carrying out the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution, laying the foundation of a new state and building a socialist society.

All the people who love peace, independence and progress know well and highly appreciate the tireless, dynamic activities you conducted, leading the heroic struggle of your admirable people against the imperialist aggression in the 1950-1953 fatherland liberation war, and your vast work later in the historic next stage for the reconstruction of the country to turn your country into a more prosperous socialist state with steadily developing modern industry and agriculture and rich national culture.

YIM CHUN-CHU REPORT AT 14 APR PYONGYANG MEETING

[Report by Yim Chun-chu, member of Political Bureau of KWP Central Committee and secretary of the Central People's Committee, at 14 April meeting held at Pyongyang Indoor Stadium to celebrate Kim Il-song's 70th birthday — live]

[Text] Comrades: Today our people greet the 70th birthday of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, proud that they live in an era of prosperity and grandeur, unprecedented in the history of their fatherland spanning several thousand years. [applause]

Greeting this day, the people are emotionally stirred and teeming with boundless admiration for the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who has been devoting himself only to the sacred cause of the fatherland and the revolution and has provided them with today's glory and happiness. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been waging an arduous and long revolutionary struggle since his early years, has brought about a radical change in the destiny of our people by his tireless energetic struggle and has made immortal achievements for the country and the revolution. [applause]

On this auspicious occasion celebrating the 70th birthday of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, reflecting upon the boundless admiration of comrade delegates and our people, I extend the greatest honor and the warmest congratulations to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who created the chuche idea and, under its banner, has been leading our revolution and construction only to victory and glory. [applause]

Comrades: The Korean people's struggle for independence, self-reliance and socialism was started -- in the true sense of the word -- and was rewarding, thanks to the glorious revolutionary activities of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and, under his wise leadership, it scored brilliant victories and successes. [applause]

As shown by the people's revolutionary struggle for independence, it is the masses of working people that create and develop history. However, it is not by themselves that they have become a powerful force advancing history and developing society. Only when they are under the leadership of an outstanding leader who correctly organizes the struggle and leads it to victory can the masses of working people vigorously carry out the revolutionary movement, establish national independence and achieve social liberation and progress.

Since the day when the imperialists, including the Japanese imperialists, stretched their hands of aggression to our country, our people had continuously waged, in various forms and ways, the struggle against foreign aggression and for national sovereignty; the struggle became broader in scale in the 1920's when the working class started, though gradually, to show up on the stage of the struggle and the communist movement came into existence.

When faced with the enemies' bestial suppression, Korean communist movement and the anti-Japanese struggle for national liberation, however, could not but fizzle because of a critical vulnerability in that they did not have an outstanding leader who would set forth scientific strategies and tactics and lead them to victory. The communist movement and the movement for national liberation in our country did not greet a new era of [words indistinct] until the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song embarked on the road of revolution, assuming full responsibility for the destiny of the country and the people. [applause]

The respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song is the great pioneer of the revolutionary cause of chuche, who, at the time of national sufferings when the whole land was wailing over its lost sovereignty, saved our communist and national liberation movements from crisis and, under the banner of independence, opened up the new epoch of revolution. [applause]

In the early phase of his revolutionary activities, the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song reviewed the historical experiences and arduous communist and national liberation movements and applied to them Marxism-Leninism, thus opening up a new chapter of the revolution. In the autumn of 1920 he formed the Down-With-Imperialism Union, a true communist revolutionary organization established for the first time in our country, and laid diwn the great program in which he elucidated the immediate tasks and the ultimate goal of the Korean revolution. [applause]

The formation of the Down-With-Imperialism Union and the promotion of its revolutionary programs were historic events which opened up a new era of the chuche revolutionary cause advancing under the banner of independence in our country. At that point, our party and revolution began to take root firmly and vigorously. With a deep insight into the requirement of the times and the aspirations of the masses on the thorny path of the Korean revolution, the great Comrade Kim Il-song paved the true road on which to advance the revolution independently by going to the working masses and relying on their strength; and created the chuche idea, the correct guiding ideology of revolution.

Thanks to the great chuche idea, the communist and national liberation movements in Korea were put on a new track, which was distinct from that of the previous revolutionary movement, and became able to march forward victoriously, guided by this correct idea. [applause]

In the course of glorious struggle, the great Comrade Kim Il-song fostered the ranks of young communists and genuine revolutionaries who would carry on the Korean revolution in the new ear and constantly expanded the revolutionary forces by making them cadres, thus reliably advancing our revolution along the road of chuche. [applause]

The Korean revolution, which had long undergone various difficulties because it lacked correct programs for struggle and guidance ideology, entered a new era of victorious progress by relying on the strength of the people with a scientific guidance ideology, programs for struggle and revolutionary vanguard organizations under the guidance of the great leader. [applause]

Comrades, for more than half a century, ever since his teens when he initiated the glorious revolutionary cause of chuche by laying the ideological and theoretical basis of the Korean revolution and preparing the backbone of the chuche-oriented revolutionary forces, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been leading the revolutionary struggle of our people to brilliant victory, bearing the weight of the revolution. [applause]

Thanks to the independent line of the Korean revolution set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and his excellent leadership, a great change took place in the national liberation struggle and the communist movement of our country in the 1930's. [applause]

Correctly defining the character of the revolution and establishing a scientific strategy and tactics in victoriously developing the revolution was a very important problem in the early period of our revolution. Based on his scientific analysis of the basic duty of our revolution and its relationship with society and class, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song defined the character of the Korean revolution as an anti-imperialist and antifeudalistic revolution for democracy at the historic (Kallum) Conference in the summer of 1932. At the same time, he clearly set forth the independent line and policy of the Korean revolution, including the line for anti-Japanese armed struggle, to cope with the ever-increasing colonial, military and fascist rule of the Japanese imperialists.

In this period, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song built the first chuche-type party organization in our country with the new young communist core elements whom he had personally fostered through the practice of arduous struggle and, through this organization, organized party organizations in many places. Through these party organizations, the great leader vigorously pushed ahead with preparations for founding a new revolutionary party by thoroughly implementing the independent line of the Korean revolution and firmly building a new revolutionary force.

Under the situation created at that time, in which the social and class conflict between the Japanese imperialists and the Korean people became extremely acute and the anti-Japanese struggle of the masses was gradually developing into an independent struggle, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth an outstanding policy for waging an organized armed struggle with guerrilla warfare as its basic form and formed the anti-Japanese people's guerrilla units, the first genuine military of our people in our country, with advanced workers, peasants and patriotic youths.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's formation of the anti-Japanese people's guerrilla army and his launching of the anti-Japanese armed struggle were epochal events which led our people's anti-Japanese struggle to a new higher stage -- the armed struggle, a paramount form of the struggle for the liberation of a colonial nation. [applause]

Our people's anti-Japanese armed struggle against the outrageous Japanese imperialists with formidable economic and military power was a heroic struggle which could be waged only under the leadership of the great Comrade Kim Il-song with the extraordinary wisdom, iron will, peerless courage, revolutionary driving force and noble idea. At the same time, it was an arduous struggle that could be victoriously organized and carried out only by the art of the outstanding military operation and the revolutionary leadership of the leader -- the legendary hero. [applause]

The anti-Japanese armed struggle against the outrageous Japanese aggressors, under grim circumstances in which there was only the support and encouragement of the revolutionary people and there was no interior support or support of a regular army, faced mounting trials from its inception. However, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with the slogan "As fish cannot survive outside water, without the people a guerrilla army cannot survive," always depended on the support of the people to overcome difficulties and led the Korean People's Revolutionary Army to victory by crossing numerous death lines. [applause]

Braving all dangers, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song exposed and smashed the maneuvers of the Japanese imperialists and flunkeyists scheming to destroy the revolutionary ranks, thus extricating the Korean revolution from crisis. With the chuche guerrilla tactics and strategy, he took the initiative in the battles and repeatedly attacked the Japanese aggressors, driving them to the defensive.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song victoriously organized and commanded the historic advance to the land of the fatherland by the Korean People's Revolutionary Army, the Pochonbo battle, the march of trial, the Musan area operation, the operation northeast of Mt Paektu, and all other battles and operations. [applause]

By meshing the armed struggle against the Japanese aggressors with the political struggle to establish an organizational and ideological foundation for founding the party and to rally people on the front of the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song led the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to ceaseless upsurge, building a firm foundation for the future of the Korean revolution. [applause]

In the severe flames of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song established a firm foundation for founding our party -- the force of guidance which would lead the Korean revolution to victory. Ever since the great Comrade Kim Il-song's formation of the (?primary level) party organization composed of communists of the new generation in the summer of (?1930), the work to establish an organizational and ideological foundation of the party was vigorously advanced. As a result, in the late (?1930's) party organizational and guidance system, which through the party committee of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army guaranteed the unity of the Korean people, was established and all the conditions for founding the party were provided. [applause]

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song worked out the 10-point program of the fatherland restoration society -- the chuche-oriented program of the Korean people and, based on this, rallied the people of all strata on the united anti-Japanese national front. By so doing, he achieved the grand unity of the nation and formed a chuche-oriented revolutionary force. During the anti-Japanese armed struggle, the name of the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song -- who assumed responsibility for the desire of the nation, rallied and encouraged people to the struggle front for liberation under the anti-Japanese banner, and repeatedly defeated the Japanese aggressors -- was a symbol of the dignity and prestige of the nation and a banner of grand national unity. [applause]

During the anti-Japanese armed struggle, based on the principle of proletarian internationalism, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song actively supported and encouraged the revolutionary struggle of the communists and people of the neighboring country and made an outstanding contribution to the development of the united anti-imperialism front and to the expansion and consolidation of the international revolutionary force. [applause]

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song led the heroic anti-Japanese armed struggle of over 15 years to victory and finally achieved the brilliant cause of national liberation. Thus, he unfolded before our people a wide road for the creation of new life and established the glorious revolutionary tradition, the eternal pillar of our party and revolution. [applause]

With the victory in the anti-Japanese armed struggle, our people have been able to free themselves from the status of colonial subjugation and become the masters of their destiny, and with the rich experiences and wherewithal attained in the course of construction of the party, government and armed forces, we have been able to push ahead with construction of a new fatherland and new society. The victory in the anti-Japanese armed struggle was a historic event which opened a large crack in the imperialist colonial system of the West and contributed greatly to annihilating the Asian shock brigade of international fascism. [applause]

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the savior of the nation who brought about the country's liberation, which all fellow countrymen aspired to. He opened up a new path of the Korean revolution with the intelligence of a great thinker and organized and led the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary war to victory with the leadership capability of an outstanding politician and the commanding art of a distinguished and brilliant commander. [applause]

For the people liberated from the bondage of imperialist colonialism, choosing the path to follow and the kind of society to build is a fundamental problem arising in consolidating their national independence and achieving social progress and prosperity. After national liberation, our people, under the serious situation of confronting the U.S. imperialists -- the chieftain of world imperialism -- who divided our country and occupied the southern half of our fatherland, had to follow the path of building a new society and, in the fierce struggle against enemies at home and abroad, push ahead with the revolution and construction. The situation following liberation, with acute confrontation between democracy and anticommunism, needed correct revolutionary lines and struggle policies for the people to be organized and mobilized to the struggle for building a new fatherland and to unite them as a political force.

With deep insight into the prevailing situation and the requirements of our revolutionary development, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song advanced a correct line on building a democratic, independent and sovereign state, rich and powerful, by our people themselves, and put forth a wise policy for founding a revolutionary democratic base and for firmly organizing the chuche-oriented revolutionary force in the northern half of the republic. [applause]

This was the fairest line for nation building suitable to the character of our revolution, to our people's aspiration and the prevailing situation. This was also a most revolutionary line which enabled us to crush the splittist maneuvers of the enemy and take the lead in the struggle for reunification and independence and building a new society by rallying the broad masses of all strata. [applause]

In the course of leading the building of a new fatherland, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has directly most of the efforts in founding the party -- the staff office of the revolution -- and opened up an epochal change in the development of the Korean revolution by founding our party in a timely manner on the basis of the firm organizational and ideological foundation accumulated in the flames of the anti-Japanese revolution. [applause]

The foundation of our party was the brilliant fruition of the heart-rendering struggle of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who had earlier provided the roots of our party under the banner of the down-with-imperialism movement and who has devoted his all to the foundation of the chuche-type party in the arduous days of the anti-Japanese revolution. [applause]

With the foundation of our party, our people have had a new type of revolutionary party led by the chuche idea and have been able to energetically carry out the revolution and construction under its leadership. The issue of sovereignty is the fundamental issue in the revolution and is an issue of life or death determining its success or failure and those of the construction works. By embodying the line of the chuche-type people's revolutionary government, which he put forth in the period of anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, into the new conditions prevailing at the time, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the people's government -- a new type of government -- based on the worker-peasant alliance led by the working class and on the united front of the broad masses. [applause]

With the people's government, which substantially guarantees people's freedom and rights, founded by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our people have become the true masters of their government and have powerful weapons for the revolution and construction. While endlessly consolidating our people's government in accordance with the demand of revolutionary development and, on the basis of this, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has carried out the historic cause of founding the DPRK, a country of workers and peasants, amid the nationwide struggle to crush the maneuvers of the enemies at home and abroad. [applause]

With the republic founded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our people have become powerful and dignified people of an independent and sovereign country which nobody can slight, no longer a people maltreated and despised, robbed of their own country by alien imperialists; they have been able to successfully push ahead with the revolutionary struggle and construction works, easily defeating the agitations of the imperialists and reactionaries.

By developing and consolidating in good time the revolutionary armed forces of our people, born out of the anti-Japanese flames, into modern, regular armed forces, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has firmly guaranteed victory for our revolutionary cause by the armed forces. [applause]

With the historic cause of founding the state, party and army carried out by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the important problems determining the destiny of the revolution in our country have been brilliantly solved. It was the natural demand of our country's socio-economic development in the period following liberation to thoroughly carry out the anti-imperialist, antifeudal democratic revolution, and it was an urgent task faced by our party and people's government.

Basing himself on the noble experience accumulated in the course of guerrilla warfare during the period of anti-Japanese armed struggle, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forth an original policy on practicing democratic reforms and, by brilliantly embodying it, cleaned up the imperialist colonial ruling system and its legacies, thus opening a broad path for democratic development of society. Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, all the plans for democratization, including land reform and nationalization of industries, were thoroughly put into practice after liberation. As a result, colonial and feudalistic remnants were removed from all domains of social life, the people's democratic system was established and the people's aspiration worthy of centuries for reviving and developing the economy and culture, and building a new, free and happy life, has been realized. [applause]

Thus the northern half of the republic has been turned into a powerful base of the Korean revolution by our party and people, who have been able to lead the revolution to vigorous upsurge even under complicated and chaotic conditions, have overcome the fierce class struggle and the trial of the fatherland liberation war and have firmly defended our people's sovereignty and revolutionary gains. Indeed, in the arduous period of building the base of a new society, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the party of the working class, the state and the regular armed forces in a timely manner and erected a powerful revolutionary fortification in the northern half by brilliantly implementing our democratic revolution. This accomplishment of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song to create a new independent life in the early period following liberation was a great historic feat which firmly guaranteed an invincible future for the people. [applause]

Our people's just fatherland liberation war waged against the U.S. imperialist aggressors was an acute military confrontation between the independent people and imperialist aggressors, between the revolutionary army and counterrevolutionary army of aggression. It was also another serious life or death ordeal for our people.

In the grave period when the fatherland and people were faced with great danger, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, bearing the entire burden of the front and rear lines organized and mobilized the entire party, army and people in the sacred struggle for defeating the enemies under the militant slogan of "Everything for victory."

Giving priority to enhancing the revolutionary ideological awareness of our people from the first day of the war, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song firmly armed all the people and soldiers of the people's army with the chuche idea and lofty class awareness and encouraged them to display their courage and mass heroism in the fight against the large numbers of troops of the imperialist aggressors, cherishing revolutionary optimism and confidence in the victory by the people and soldiers. [applause]

Putting forward the chuche-type military strategy and tactics corresponding to our nation's concerete situation and terrain in every step of war, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song personally visited the front and took the lead in commanding all operations and battles, large or small, of the people's army. He crushed the enemy, superior in number and technology, with his superior strategy and tactics. Thus, he enabled the people's army to deal critical blows to the enemy, seizing the initiative throughout the entire period of war.

Thanks to the chuche-type strategies and tactics created and implemented by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and to the outstanding leadership of the leader, who victoriously organized and commanded the operations and battles of the people's army, our people and people's army beat back the armed aggression by the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys and gloriously defended the freedom and independence of the fatherland. [applause]

In the Korean war, our people dealt an ignominious defeat to the U.S. imperialists for the first time in history and put them on the decline. This victory proved the valuable truth that a people who are under the guidance of the party and the leader and rise in a just war for the freedom and independence of their country are unconquerable, and that they can defeat any imperialist aggressors and defend the sovereignty of their nation. It also greatly inspired the anti-imperialist, anti-U.S. struggle as a whole to a new upsurge. [applause]

Because of this brilliant victory, our people are widely known as a heroic people who have beat down U.S. imperialists, and the august name of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is cherished in the hearts of the people as the ever-victorious, iron-willed brilliant commander who defeated two strong imperialist enemies in one generation and won guerrilla and modern wars and as a symbol of victory in the anti-imperialist struggle. [applause]

The course along which our party and people carried out the socialist revolution and socialist construction after the war was an immeasurable arduous and difficult one. However, this was a proud course in which we won a great victory while we traveled an unexplored road. It was indeed complex and difficult to build socialism on a land where everything had been reduced to ashes as a result of war, without going through the normal development of capitalism, and inheriting only an outdated economy. In the difficult postwar days, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song armed the entire party and people with firm belief that we could build a new life as long as there were a party, government, people and territory and vigorously inspired our party and people to magnificent construction work and serious social reform by putting forward unique revolutionary lines and policies for struggle.

The question as to how we should set up the direction and lines for economic construction after the war was the key to rapidly rehabilitating the socialist national economy, upgrading the people's living and implementing tasks for construction of the foundation of socialism. In view of the actual conditions of our country after the war, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song defined the basic line of economic construction -- giving priority to heavy inudstry while at the same time developing light industry and agriculture -- and energetically mobilized our party and people to carry it out.

The basic enconomic construction line of simultaneously developing light industry and agriculture while placing priority on heavy industry was a just one, reflecting the lawful requirements and potential for economic development in our country. This line was a revolutionary one reflecting our party's firm and invariable stand for rapidly building a self-reliant national economy based on the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance. [applause]

Under the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's wise leadership, our people successfully accomplished the difficult, vast task of rehabilitation in a short span of time by repelling the hindering maneuvers of the enemies at home and abroad and by thoroughly implementing this line, thus laying a solid foundation for a self-reliant national economy. They overcame the difficult situation in the postwar period and very rapidly developed the overall national economy. Reforming the timeworn production relations in a socialist manner is a key to the socialist revolution. Calling for the socialist reform of our people, the great leader immediately set forth both the task of reforming production relations in a socialist manner in the postwar period, when there was a large revolutionary force capable of performing this task, and the unique policy for agricultural collectivization -- one for remodelling all the people in a socialist manner prior to technological reform.

This policy was a revolutionary one reflecting the principle of chuche Korea, and it was the most correct one reflecting the reality of our country in the postwar period. [applause] This policy was a positive one which paved a broad way for rapidly developing the production capacity and achieving a technical revolution by reforming production relations in a socialist manner in accordance with the mature requirements for social and economic development, for strengthening the revolutionary base in the northern half and for expediting the pan-national victory of the revolution by firmly fostering revolutionary forces. [applause]

Without being bound to the existing theory that agricultural collectivization cannot be achieved before the realization of industrialization and by relying on the prepared solid revolutionary forces and on the people's lofty revolutionary zeal, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song assisted in vigorously forging ahead with the movement to achieve agricultural collectivization. Setting forth a unique policy for reforming urban manual industry and capitalist commerce and industry in a socialist manner along with agricultural collectivization, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wisely led the struggle to achieve these ends.

With the implementation of this policy, our people won a historic victory in their socialist transformation of production relations in 4 to 5 years -- despite the low level in the development of production capacity -- and a most advanced socialist system was established in our country, eliminating the sources of exploitation and oppression forever. [applause]

The complete reform of production relations in a socialist manner was a great social innovation in our country, helping the working people enjoy social and political sovereignty and was a great victory in continuously developing the country's production capacity in a planned, balanced manner and in raising the political and ideological unity of all the people onto a new social foundation based on the union of agricultural working people of Korea under the leadership of the working class. [applause]

How to forge ahead with the revolution and construction following the establishment of the socialist system is a new question in carrying out the revolution in our era. This is an important question which is related to solidifying and developing the socialist system and to the destiny of the cause of socialism and communism. Regarding the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural -- as the basic content of the revolution which the party and the government of the working class should carry out following the establishment of the socialist system and as continuous revolutionary tasks which should be performed until the building of communism, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth a unique policy for achieving the complete victory of socialism and attaining the ideological and material fortresses of communism by simultaneously and vigorously forging ahead with the class struggle, economic construction and the work of remodelling men and nature. He wisely led the struggle of our party and people to achieve this end. [applause]

With the setting forth of the great idea and policy for achieving the two fortresses of communism by carrying out the three revolutions, the strategic goal and basic method for the construction of socialism and communism were delineated and our party and people were able to vigorously expedite the construction of socialism and communism with a clear struggle program and guideline. [applause]

The people are the masters of their won society, and remodelling men's ideology along communist lines is decisive to successfully carrying out socialist and communist construction. Regarding revolutionization and working classization of the whole society by implementation of the ideological revolution as the paramount task to face a socialist country after it has established its socialist system, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wisely led the arduous and complicated task of remodelling men's ideology and will.

Thanks to the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who put forth and successfully solved the issue of ideological revolution in an original way, our party has been able to endlessly renovate all domains of socialist construction by always making the masses display their revolutionary zeal and creative positiveness in the whole course of revolution and construction; it has been able to make a great leap in implementing the arduous task of remodelling men by rearing the entire people to be ardent communists endlessly loyal to the party and revolution and who devotedly struggle for the fatherland and people. [applause]

In the struggle to implement the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's line of ideological revolution the whole society has been imbued with the chuche idea and the unity and cohesion of our party and the revolutionary ranks have been strengthened. Today, our party and people are united closely around the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song on the basis of the chuche idea. This unity is most solid and unbreakable. The ranks of scores of loyal young communists knit together at the dawn of our revolution have now grown into an unconquerable force of millions of revolutionaries who are united rockfirm. This is a brilliant result attained by the Korean communist movement over a period of more than half a century. It is a sure guarantee for the final victory of the revolutionary cause of chuche. [applause]

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who put forth the chuche-type socialist industrialization line and the original policy on technical renovation and led them to a thorough implementation, led people to complete the industrialization task in the short period of 10 years -- even under the arduous condition of accelerating economic work while at the same time undertaking defense construction in preparation against the aggressive maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists -- and changed our country from a backwarded colonial agricultural country into a socialist industrial one. [applause]

Transformation of our country into a socialist industrial country was a very significant event in the struggle to accelerate socialist and communist construction in our country and for achieving the ultimate victory of the Korean revolution. With the establishment of self-reliant and modern industries and with all the sectors of national economy, including the rural economy, equipped with modern technology, our country has finally eliminated economic and technological backwardness, a legacy of the old society, and entered the ranks of advanced countries; our people have taken the international stage with pride as a powerful and developed nation. [applause]

To correctly solve the rural problems is a prerequisite and a fundamental problem for the continued development of the revolutionary cause of the working class. On the basis of his deep insight into the final demand of our revolutionary development and the natural course of socialist rural construction, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forth the thesis on affairs of our country's socialist rural community, providing clear-cut answers to serious questions raised by the revolutionary practice of our era. [applause]

By firmly following the road pointed out by the great rural thesis, encyclopedic work of principles and policies for socialist solutions of rural problems, we have been able to achieve brilliant successes in the struggle to finally solve farmers' problems and agricultural problems and to turn our rural communities into socialist rural communities rich and good to live in. [applause]

Cultural construction is an important factor for socialist construction. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by wisely leading socialist cultural construction, has brought epochal development to all sectors of socialist national cultural construction, including literature, art and education. With the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song putting forth an original ideology on education chuche-type programs for education and the socialist educational thesis and wisely leading their brilliant emobidment, a brilliant success has been achieved in our country's educational development. [applause]

Today, as a result of putting into practice the policy of 11-year compulsory education in our country, the entire new generation is receiving a complete, mid-level compulsory education, until they reach working age.

With a large army of 1 million intelligentsia fully grown, the question of national cadres, has been solved smoothly. [applause]

Putting forth revolutionary and original lines and policies in literature and art, and leading their thorough implementation, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has developed our literature and art into a most party-minded and popular literature and art and has opened up a great new era for the development of chuche-oriented literature and art. [applause]

With the successful implementation of the historic tasks of socialist revolution and construction under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our nation, which had been humiliated and trampled upon because of its poverty and backwardness, has now become a mighty and dignified socialist country politically independent, economically self-reliant, capable of defending itself, and also celebrated for its brilliant culture. [applause]

This is a great victory which our people have won through a hard-fought struggle, in the spirit of self-reliance, and which has influenced the contemporary world in the glorious era of the worker's party led by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. This is an epoch-making change that has taken place in the position of our country and in the status of our people. [applause]

The whole course of remodelling all the sectors of social life, including politics, economy and culture, by implementing the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture, is closely linked to the struggle to strengthen party leadership and state guidance in accordance with deepening and developing socialist construction. Socialist and communist construction, which is accompanied by a fierce class struggle, is a serious process of change destined to solve difficult and complicated problems. This can be successfully carried out only under the condition of strengthening the leadership of the workers' party and the foundation of the socialist state.

With a thorough analysis of the experience gained by our people in their revolutionary struggle and on the natural requirements of socialist and communist construction, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has put forth an outstanding policy to strengthen the party's leadership under the socialist system and to further accelerate the revolutionary struggle and construction work by firmly rallying the broad masses around the party, and has wisely led the struggle to implement this policy.

Regarding the establishment of a unitary ideological system in the party as the basic line for building the party, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has strengthened our party and endlessly enhanced its leadership role by clearly elucidating all the problems arising in party work and party activities. And by freshly defining the position and role of the working organizations under the socialist system and turning all the working organizations into ideological and educational organizations, he has educated and remodelled the workers to be communists so that they can strengthen their blood-sealed ties with the party even more.

In order to consolidate and develop the already established socialist system, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had the socialist constitution written -- a codification based on chuche -- and other laws and regulations based on it. By having these thoroughly implemented, he further consolidated the foundation of our state and society and enhanced the function and role the people's government has played in socialist and communist construction.

On improving the guidance system for the party, the government and economic agencies under the socialist system as a key to successfully building socialism and communism, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who invented an anti-Japanese guerrilla type work method during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle period by implementing a revolutionary mass line, helped enact a revolutionary change in the work system and method for the party, the government and economic agencies to meet the requirements for the development of the reality. [applause]

Having insight into the requirements of new circumstances in which the socialist reform of production relations was completed and in which socialist construction was comprehensively advanced, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song invented the great Chongsan-ri spirit and method and comprehensively established a socialist economic management system, such as the Taean work system -- the materialization of this spirit and method -- a new agricultural guiding system, helping enact a basic change in guiding and managing the work of all party, government and economic agencies and the people's economy. [applause]

Thanks to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's brilliant achievements in building the party and the government and in solving questions concerning the construction of socialism and communism, victories have been achieved in our revolution, which has rapidly advanced since the establishment of the socialist system, and our party and people have possessed a powerful weapon capable of more vigorously forging ahead with the revolution and construction. [applause]

Regarding the work of imbuing society with the chuche idea to meet the new requirements of the situation in which the revolution has greatly advanced as the general mission of our revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has wisely led our party and the people in the struggle to achieve this end. [applause]

The work of imbuing society with the chuche idea is a great communist program designed to achieve the independence of the working people by developing all members of society into true chuche-type communists and by remodelling all social sectors, including economic and cultural sectors, in accordance with the requirements of chuche. [applause]

By setting forth the great communist program and by correctly solving basic questions influencing the destiny of our party and the revolution, the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song has provided a factor helping our people victoriously complete the chuche revolution cause generation after generation. Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party and people have vigorously struggled to imbue society with the chuche idea, with confidence in the future and in victory. Through this magnificent, historic struggle, they have performed many successive miracles and exploits in changing the appearance of the atherland. [applause]

Thanks to the policy for the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the struggle of our party and people to implement this policy, new progress has been made in achieving the cause of the fatherland's reunification. Holding the great leader in high esteem as the sun of the nation, encouraged by the achievements attained in the northern half of the republic in socialist construction and under the unprecedentedly outrageous, tyrannical colonial rule by the U.S. imperialists and the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique, the South Korean revolutionaries and patriotic people have continuously and tenaciously struggled to achieve the democratization of society and the fatherland's reunification.

Thanks to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's wise leadership, a great change has taken place in the history of the overseas compatriots, who have suffered all forms of humiliation and persecution. All overseas compatriots, including the 700,000 Koreans in Japan, have vigorously struggled to achieve democratic national rights and the fatherland's reunification with the sense of endless pride to have a magnificent socialist fatherland.

Always viewing the Korean revolution as a component of the world revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has closely combined the national mission with the international mission in the revolution and has greatly contributed to the cause of the international working class and the oppressed people for independence and against imperialism and to the comprehensive development of the international revolutionary movement. The chuche idea -- the ideological and theoretical summing up of the revolutionary movement in our country -- is a great revolutionary idea, a powerful weapon helping the working people view the world in a scientific manner, to reform it in a revolutionary manner and to pioneer their own destiny in an independent and creative manner. [applause]

The chuche idea is a new outlook on the world with man as a central figure -- that is, one based on a philosophical principle that man is the center of everything and should decide everything -- and is a revolutionary theory delineating the unique rule of the operation of society and history and a guiding principle of the revolution and construction. [applause]

The revolutionary theory established by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a chuche-type theory which has elucidated the theory of revolution and construction and strategy and tactics, focusing on the working people. KYODO CITES HYON CHUN-KUK ON KIM CHONG-IL

[Text] Pyongyang, April 19 (KYODO) -- North Korean President Kim Il-song's son, Chong-il, is still the "only one" to succeed the 70-year-old communist leader, a government spokesman said Sunday. But Hyon Chun-kuk quickly added that the junior Kim is regarded as heir apparent not because of the son-father relations but because of his "embodiment" of the president's revolutionary spirits.

The remarks, made in a meeting between Hyon and visiting Japanese journalists, followed a parliamentary session earlier this month, which did not name the young Kim as vice president, contrary to earlier, widespread speculation. This has raised fresh speculation that Chong-il's political future is now in an eclipse because of apparent domestic resistance against his elevation to a powerful government post.

Hyon indirectly denied the view saying: "Kim Chong-il is still in charge of drawing up policies on behalf of the communist party and the government." He is a policy aide to his father in "every domain," including diplomacy and national defense, the spokesman added. The young Kim is now ranked second in the Korean Workers Party only behind Secretary General Kim Il-song.

Hyon, president of the (North) Korea-Japan Friendship Association, also said the 40-year-old Chong-il is gifted with "outstanding leadership" and "lofty character."

The Japanese newsmen are here to cover stories on birthday ceremonies of the president who turned 70 last Thursday. The birthday festivities were declared "the most important event" since North Korea's national founding in 1948.

CHURCH COUNCIL DEMANDS RECALL OF U.S. OFFICIALS

[Text] In a statement issued today, the Korean Churches' Social Missionary Council, a joint organization of Protestants and Roman Catholics, demanded that the U.S. ambassador to Korea, Richard Walker, and the commander of U.S. forces in Korea, John Wickham, be sent back to their country.

The statement criticizes bribery in the U.S. rice import scandal, which has been exposed as a groundless charge, and the issue of imports to Korea of canned salmon produced in Alaska, expressing anti-U.S. sentiments contending we cannot live well because of foreign nations.

The statement also supports the hostile actions taken against the United States by ringleaders of the arson at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan.

CHOSON ILBO QUESTIONS BUSH ASSEMBLY ADDRESS

[By Chu Ton-sik, assistant editor of the political desk]

2Text] The National Assembly is now studying the possibility of convening an extraordinary session so that U.S. Vice President George Bush, slated to visit Korea on April 25, can deliver a speech. Vice president Bush has a tight itinerary, arriving in Korea on April 25 and leaving on the next day.

According to this itinerary, there is no time allowed for him to take the floor. Thus, the National Assembly is now reportedly negotiating with the U.S. Embassy on extending his stay in Korea for one more day for his speech, according to Rep. Yi Chong-chan, floor leader of the Democratic Justice Party and chairman of the National Assembly Steering Committee. It appears that our parliament has assumed a considerably active posture to hear a speech by Vice President Bush.

It is international practice that in the event of a state visit by the head of state or the prime minister of an ally, he is given an opportunity to deliver a speech at the National Assembly. This is intended to give him the honor of being welcomed "in the name of the people," and to provide him an opportunity to take the floor and personally emphasize his country's friendship before the people.

Since the National Assembly of a country represents the popular opinion in that country, it is the highest honor for him to deliver an address there. But just for that reason, much prudence is needed. Such an opportunity is not necessarily given to every visiting head of state. Even in the case of VIP's, it is hardly given to someone who is neither the head of state nor the chief executive. In this respect, there seems to be room enough to consider whether giving Vice President Bush an opportunity to take the floor, indeed, agrees with international practice and the dignity of the nation.

First of all, Vice President Bush in his official position is neither the head of state nor the Cabinet head. In some quarters, they say that he may deliver a speech in his capacity as the president of the Senate, and not as the vice president. It is true that he concurrently holds the Senate presidency. Bush is visiting Korea, however, in his capacity not as the president of the U.S. Senate but as the vice president of the U.S., as is clear from the White House announcement and an announcement made by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

His capacity in visiting Korea is unmistakably clear in the fact that he is visiting not at the invitation of National Assembly Speaker Chong Nae-hyok, but at that of Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun. It is, therefore, illogical that they are going to make arrangements for this speech on the floor in his capacity as the head of the Senate.

Our parliament does not lack the precedent of the vice president of a foreign country taking the floor. Former U.S. Vice President Richard Nixon under former President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1953 visited Korea and delivered a speech on the floor. But it took place shortly after the Korean war, when this nation was heavily dependent on the U.S. militarily, politically, and economically -- to a shameful degree as we now think back. The nation literally could not afford to think about its prestige and international practice. In this respect, we object to following now the precedent set at that time.

Even if there had been many examples in this regard, the problem remains all the same. It cannot help upgrade the nation's prestige abroad to obsequiously open the parliament for such speeches. If so, it will be proper to break the precedent once for all and set a new one.

It is hardly understandable that the National Assembly is reportedly asking the U.S. Embassy to extend the stay of Vice President Bush for his speech at the parliament.

The U.S. vice president's visit this time has particular significance in view of the special relationship between Korea and the U.S. and the historical sense of the centennial of diplomatic relations between the two nations being celebrated this year.

This hospitality may be of practical assistance in the future, assuming that Vice President Bush might enjoy a rise in his position in U.S. political circles in the future. In any case, we have no objection to warmly receiving him. But we do have one diplomatic principle to think about, over and above the foregoing precedent, any practical benefit, or any blind following of international practice: "Too much civility is a bad as discourtesy."

[Opening speech by Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly and KUFNCD National Council, at Phnom Penh meeting to mark the 17 April victory anniversary -- recorded]

[Text] The date 17 April 1975 was marked by an historic event that is forever imprinted in the hearts of all our Kampuchean people. On that day our heroic people, in close cooperation with the fraternal Vietnamese army and people, inflicted a great defeat on the U.S. imperialists and their cheap lackey -- the Lon Nol clique. It was the day that the U.S. imperialists were compelled to withdraw shamefully [words indistinct]. Fraternal opinion from near and far and all the progressive forces throughout the world who cherish peace and justice welcomed this victory of our people. This victory is regarded as a common victory won by all mankind over neocolonialism, of which the United States is the ringleader. The Kampuchean people throughout the country -- young and old and men and women alike -- were very happy with this victory and hoped that they would be able to build a new and better life [words indistinct] and contribute to defending and building the country, making it develop in all fields. On the contrary, the Chinese hegemonists and expansionists, colluding with the U.S. imperialists, had ordered their lackeys -- Pol Pot and Ieng Sary -- to usurp our revolutionary gains and commit an extremely barbarous act of genocide. They detained all the people as slaves in a very dark prison without walls where they lived amid the cries of pains, heaps of bones and the sea of tears and blood. Faced with this danger threatening their lives, our people rose up in unity around the united front for national salvation and, with the vigorous and timely support and assistance of the fraternal Vietnamese army and people and by holding aloft the banners of national unity and international solidarity, dealt a heavy blow on the enemy and saved all the people from the abyss of death on 7 January 1979. Our country has been liberated. Our people enjoy freedom, have grasped the national destiny and have become masters of their own destiny. We are always grateful to the Vietnamese people and army -- our valiant brothers and neighbors -- who, with the spirit of proletarian internationalism, have sacrificed their flesh and blood in order to liberate and enable our Kampuchean nation and people to enjoy independence and freedom. We are always grateful to all the fraternal socialist countries and all the international organizations, including the progressive movements and forces, which, following the 7 January liberation day, have made a great contribution to enable our people to defend and rebuild the country from nothing.

I now declare the meeting open. I would like to invite Comrade Chairman Heng Samrin to make a speech. Thank you.

NGUYEN CO THACH VISITS EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

12-15 Apr Visit to Sweden

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 16 -- Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach visited the Kingdom of Sweden from April 12-15 at the invitation of the Swedish Government. He called on King Carl XVI Gustaf and Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin and conveyed to them letters from President of the Council of State Truong Chinh and Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong. He also called on parliament Speaker Ingemund Bengtsson and Chairman of the Social Democratic Party Olof Palme.

Nguyen Co Thach held talks with his Swedish counterpart, Ola Ullsten, in a frank, friendly manner and with mutual understanding. He thanked with high appreciation for valuable Swedish assistance and support, informed Ola Ullsten of the Southeast Asian situation, and hailed Swedish contribution to peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Discussing long-term economic cooperation, the Swedish side promised to continue aid to Vietnam for many years to come and to grant emergency aid to cope with natural calamities.

Nguyen Co Thach had a meeting with officials of the Swedish Committee for Solidarity With Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea.

Visit to GDR

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 17 -- Nguyen Co Thach, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and minister for foreign affairs, has visited the German Democratic Republic at the invitation of Herr Oskar Fischer, member of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany and foreign minister of the G.D.R.

During his stay from April 16 to 18 [as received] Nguyen Co Thach held talks with Herr Oskar Fischer. The two ministers exchanged views on the furtherance of cooperation between the two countries and on a number of important international issues. Vietnam, Nguyen Co Thach said, highly values the role played by the G.D.R., outpost of the socialist system in Europe, which has applied a principled foreign policy of peace and which together with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries has worked tirelessly for a stable peace and peaceful coexistance in Europe and the rest of the world and has spared no effort in strengthening the friendship between nations.

The two sides hold that the main cause of the poisoning of the present international atmosphere is the policy of confrontation and arms race advocated by the bellicose imperialist forces in the NATO bloc and their collusion with the Chinese reactionaries. Yet, more than ever before, today mankind has realistic conditions to head off the danger of a new world war. In this spirit, the S.R.V. and the G.D.R. fully support the peace programme of the Soviet Union, particularly the latest proposals made by L.I. Brezhnev in his well-known speeches at the 17th congress of the Soviet trade unions and in Tashkent.

The two sides reaffirm their consistent stand of fully supporting the struggle of the Asian, African and Latin American peoples and other nations for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress.

Both sides share the same view in appraising the situation in Southeast Asia and the main cause of instability in this region. The G.D.R. fully supports the peace initiatives of Vietnam and the other Indochinese states. The two sides hold that a positive response to the proposals put forth at the foreign ministerial conference on February 17, 1982, of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea will create favourable conditions for mutual understanding between the countries in the region, thus gradually building Southeast Asia into a region of peace, stability and cooperation.

The S.R.V. and the G.D.R. highly value the results of the working consultative conference of the deputy foreign ministers of socialist countries in Vientiane in December 1981, which they consider to be an important contribution of the socialist community to reducing tension and preserving peace in Southeast Asia.

Foreign Minister O. Fischer has accepted an invitation to visit Vietnam.

Budapest Radio Interview

LD171732 Budapest Domestic Service in Hungarian 1400 GMT 17 Apr 82

[Interview with Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach by special correspondent Zslot Szalai in the "168 hours" program; date and place not given; recorded, Nguyen Co Thach speaks in English with superimposed translation]

[Text] [Question] In the last 2-3 years it has become the practice for the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries to meet regularly and, so to speak, bombard their partners and adversaries with proposals. If we now review the proposals of the last meeting held in Vientiane, what do you think is the most important of them?

[Answer] I would be more exact. As far as the proposals of the last foreign ministerial conference are concerned, instead of importance I would rather speak of purpose. This purpose is not new after all. It is to restore peace and stability in Southeast Asia. For this reason we made three different proposals. The first concerned how tension can be basically eliminated. This is why we addressed it to China. We proposed that China put an end to its aggressive Southeast Asian policy and sign a nonaggression and non-interference treaty with us.

[Question] Do you mean that this treaty would be signed by China and the Indochinese countries?

[Answer] By each Indochinese state separately. The second proposal dealt with those problems which have developed between Thailand on the one hand and the Indochinese states on the other. We would like to create mutual trust between the Thais and us. Furthermore, we would like to achieve an end to tension on the border between Thailand and Kampuchea. So, according to this proposal, Thailand should sign a nonaggression and cooperation treaty with Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos. At the same time, we promised to withdraw certain military forcys from Kampuchea if the Thais do not support the guerrillas of Pol Pot any longer. This proposal can also be formulated differently, as follows: We shall start to withdraw our military forces if they sre willing to accept a demilitarized zone along the border.

[Question] In this connection there are several ideas. If I remember right, at the so-called Kampuchea session of the UN General Assembly in the summer of 1979, many proposed that this demilitarized zone be only on the Kampuchean side of the border. How do you view this?

[Answer] On both sides of the border, in Kampuchean and Thai territory alike. Of course, the width of it should be and can be negotiated. It may be 5 or even 10 kilometers. If this solution is not acceptable to the Thais, then we are ready to take any other step that would create peace, stability and security in the border zone.

[Question] By this do you mean that the Pol Pot forces and the army of the People's Republic of Kampuchea with the Vietnamese troops supporting them are still fighting in the western and northwestern parts of the country? It is obvious that the Thai support would cease with the creation of a demilitarized zone, would it not?

[Answer] This is finally the precondition for the withdrawal of a certain part of our troops. Well, this would be the second proposal. The third one concerns the relationships between the ASEAN member countries and Indochina.

We already proposed a seven-point plan last year at the UN General Assembly concerning the creation of peaceful coexistence and good-neighbor relations. These are, of course, principles. It is possible to have a debate on them. Otherwise we think that in the relationship between ASEAN and Indochina there are no serious problems. The problems exist between China and Indochina and between Thailand and Indochina.

[Question] Still, we Europeans have the impression that the ASEAN member states lack the will for peaceful coexistence with Indochina. I mean first of all Singapore and Thailand since there is a dispute even between the member states on the question of developing their relations with Vietnam.

[Answer] You are right in this. We, the Indochinese countries, are prepared for three possibilities. First, the ASEAN countries will follow China in the hostile policy against us. This would be the continuation of their present practice. Second, the ASEAN countries cease to support China and develop peaceful coexistence with us. In a certain sense this would mean a break with China on their part. Third, China and ASEAN increase the hostility, and China would give us a second lesson. We, of course, would be ready to take it.

[Question] And repulse them?

[Answer] Yes. This is our habit. If we recall the behavior of ASEAN member states in the last 35 years, they followed the United States against us all along, including the war. This, by the way, could not prevent the breakthrough of the revolutionary movements of Indochina. We think that cooperation would be the best for them and for us as well. But we are prepared for the eventuality that they will turn against us. We continue to feel our way at any rate.

VCP SECRETARIAT COMMUNIQUE ON EMULATION RESULTS

Entering 1981, the first year of the 1981-85 5-Year Plan, our people and armed forces encountered many difficulties due to the great imbalances in our economy accumulated from previous years. The difficulties were more pronounced toward the end of the year due to a prolonged drought and the existence of rice pests in many areas. In addition, we had to cope constantly with our enemy's all-round war of destruction. However, 1981 was also a year with favorable conditions, a year in which the expanded application of a number of new economic guidelines and policies effectively promoted our people's intensive productive labor.

In the face of such a situation, and in response to the party Central Committee's appeal, a movement for revolutionary action was whipped up to make positive preparations for the fifth party congress. Responding to the premier's directive and the masses' plans to step up the emulation movement to score outstanding achievements in honor of the party congress, all sectors and echelons attached great importance to doing a good job in organizing the 1981 emulation movement. The movement was aimed at promoting emulation in overcoming difficulties, developing advantages, and successfully fulfilling the 1981 State Plan. This would serve as an impetus for a widespread emulation drive to successfully fulfill the 1982 State Plan and to successfully carry out the resolution to be passed at the fifth party congress.

On the Front of Agricultural, Forestry and Fishery Production

The collectivized and individual peasants, the agricultural, forestry and fishery workers, and all those people engaged in fishery, forestry and salt production who had been effectively supported by various industries and the scientific and technical agencies and had been encouraged by the new economic policies of the party and state, stirred up a seething labor impetus rarely seen in recent years.

They enthusiastically implemented the new contract system in agriculture and emulated in intensively cultivating crops to increase yields following the examples of advanced models, in preventing and controlling crop insects and animal epidemics, and in building small and medium-sized farmland water conservancy projects, rivaling the Cau Ghe irrigation group. In the maritime product sector, there was a movement to emulate in building "Uncle Ho's fish ponds" rivaling the state-run Vung Tau-Con Dao fishing company. In forestry, there were mass movements to plant trees and build "Uncle Ho's fruit orchards" and so forth, while youths launched the movements to "grow 500,000 hectares of green manure plants and to take the lead in applying technical innovations. Women emulated in caring for rice, transplanting rice quickly on schedule, raising animals at home and growing mulberry to raise silkworms. While old people emulated in planting trees, the children competed against one another in caring for the trees.

Owing to these emulation efforts, the 1981 volume of grain production -- 15 million tons -- was the highest ever recorded. The most outstanding achievements belong to Hai Hung, Thanh Hoa, Tien Giang, Cao Bang and Gia Lai-Kontum Provinces, and Haiphong municipality. The productive impetus was maintained continually in Thai Binh, Quang Man-Da Nang, An Giang and Ha Bac Provinces. Production in Lai Chau, Quang Ninh, Ha Son Binh, Ha Nam Ninh, Nghe Tinh, Binh Tri Thien and Hau Giang Provinces, and Ho Chi Minh City surged forward better than in 1980. In addition to good results in rice production, there were also achievements in the planting of soybeans, peanuts and corn. Provinces growing the most soybeans were Cao Bang, Ha Bac, Hai Hung, Hanoi, Hau Giang, Dong Thap, Minh Hai, Lam Dong and Dong Nai. Peanuts were grown mostly in Song Be, Tay Ninh, Long An, Dac Lac, Thuan Hai, Vinh Phu and Bac Thai, while corn was produced largely in Son La, Lang Son, Ha Tuyen, Cao Bang and Dong Nai Provinces.

Pig raising continued to develop, especially in Hai Hung, Thanh Hoa, Nghe Tinh, Cao Bang, Nghia Binh, Thuan Hai, Cuu Long and Tien Giang Provinces,

The maritime products sector developed its activities to catch, collect, purchase and raise maritime products and to process them for export. Achievements and efforts in this connection were noted mostly in Vung Tau-Con Dao special zone and Cuu Long, Minh Hai, Nghia Binh, Phu Khanh, Thuan Hai, Quang Nam-Da Nang, Hai Hung and Vinh Phu Provinces. The state-run Vung Tau-Con Dao fishing company reached the highest labor productivity with an annual per capita level of 56 tons, doubling the 1980 level. The annual income of a fisherman was up to 7,766 dong. Financial contribution to the budget was 1.5 times that of 1980. Progress was also observed in other state-run fishing companies and maritime products corporations.

It could be said that on the agricultural and fishery production front, the first indications of a concerted mass movement to produce grain and other food products appeared.

Although the forestry production plan was not fulfilled, some provinces struggled to overfulfill their forest products exploitation plans by a large margin. They are Minh Hai, Tay Ninh, Hau Giang, Gia Lai-Kontum, Dac Lac and Lang Son Provinces. The tree-planting movement continued to develop in the plains and coastal areas. Although Bac Thai and Lang Son Provinces delivered more timber to the state, some other provinces failed in this respect.

On the Front of Industry, Capital Construction, Communications and Transport, and Handicrafts and Artisan Industry

This front is rife with difficulties due to serious and prolonged shortages of energy and materials, the irregular supply of grain and food products, and the still troubled system of administrative management through subsidization which restricts the development of many installations.

Entering 1981, the working class and manual workers welcomed Decision No 25 and 26-CP which eased constructions, enhanced the independence of installations in production and business operations, contributed to stimulating the impetus of productive labor emulation, and made managerial control more flexible and active.

Many factories and cooperatives which had received only roughly 50 percent of their major materials requirements, still knew how to develop their initiative in production and business operations by tapping the source of agricultural, forestry and other products from localities, exploiting the relations of economic cooperation between primary production units and local authorities, and using discards and rejects. They thus created enough jobs for workers, reducing about 70 percent of the paid nonwork hours. Faced with many difficulties in terms of materials and markets, many factories boldly redetermined their production guidelines and designed new types of goods required for export and consumption. On this basis, they launched an emulation movement to reorganize the production chain, improve technical work, save materials and energy, reduce production costs and turn out many new types of goods for domestic use and export, thus improving the people's livelihood and enthusing the masses. Some other factories which had received no materials at all, still knew how to uphold self-reliance and creatively implemented state policies by requesting foreign exchange loans to import materials or economically associated themselves with the local economy in order to get materials. As a result, they succeeded in maintaining production, producing more assets for society and stabilizing the workers' livelihood. Through various creative measures and emulation movements for productive labor and thrift, hundreds of primary production installations could fully use their manpower and the output of their machinery. They have fulfilled not only the state plan, but also their own plans and the plan for secondary production with gross output values twice, three times or even five- and six-fold higher than the gross output value provided for in the state plan.

Consequently, the state plan norms for many main products have been overfulfilled and outstanding achievements have been recorded by local industries and handicrafts, especially in Ho Chi Minh and Hanoi cities and in Quang Nam-Da Nang, Ha Nam Ninh, Vinh Phy, Hai Hung, Thanh Hoa, Ha Son Binh, Thai Binh, Hoang Lien Son, Phy Khanh, Tien Giang and Dong Nai Provinces. Many of the main construction projects have been completed on schedule. The Bim Son cement plant was commissioned on the occasion of the 52d founding anniversary of the VCP. The communications and transportation sector strived to support production and serve the people by ensuring the reopening of the Duong Bridge to traffic in the shortest period of time.

In these common achievements, the following advanced units stand out: the precision machine factory No 1, the Tran Hung Dao mechanical engineering plant, the Giai Phong mechanical engineering plant, the leather footwear factory, the Sao Mai carpet enterprise, the railway corporation No 8, the chemical and pharmaceutical cooperative, and so forth, in Hanoi; the southern detergent corporation, the Cuu Long jute enterprise, the Phong Phu and Thanh Cong textile plants, the United Tobacco enterprise No 2, the 2 September pharmaceutical products enterprise, the post and telegraph sector, and the handicraft sector in the Go Vap and Cu Chi precincts and the 1st precinct in Ho Chi Minh City; the Lam Thao superphosphate plant in Vinh Phy; the Son Duong tin mine in Ha Tuyen; the Deo Nai coal mine and the Uong Bi electrical power plant in Quang Ninh; the Nam Dinh silk factory in Ha Nam Ninh; the Bac Son tobacco plant in Ha Bac; the construction and production units of the Bim Son cement factory in Thanh Hoa; the Hoa Binh hydroelectric powerplant construction site in Ha Son Binh; the geological intergroup No 9 in Quang Ninh...

On the Distribution-Circulation Front

Encouraged by the policy of stable grain obligation and other new economic policies, and spurred by the success of harvesting three crops in one year, the working peasants competed zealously with one another to fulfill their grain and food obligation, to sell grain and to barter goods with the state. This was a noble manifestation of their loyalty to the party, their devotion to the worker-peasant alliance, their regard for the combatants on the front line, and their emulative spirit in building socialism and defending the fatherland.

By the end of the grain year (November 1981), the amount of grain in paddy equivalent collected nationwide had increased by 17 percent over 1980, a record. All the Mekong Delta, southern Trung Bo and Central Highlands provinces collected more grain than they did in 1980. For their part, the northern provinces still struggled to collect grain although their 10-month crop was seriously affected by floods and millions of people suffered food shortages; by the end of the 1981 5th-month spring crop, they had collected an amount of grain substantially larger than that brought in during the same period in 1980. It is worth noting that the provinces in former Nam Bo collected more taxes in the form of grain than in the previous year, and that the northern provinces recorded a twofold increase over the 1980 grain year in the amount of grain collected in excess of their grain obligation and through the exchange of goods and materials with the state. Among these general achievements, some which stood out were those recorded by the people in Tien Giang, Dong Thap, An Giang, Hau Giang, Dong Nai, Hai Hung, Ha Nam Ninh, Ha Son Binh, Ha Bac, and so forth.

Substantial increases were also reported in the collection of other foodstuffs and agricultural products. The total value of these foodstuffs and agricultural products collected in 1981 (with the price factor already taken into account) went up by 45 percent over 1980. Specifically, the total value of the pork collected increased by 20 percent (a twofold increase was reported in the south in particular); manually produced sugar, up 3.2 times; fresh water fish, nearly double; soybeans, by 30 percent; unhusked peanuts, by 39 percent, and so forth.

Thanks to their increased production, many provinces tried their best to ensure the supply of staple commodities for cadres, workers and the armed forces, especially the supply of those goods the production of which was entrusted to the localities.

To contribute to stabilizing the living conditions of workers, many state-operated trade units improved their operational procedures and ensured a broader and more regular sale of goods. The force of marketing cooperatives in village and wards, which comprised nearly 8,500 establishments and more than 17,000 outlets, intensified their activities. Standing out in this field were, first, Nghe Tinh, and then Thanh Hoa, Phu Khanh, An Giang, and so forth.

Although the export sector did not fulfill its plan norms, the value of exports still went up by 30 million dong compared with 1980. Many provinces actively produced exportable goods to finance the import of materials for the production sector and other goods for the people. Ha Son Binh Province, Thai Thuy District in Thai Binh Province, Phu Tien District in Hai Hung Province, the general rattan and bamboo product export corporation and the general transportation and foreign trade corporation were credited with many achievements.

At a time when international tourism was not yet developed, the tourism sector vigorously shifted its activities to welcoming local visitors. Thanks to this, the sector's profits recorded a 50-percent increase over 1980, or a sixfold increase over 1976. Tourism establishments and hotels, however, were not put to full use. Doing best were the tourism corporations of Ho Chi Minh City, Vung Tau-Con Dao, Ha Son Binh, Ha Nam Ninh, Dong Nai, Cuu Long, An Giang and Hau Giang.

Haiphong port made progress toward the year's end due to its efforts in reorganizing its work force and wage payment system.

The collection of industrial and commercial taxes was stepped up. All cities and provinces overfulfilled their norms, reduced the amount of uncollected taxes, made an effort to implement various policies correctly, exercised control, granted bonuses and meted out penalties. Tien Giang, An Giang and Ha Son Binh Provinces sought to expand management to the grassroots level and combated tax evasion more effectively.

On the Sociocultural Front

The cultural sector succeeded in maintaining the regular artistic activities of the professional and nonprofessional cultural workers. The system of cultural houses and mobile information units operated satisfactorily. The movement for a new lifestyle made headway in a number of localities. The mass movement against negativism in the cultural life achieved initial results. The movement to emulate Hai Hau District, a frontrank district in developing culture and arts and letters, is spreading far and wide. The central newsreel and documentary film studio was a frontrank model in the field of quality film making.

The "five completions" movement was the most lively one in the public health sector. At present, thousands of villages have completely fulfilled some of their tasks; 59 districts have completed the building of three kinds of public sanitary projects (bath house, drinking water well, and two-compartment latrine); 88 districts have completely fulfilled the task of planting medicinal herbs and using traditional medicines; 17 districts have completely fulfilled the task of promoting family planning; 18 districts have completely fulfilled the task of promoting public health, and 18 districts have completely fulfilled the task of organizing public health networks at the grassroots and district level. Ha Nam Tinh took the lead in the movement for planting medicinal herbs and using traditional medicines. Ho Chi Minh City, Hanoi and Haiphong Municipalities, and Hai Hung, Thanh Hoa and Quang Ninh Provinces set the pace in the movement for planned parenthood and reducing the rate of population growth so as to protect the health of laborers and the living standards of families. The institute of ophthalmology successfully treated many cases of eye disease; these methods of treatment have a high scientific value and can easily be disseminated and applied at the grassroots level.

The emulation movements for teaching and learning well, for building schools and classrooms, and for managing the living conditions of teachers and students, which are aimed at improving the quality of education according to the guidelines on educational reforms, are developing continuously. In all the higher, vocational and general education sectors, there have been outstanding frontrank model schools and teachers who have set an example in professional dedication and creative teaching.

On the Front of Consolidating National Defense and Security

By performing practical revolutionary deeds, the entire armed forces launched an emulation drive to score achievements in honor of the party. This was the culmination of the emulation efforts to implement the campaign "to develop the fine character and to increase the fighting strength of the people's armed forces." The frontline units upheld their sense of responsibility and honor by initiating an emulation movement to heighten vigilance, to maintain combat readiness, and to achieve victory with the first shots, in the first day and on the frontline of the fatherland. Day and night, they actively underwent technical and tactical training, improved their physical strength, consolidated their positions, and joined the local people of various nationalities in developing increasingly effective combat plans. Emulating the front, the units stationed in the rear developed their forces in all respects and stood ready to give the greatest possible assistance to the front in manpower and supplies. At the same time, they satisfactorily carried out the tasks of defending the rear, stepping up production and practicing thrift, and joined the people's public security forces in firmly maintaining political security and public order and safety. Various organs, transportation units, pipeline units, defense factories, armed branches and services, learning institutes, road building units...initiated movements for revolutionary action to improve the effectiveness of their work and to show their profound and sincere revolutionary sentiments for the party. Hundreds of frontrank models have emerged, including 122 outstanding units such as the Khanh Khe group, which has won high praise and is setting the pace for the emulation movement of the entire army.

In the people's public security forces, the emulation movement "for the fatherland's security" was coordinated with the implementation of the campaign "to build honest and strong public security forces," to follow the examples of martyr Nguyen Tai Hai and various frontrank public security units, and to score achievements in honor of the fifth party congress. Thanks to this, the movement was able to make new headway and to record appreciable achievements in maintaining political security, consolidating strategically important areas, combating rebellions, and protecting socialst property and the people's lives as well as building public security forces. Moreover, the movement gave rise to more than 700 frontrank units. However, it should make greater efforts in maintaining public order and safety, especially in the capital and other key areas.

A special and praiseworthy feature of this major emulation drive was that various sectors, localities and establishments embarked on many new projects and turned out many new products named "The Fifth Congress." These were projects and products which reflected a profound regard for and revolutionary loyalty to the party, which bore a highly scienfitif and technical significance, which had a strong or decisive impact on the fulfillment of the 1981 State Plan in the basic units, and which actively paved the way for the formulation and implementation of the 1982 State Plan. According to still incomplete statistics, various establishments registered to build and produce nearly 10,000 new projects and products, many of which had never been produced in our country before. These were major projects such as the five support projects designed to serve the construction of the Tri An hydroelectric power plant; participating in these projects were the people of Ho Chi Minh City, Dong Nai and several other provinces. The Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union was credited with a rice-growing project north of Ha Tien and the Pha Lai electric power plant project, in which young people of many provinces were mobilized to participate. Hanoi completed 900 of the 1,390 projects and products it registered to build. Among the products completed were the 12-horsepower D12M diesel engine, which was developed by he Tran Hung Dao mechanical engineering plant and awarded a gold medal at the Plovdiv international fair in Bulgaria, and which is being mass-produced with a quality similar to or surpassing that of the award winning engine; the high-pwer EV-250 screw-making machine, which was made for the first time in our country by the machine tools manufacturing plant No 1; and 10,000 portable power drills for export, and good quality, button-operated, timer-equipped 400-millimeter diameter electric table fans, which were produced by the precision machine factor No 1. For their part, various local industries were credited with more than 145 new projects nad products. By concentrating its efforts on overcoming the difficulties regarding energy, raw materials and supplies, Ho Chi Minh City completed 300 of the 500 projects and products registered for production. Typical of these were the project undertaken by the textile enterprise No 13 to carry our major repairs and to install new equipment in order to expand and modernize production and to improve its quality in 1982; the project of eastern bus corporation to convert 100 of its gasonline-operated buses into coal-operated ones; the building of 26 bridges in Hoc Mon District, a project carried out jointly by the state and the people, and so forth. In other provinces, about 100 new projects and products were completed, including many new items such as the minibicycle made by Thai Binh, the high quality velvet produced by Ha Nam Ninh, the raw materials for the production of detergents turned out by the Lam Thao superphosphate plant in Vinh Phy, and the calcium carbide, liquefied nitrogen, detergents and nylon sheets manufactured by Quang Nam-Da Nang. In Haiphong, the Niem bridge project was completed with high quality and 11 months ahead of schedule. In Quang Ninh, the Mao Khe mine was credited with building the Voc fan, which helped markedly improve the working conditions of underground mine workers and enhance their labor productivity....

Another special feature of this emulation drive was that various establishments and localities enthusiastically and fervently participated in signing emulation contracts. For the first time, 36 provinces zoned off areas for the purpose of making emulation contracts.

The signatures of the 36 comrade provincial people's committee chairmen or deputy chairmen constituted a pledge of honor made by the party organization and people in each province to the party, people and combatants throughout the country. With their signatures, they committed themselves to cooperate with one another, to emulate one another, to exchange experiences, to bring into play the strengths of their localities, and to help one another implement successfully the tasks and plans assigned to each locality by the party and the state. Following this example, various districts, precincts and establishments in many provinces and Ho Chi Minh City, Hanoi and Haiphong, also made emulation pledges. The emulative spirit was markedly enhanced, the sense of responsibility of the leadership in the emulation movement was upheld, and the effectiveness of the emulation activities was increased. The result was that all the 36 provinces which signed emulation contracts made markedly more progress than in 1980. Many of them overfulfilled the key targets of the 1981 State Plan and checked the economic downturn in their localities.

On the basis of the results obtained by the provinces in implementing their emulation contracts, the party Central Committee Emulation Department and the General Statistics Department, in coordination with various sectors at the central level, have selected the provinces with the most achievements and recommended them to the Council of Ministers for commendation. Following are the localities selected:

Setting the pace for the seven northern mountain provinces is Hoang Lien Son. Despite having to cope constantly with the enemy, and despite the heavy rains in the 5th-month spring season and the fact that both of their annual rice crops were affected by harmful insects and diseases, the local people, through their arduous efforts, managed to obtain a highly successful 10th-month crop. This enabled them not only to make up for the shortfall incurred in the 5th-month spring crop but also to overfulfill the state plan for annual grain output. Their fish production was satisfactory. Both their plans for forest preservation and afforestation were overfulfilled. Their military tasks were performed well. Progress was made in all other fields of activities. Closely following Hoang Lien Son's lead os Quang Ninh Province.

Leading the seven Bac Bo Delta and midland provinces is Hai Hung. Although both of their regular rice crops, especially the 10th-month crop, were seriously affected by harmful insects and diseases, the local people tried hard and obtained total success in agricultural production. They did well in fish production satisfactorily fulfilled the obligation to contribute grain and foodstuffs to the state, and gradually improved the people's living conditions. They carried out their military tasks and public health work very well, while making appreciable progress in all other fields of activities. Playing a close second to Hai Hung are Thai Binh, Ha Nam Ninh and Ha Son Binh Provinces.

Leading the seven central coastal provinces is Quang Nam-Da Nang. Although it had to face numerous difficulties regarding energy, supplies and fertilizer coupled with the difficulties regarding energy, supplies and fertilizer coupled with the difficulties caused by floods, the province fulfilled or overfulfilled at the 16 norms established as criteria of emulation activites. Its gross production of grain in paddy equivalent exceeded the plan norm and represented a substantial increase over 1980. The amount of grain collected also exceeded the plan norm. Industrial, artisan and handicraft production was well above targets. The value of goods collected exceeded the plan norm. The export plan was fulfilled. The troop recruitment plan was overfulfilled. Closely following Quang Nam-Da Nang are Nghia Binh and Phu Khhanh Provinces.

Setting the pace for the three eastern Nam Bo provinces is Dong Nai. Despite the many difficulties caused by a prolonged drought which was then followed by heavy rains and resulting waterlogging, and despite rather heavy losses caused by harmful insect and diseases, the province achieved the highest gross grain output of the region and overfulfilled both the agricultural products and grain collection plans.

Although it was entrusted with no grain obligation, the province, aware of the difficulties faced by the state, turned over thousands of tons of grain to the central authorities. The province overfulfilled its plans both for pig and cattle breeding. The value of its exports was well over targets. Its obligation to deliver agricultural products and foodstuffs to the state was fulfilled satisfactorily. The province also made headway in all other fields of activities. Dong Nai was the province which fulfilled or overfulfilled more plan norms than any other locality in the region.

Leading the nine Mekong Delta provinces is Tien Giang. Despite the fact that flash floods came earlier and receded later than usual, that a drought occurred in the middle of the rice crops, and that harmful insects and diseases caused rather serious losses, Tien Giang still managed to overfulfill the state plan for grain production. The local cattle population also increased over the plan norm and over 1980. Industrial, artisan and handicraft production exceeded the plan norm and increased over 1980. The amount of grain collected and delivered to the central authorities was above target and the largest in the region. The plan for collection and delivery of agricultural products and foodstuffs to the state was fulfilled to a large extent. Progress was reported in all other fields of activities. Tien Giang fulfilled or overfulfilled 15 of the 16 norms established as criteria of emulation activities. Closely following Tien Giang are Hau Giang and Minh Hai Provinces. In the Mekong Delta, An Giang was the province which collected the largest amount of grain per capita and which achieved a high ratio of collection in relation to its annual paddy output.

It is worth noting that although many provinces in each of the aforementioned regions were rated low, they actually achieved a faster pace of development than other provinces, thereby signaling an extremely exciting emulation movement to catch up with and overtake the frontrank models in 1982. The leading provinces, therefore, see no reason for being complacent in the 1982 emulation movement.

The Main Experiences

Through the developments and results of the emulation movement, the following conclusions -- which are also the major experiences -- may be drawn:

1. The people manifest their close unity with the leading party by taking practical revolutionary actions. Emulating in scoring outstanding achievements in honor of the party congress is the aspiration of the majority of our people.

2. The management mechanism must be constantly improved and jobs must be secured for all people.

3. The most important requirement to be met through emulation is to fulfill state plans. Therefore, the administration and mass organizations must closely coordinate with each other, guidance on emulation must be carried out persistently and continuously, control and supervision must be exerted, good experiences must be commended and errors must be straightened out.

4. Emulation is a revolutionary movement of the masses. Therefore, it must be placed under the party's constant and direct leadership. Emulation must be linked to the party's other tasks. Party members must set examples in emulation. Party chapters must lead emulation drives.

5. Localities must know how to promote their revolutionary traditions and instill pride into the masses.

6. Creative methods must be applied to motivate and organize emulation drives. Making emulation pledges is one good method.

7. To ensure a steady, continuous emulation movement, it is necessary to improve the masses' spritual and material conditions in a regular, realistic and just manner, primarily for those who score achievements.

8. It is extremely important to encourage the masses with timely information and propaganda activities.

However, it is necessary to overcome the situation in which the emulation movement is unevenly carried out in localities,, sectors and establishments. The emulation movement still does not exist in some units and is still weak in the distribution and circulation sectors. Many state managerial and professional organs have not yet organized emulation drives.

Bringing into play the success of the 1981 emulation movement and to score new outstanding achievements in honor of the fifth party congress, which is scheduled to open soon, our people and combatants throughout the country have achieved initial successes in the 1st quarter of 1982. In the north, the 5th-month spring rice has been planted rapidly, on schedule and according to technical requirements. Consumer goods production has increased substantially. The collection of a number of staple commodities has made headway. There still are numerous difficulties and shortcomings, however. But, the more difficulties we face, the more vigorously we must promote the emulation movement so as to use the surplus in one place to make up for shortages in others. If we cannot resolve these problems in one way, we must try to do it another way, using the intelligence and creative talents of all people, all units, all sectors and all echelons.

Revolution is a cause of the masses. To ensure a vigorous emulation movement, we must satisfactorily organize emulation activities and gradually enhance the forms and targets of these activities. A new spirit has emerged on the ricefields and in the factories. Let our people and combatants throughout the country resolutely emulate in scoring many new and more outstanding achievements, fulfilling the 1982 State Plan and implementing the resolutions of the fifth party congress.

SUZUKI EXPLAINS STAND ON DEFENSE OF SEALANES

[Text] Tokyo, April 19, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Monday he has pledged to the people that Japan will defend its sealanes extending 1,000 miles from the nation's coasts. Suzuki told the Diet he has made no such a promise to the United States.

Suzuki voluntarily used the word "pledge" in the form of "to the people" for the first time, although he denied the existence of the alleged pledge to the U.S.

The use of the word "pledge" appears to suggest that as a result of repeated U.S. demands upon Japan to fulfil its proper role in defense, Suzuki finally conceded that Japan must fulfil its responsibility, political sources said.

Questioned about the sealane defense issue by Shigeaki Haruta, Komeito member of the lower house, Suzuki said Japan was tackling the issue under a policy of building up defense capacity to protect a searoute zone of 1,000 miles.

SUZUKI CRITICIZES U.S. CALL FOR OPENING MARKET

[Text] Tokyo, April 20, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday the United States was inconsistent in pressing for Japan's liberalization of farm and fishery product imports.

He was referring to a fresh U.S. call to include some farm and fishery products in a new Japanese market-opening program now being drawn up.

Suzuki pointed out the U.S. had proposed consultations on Japan's residual import restraints on farm and fishery products under the rules of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). He made the remark to newsmen following a briefing from Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, at a Cabinet meeting on the progress of the new measures.

Kichiro Tazaws, minister of agriculture, forestry and fisheries, also said, "We do not take the latest U.S. proposal as a fresh government initiative. If they wanted to make a fresh proposal they should drop the request for the total import liberalization and seek the holding of the Japan-U.S. trade subcommittee working group," Tazawa told reporters after the Cabinet meeting. He pointed out that the U.S. officially proposed such bilateral consultations under the Article 22 of the GATT, seeking ultimately the total liberalization.

OFFICIALS STUDYING NEW MEASURES TO OPEN MARKET

[Text] Tokyo, April 20, KYODO -- Senior Japanese officials started making a serious study this week on a second package of measures to open the Japanese market still wider to foreign imports under U.S. and West European pressure.

Government sources said the package will be decided on May 7 just before the meeting of the ministerial council of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) scheduled for May 10-11.

In formulating the package, the government also has in mind the eighth economic summit of industrialized democracies at Versailles in June, the sources said.

They said officials of the government agencies, including the Foreign Ministry and the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, will meet every day until this weekend to map out a working-level plan by April 26 on the basis of an eight-point draft plan submitted by the Economic Planning Agency. The draft plan calls for, among others, relaxation of residual import restrictions on agricultural products, liberatlization of service trades and a further reduction of tariff rates.

The sources said the crux of the second package would be the easing of import curbs on 22 agricultural products now that the United States had demanded their complete decontrol.

The Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Ministry has expressed itself firmly against the inclusion of such a step in the package, because of Washington's proposal that the two countries discuss the matter at a forum of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Therefore, the sources said, it remains to be seen whether the liberalization of agricultural imports would be incorporated into the working-level plan for the second package.

To decide on the package by May 7, they said, the government will have to work out a general outline before the holiday-studded "golden week" starting late this month when some ministers, including MITI Minister Shintaro Abe, will leave on overseas tours.

On April 26, therefore, a meeting to coordinate details will be held by the ministers concerned, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa, Masumi Esaki, chairman of the Liberal-Democratic Party's special committee on international economic relations, and the ruling party's three top executive officers, the sources said,

MORE SPORTS EXCHANGES TO BE PROMOTED WITH USSR

[Text] Tokyo, April 20, KYODO -- Leaders of Japanese and Soviet amateur sports associations have agreed to promote further sports exchanges between the two countries.

The agreement came when Viktor Ivonin, visiting vice president of the Soviet Union Amateur Sports Association, Tuesday paid a courtesy call on leaders of the Japan Amateur Association (JASA), including Directors Hanji Aoki and Hisata Yamaguchi.

Ivonin is visiting Japan to take part in a Japan-Soviet round-table conference which began here Tuesday.

KYODO: NO PROGRESS IN SALMON TALKS WITH USSR

OW200027 Tokyo KYODO in English 0006 GMT 20 Apr 82

[Text] Moscow, April 19, KYODO -- No progress was made in Russo-Japanese negotiations here Monday on Japan's salmon catch quota this year in the northwest Pacific waters and on other problems, Japanese officials said.

At the meeting, Akira Matsuura, head of the Japanese Fishery Agency, and Soviet First Vice Fishery Minister Nikolay Kudryavtsev reiterated their proposals made last week.

The Soviet Union proposed on April 14 that Japan's catch quota in 1982 be held down to 37,000 tons, or 5,500 tons less than the 42,500 tons agreed on last year, while Japan sought a quota of 45,000 tons.

Matsuura arrived in Moscow last Saturday in an effort to break the impasse in negotiations in time for the start of fishery operations on May 1.

Japanese and Soviet negotiators were scheduled to meet on Tuesday to discuss such problems as joint surveillance of Japanese salmon fishing operations.

MIYAZAWA ON ROK'S REQUEST FOR $6-BILLION AID

OW161129 Tokyo KYODO in English 1116 GMT 16 Apr 82

[Text] Tokyo, April 16, KYODO -- Japan and South Korea cannot settle Seoul's request for a dollar 6 billion loan by early May as proposed earlier, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa indicated Friday.

Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi planned to visit South Korea early next month to conclude the aid issue concerning its 1982-86 economic development plan.

Speaking at a House of Councillors committee meeting, Miyazawa said, "I think Foreign Minister Sakurauchi may need a little more time before visiting South Korea. We've not come up yet with our idea (on how much Japan can offer) though the ministries concerned have been stepping up efforts to coordinate their views," he added without elaboration.

Foreign Ministry officials have informally said the government was ready to extend up to dollar 4 billion to South Korea over the five-year period. But Finance Minister Michio Watanabe says dollar 4 billion is much more than the government can offer at a time when it is fighting to restore Japan's own financial health. The figure compared with dollar 83 million in aid Japan extended to South Korea in fiscal 1980. Japan's aid to that country for fiscal 1981, which ended on March 31, has not yet been determined.

Sakurauchi's Seoul visit may be delayed until late next month, since he is scheduled to be out of the country around May 10 for a meeting of the Organization of the Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). At present, South Korea does not appear ready to reduce its request for dollar 6 billion.

The South Korean position was called "tough" by Toshikazu Maeda, Japanese ambassador to Seoul who is now in Tokyo for consultations with the government.

SOUTH KOREAN CHURCH COUNCIL STATEMENT REPORTED

[Text] Pyongyang, April 20 (KCNA) -- The "Missionary Council of Religious Society," a joint organization of Catholicism and Protestantism in South Korea, issued a statement on April 17 strongly demanding that the U.S. ambassador in Seoul and the commander of the U.S. forces occupying South Korea be recalled home, according to a report.

Pointing out that the United States, in league with the South Korean puppet clique, reaped exorbitant profits by selling rice to South Korea at a price much higher than the world market price, the statement said: "We live in poverty owing to the United States." Expressing indignation at the fact that the fascist clique misleads public opinion, abusing the anti-U.S. struggle of the South Korean people,the statement appraised the arson at the "American Cultural Centre" as an extension of the Kwangju uprising.

The statement was signed by 42 Catholic and Protestant churchmen including pastors Pak Hyong-kyu, So Nam-tong and Cho Sun-hyong and priests Chi Hak-sun, Ham Se-ung and Kim Song-hun.

CHURCH GROUPS' SUPPORT OF PUSAN SUSPECTS NOTED

SK200845 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0825 GMT 20 Apr 82

[Text] Pyongyang, April 20 (KCNA) -- The South Korean Standing Committee of Bishops made public a statement on April 16 expressing full support to priest Choe Ki-sik, director of the Wonju Catholic Parochial School, in his act of providing shelter to patriotic students who had set fire to the "American Cultural Centre" in Pusan and participants in the Kwangju popular uprising and denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan military hooligans persecution of him, according to a foreign press report.

The statement stressed: "We fully respect the conscience of the priest who protected hunted men," and it protested against the fascist clique's impudence in slandering the Catholic Church as if it were an organ giving "leftist education."

The "Emergency Council of Christians on the South Korean Affairs," a joint organization of Korean religionists in Japan and Japanese religionists, and the "Japan-South Korea Solidarity Committee" issued a statement on April 16 in Tokyo in denunciation of the fascist clique's suppression of the Catholic priest. The statement said:

The arson at the "American Cultural Centre" is vivid proof that the grievances and wrath at the present "regime" and outside forces encouraging it are pent up among the people. We strongly protest against the arrest of priest Choe Ki-sik and Kim Hyon-chang, a participant in the Kwangju popular uprising, and demand their release. In connection with the situation we cannot but direct attention to the injustice and danger of the Japanese Government's aid to South Korea which will help maintain and encourage the South Korean repressive system.

Esteemed Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and Comrade Elena Ceausescu, dear guests from Romania, comrades: These days have been eventful for us with many visitors from different continents -- prominent political leaders and friends. And today we are very pleased to meet you Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, our closest comrade-in-arms from Europe. Feeling very happy over our emotional reunion with you, respected Comrade General Secretary, in our Pyongyang, I would like first to warmly welcome you and your party in our country.

This is your third visit to our country as head of the Romanian party and state. This is another event remarkable in the annals of fraternal friendship between Korea and Romania, which clearly shows what deep trust and comradely friendship you entertain for us. We were deeply moved by the fact that you attach great significance to our reunion and set great store by the friendship and solidarity between the two countries. Two years ago we had comprehensive and profound talks. This time, too, will be an opportunity of our exchanging opinions in a wide range on the current international situation, I believe.

The present international situation is very complicated and strained, and the danger of a new world war is growing daily. The danger of war is felt in Asia, including Korea, in the Middle East, in Europe and in Africa and Latin America. A serious danger of a new war has been created in Europe by the imperialists moves to strengthen the NATO, an aggressive military bloc, and to ship into this area a large number of latest mass destruction weapons including medium-range nuclear missiles of new type.

The U.S.-led imperialists are openly interfering in the internal affairs of socialist countries, trying to overthrow the socialist system by instigating counterrevolutionary forces and pursuing an all-out hostile policy towards the socialist countries, thereby deliberately increasing tensions in Europe. At present, the U.S. imperialists have turned South Korea into their aggressive military base, the base of nuclear attack, and are making a frantic effort to provoke another war against our republic.

The Korean people bitterly denounce the manoeuvres of the imperialists to increase tensions and wreck peace and security in Asia, Europe and all other parts of the world, pitting themselves against the socialist countries.

It is the most important task facing the world peace-loving people to struggle to avert the danger of a new war and defend peace and security in the world. World peace and security can be defended only when the peoples in all lands and continents maintain independence and wage a stubborn struggle against the imperialists' policy of aggression and war. We deem it necessary for the peace-loving people the world over to unite closely and make joint efforts to thwart and frustrate the imperialists reckless policy of arms race, realize a complete disarmament, abolish all military blocs and foreign aggressive military bases and get foreign troops withdrawn from other countries and establish nuclear-free zones, peace zones, in many regions of the world.

Today the Romanian party and government headed by Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu are making strenuous efforts for European peace and security, relaxation of international tensions, peaceful settlement of disputes, disarmanent and removal of nuclear weapons. We highly appreciate this and support the excellent peace initiatives you have taken as peace champion. We also take this opportunity to express deep thanks to Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and the Romanian party, government and people for their active support for our people's just struggle to force the U.S. troops and nuclear weapons out of South Korea and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

Respected Comrade President, both as socialist countries, Korea and Romania have forged firm ties of friendship on the principle of independence and international solidarity, and these traditional relations of friendship and cooperation have been daily strengthening and developing through the common struggle against imperialism and for victory in the cause of peace, socialism and communism. At present it is an important factor for frustrating the anti-communist, anti-socialist row of the imperialists and easing the international tension and consolidating world peace that socialist countries carry out revolution and construction more successfully and give full play to the superiority of the socialist system and strengthen cooperation and unity among them.

The fraternal Romanian people have already achieved many successes in the struggle to build a multilaterally developed socialist society, firmly defending independence and united closely around the Romanian Communist Party under your leadership. The Korean people regard the successes made by the fraternal Romanian people as common success of socialist countries and sincerely wish them greater strikes in implementing decisions of the 12th Congress of the Romanian Communist Party and advancing toward a bright future.

Korea-Romania relations based on independence are an example of relationship among socialist countries. Because of our common cause of maintaining independence, our mutual trust and brotherhood have deepened, and the friendly relations between our two parties, two countries and two peoples have been established on a solid basis. This is a due contribution to humanity's common cause of making the world independent and defending peace. We are proud of this and will in the future, too, make every effort to develop friendship and solidarity between the two countries.

Availing myself of this reunion with our intimate friend overflowing with feelings of friendship, I would like to propose a toast: To a lasting friendship and solidarity between the Korean and Romanian peoples, to the prosperity and development of the Romanian Socialist Republic, to the unity and cohesion of socialist countries and international communist movement, to the good health and long life of esteemed Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, to the good health of respected Comrade Elena Ceausescu and Romanian guests, and to the good health of all comrades present here.

Ceausescu Banquet Speech

[Text] Pyongyang, Apr 19 (KCNA) -- Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party and president of the Romanian Socialist Republic, made a speech at the grand banquet arranged by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, on April 18 at the Kumsusan Assembly Hall in his honour. The full text of his speech reads:

Respected Comrade Kim Il-song, respected Comrade Kim Song-ae, dear comrades and friends: I, first of all, would like to express profound thanks to you, in the name of myself and my wife and the Romanian delegation accompanying me, for your friendly reception and welcome of us and excellent words you spoke of us and the Romanian people. It gives me, too, special pleasure to extend warm greetings and best wishes to you respected Comrade Kim Il-song and the entire friendly Korean people.

We feel great happiness each time we visit the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and meet you, respected Comrade Kim Il-song, my initimate friend and close comrade, and the friendly Korean people. We hope that our current third visit to your beautiful country and the talks between us that began today will mark another important landmark in the annals of the traditional relations of friendship and solidarity between our two countries, two parties and two peoples. The Romanian Communists and working people, as intimate friends, heartily rejoice over the remarkable successes made by the Korean people in the implementation of the decisions of the sixth party congress and in socialist construction under the tested leadership of the Workers Party of Korea headed by you, respected Comrade Kim Il-song.

I take this opportunity of reaffirming the support and solidarity of the entire Romanian people for the just struggle of the Korean people for national reunification. We support most resolutely the policy for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country and the principled stand of the Workers Party of Korea laid down by you, Comrade Kim Il-song, at the sixth party congress. We note with satisfaction that the relations between our two parties, two countries and two peoples are constantly strengthened in the spirit of the Romania-Korea treaty of friendship and cooperation, the joint statement adopted in 1978 and the agreement reached at our meetings.

I believe that through our talks we will seek together new ways and possibility of lifting these relations to a higher plane in conformity with the great potential possessed by our two countries and the interests of the two countries striving to achieve a faster economic and social progress. The relations between our two countries and two peoples are solid and are based on mutual deep trust and equality, mutual respect and respect for national independence and a constant development of these relations is an important contribution to the cause of socialism and progress of the world and peace.

Dear comrades and friends, our entire people are making all out efforts to implement the decisions of the 12th party congress which will put Romania on a new stage of socio-economic development and beat the targets of the 1981-1985 five-year plan. We have set it forth as the basic targets of this stage to attain a new quality of higher level in all socio-economic activities, make the maximum effective mobilisation of all the material and manpower potential of the country and widely introduce the latest successes of the scientific and technical revolutions into the national economy and all spheres of social life.

We are lifting the overall living standards and cultural level of the people to a new, higher stage on the basis of the unceasing development of the national economy.

We also pay particular concern for completing the scientific guidance of society and deepening socialist democracy in all spheres of socio-economic life. By establishing a broad democratic organisational system, we let the entire working people and all the people directly participate in social management. We are also strengthening political education and the work of raising the socialist consciousness of the masses and rearing a new type of men and making strenuous efforts to see that socialist ethics and the principle of impartiality may be constantly encouraged in overall social life.

While making every possible effort to fulfill her plan for socialist development, Romania is endeavouring to create an atmosphere of peace and broad international cooperation. Because, we are convinced that only in such an atmosphere not only our people but the whole people can guarantee their free and independent socio-economic development, progress and well-being.

We are deeply apprehensive of the present international situation getting ever more complicated today. On the one hand the struggle of the people against imperialist, colonial policy and for new political sovereignty based on complete equality and a new policy based on respect for national independence, peace and cooperation is gaining momentum. On the other hand, in the international life, conflicts and tensions continue and are growing still worse and the arms race is being intensified as never before and signs of a world-wide economic crisis are expanding, virtually sweeping all countries. The tendencies of consolidating the sphere of domination and redividing it and contradictions among nations are growing and the difference between the developing and the developed countries are widening. All these are increasing the political and economic instability on the international scene and creating a greater danger to lives and liberties of the peoples and to world peace.

The fundamental problem at the present juncture is war or peace. Today all the peoples and all the progressive forces are confronted with the most urgent task to join strength to prevent the aggravation of international tensions, conflicts and the trend towards war and pursue and maintain the policy of detente and peace, cooperation and independence. In this spirit Romania is actively participating in the settlement of important problems decisive of the guarantee of peace and cooperation in the international life and in the present-day world.

We give priority in our foreign policy to the development of the relations of friendship and cooperation with all socialist countries, are strengthening solidarity with the developing and nonaligned countries and expanding our relations with all the countries of the world, irrespective of social system, proceeding from the spirit of peaceful co-existence. We regard the principles of complete equality, national independence and sovereignty, non-interference in other's internal affairs, mutual benefit and abandonment of threat by strength and use of strength as the basis of all these relations. We are struggling for the respect of the right of each people to develop freely and independently in accordance with their own will and aspiration.

We pay particular attention to the European situation and strongly demand a stop to the deployment of new medium-range missiles on this continent and withdrawal and destruction of the existing missiles. Romania is making resolute efforts for a concrete step to discontinue arms race before it is too late and realise disarmament, nuclear disarmament first of all. Proceeding from this, we direct special attention to the forthcoming U.N. General Assembly session on disarmament and intend to make every effort to channel it towards more positive results in keeping with the expectation of all people who want to see that a practical activity is launched without delay for disarmament.

We strongly hold that all disputes must be solved peacefully only by the political method, by means of negotiation. Life shows that it is easy to cause a conflict, but it is much more difficult to end it. From this stand we think that efforts must be increased to comprehensively solve the Middle East problem and establish durable and fair peace in this region through the withdrawal of Israel from the land occupied in 1967 and solution of the Palestine problem and founding of an independent Palestine state. We consider that all disputes must be settled in Asia, Africa and the rest of the world in such spirit, in other words, in the spirit of negotiation. We think that a more resolute actions must be taken to eliminate backwardness and the wide gap between poor and rich countries, facilitate the rapid development of all peoples, primarily the backward peoples, make them enjoy the achievements of modern science and technology and establish a new international economic order whereby to create a favourable situation for the economic stabilisation of the world.

It is necessary to let all countries participate in the solution of big and complicated problems facing contemporary mankind with complete equality, irrespective of their size and social system. In this aspect, the medium and small countries, developing and nonaligned countries which hold a majority in the world and are directly interested in the policy of equality, respect of national independence, cooperation and peace should play a particular role. We consider that the United Nations and other international organisations should play a greater role and make a greater contribution to the democratisation of international relations and cooperation, detente and peace.

Dear comrades, I would like to note with satisfaction that Romania and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea will cooperate with each other in the international arena and our two countries and two parties are taking the same or very akin stand in all big problems on present-day peace and cooperation. I express the belief that our peoples will, in the future, too, closely cooperate for the idea of freedom and national independence, peace and cooperation.

With such feelings, I propose a toast to the good health and long life of you, respected Comrade Kim Il-song, to the friendship and solidarity between the Romanian and Korean peoples, to wellbeing and happiness of the friendly Korean people, to the realization of their legitimate desire to reunify the country, to world peace and cooperation, and to the health of you all.

The birth of you, Comrade Kim Il-song, a legendary hero peerless in the history of the fellow countrymen and mankind, marked the beginning of the new history of chuche Korea and the eternal prosperity of the nation and a revolutionary event announcing the advent of the Kim Il-song era, a new era of glory in which the world advances under the rays of chuche.

In your early years when you stood in the van of revolution, you, Comrade Kim Il-song, the outstanding master of thought and theory, founded the immortal chuche idea, the acme of human intelligence. This was your great achievement. You, Comrade Kim Il-song, the hero of all ages, founded the Down-With-Imperialism Union under the brilliant rays of chuche, paved the road of the chuche revolution at its dawn and organized and led to victory the heroic anti-Japanese war for defeating Japanese imperialism and liberating the country, thereby setting an example in the national liberation war in colonies and establishing the glorious revolutionary traditions of chuche.

Right after liberation you Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of the revolution, successfully carried out the historic cause of founding the party, state and army and turned the northern half of the country into a powerful bastion of revolution by accelerating the democratic revolution and the building of a new democratic society at an extraordinarily high tempo. You, the great leader, the iron-willed brilliant commander, defeated and crushed with the chuche-oriented tactics and preeminent art of command the large-scale armed invasion of the American aggressors and the allied forces of imperialism who tried to swallow up the North and thereby demonstrated to the whole world the stamina and spirit of heroic Korea and performed a feat without parrallel in ushering in an era of new upsurge of the anti-imperialist, anti-U.S. struggle on the globe.

You, the great leader, the genius of creation and construction, carried out the socialist revolution in a most original way in the shortest possible period and performed a great miracle and great leap -- fulfilling the great cause of socialist industrialization in a matter of 14 years. By firmly laying the organizational and ideological foundation to carry to completion the chuche cause and strengthen and develop the workers party of Korea into the party of chuche for ever, you, the respected leader, the master of the art of leadership, performed a great feat in the perfect solution of the fundamental problem decisive in the future destiny of the party and revolution for the first time in the history of the international communist movement spanning more than 100 years.

You, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the genius of mankind, imposingly standing on the command post of the era, creditably ushered in a new era of independence with the rays of chuche in which the old forces are going to ruin and the new-emerging forces triumphing, brilliantly adorning the history of the human liberation struggle. The road covered by you, the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song, over the past 70 years is, indeed, an undying chronicle in which you delivered the country and fellow countrymen from the crisis and dedicated your all to the country and the nation, the time and the revolution and a great epic of deep love which can be written only by the most outstanding leader of the people.

The congratulatory message said: As long as the great sun of chuche and the great lodestar of chuche light the road of our struggle as brightly as a lighthouse, our party and people will certainly win victory. It sincerely wished the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song good health and a long life.

[applause]

The chuche idea, established in the flames of the protracted and arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and enriched and developed in the course of the struggle for socialism and communism, whose justness and vitality have been confirmed in the struggle for revolution and construction, is now evoking envy and interest among people who love justice and truth and leading them in the struggle to oppose all types of domination and subjugation and to build a new, free and prosperous society. It is our people's great happiness and utmost honor to engage in revolution and advance along the road directed by the chuche idea, upholding the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song as the leader who has accumulated immortal revolutionary accomplishments with his extraordinary wisdom and outstanding leadership through his profound revolutionary theory and great revolutionary practice. KOREA TIMES REPORTS CHURCH COUNCIL STATEMENT

[Text] A body of dissident Christian clergy and laymen has harshly criticized the present U.S. administration's policies on Korea in a statement clarifying their view on the arson at the Pusan U.S. Cultural Center.

The group, called the Korea Christian Action Organization demanded the U.S. Government recall Gen. John A. Wickham, commander of the U.S. forces in Korea, and Ambassador Richard L. Walker in consideration of "Korean people's growing distrust" of the United States. Members of the KCAO include Bishop Chi Hak-sun of the Catholic Wonju Diocese; Rev. Pak Hyong-kyu; Rev. Kim So-yong, secretary general of the National Council of Churches; Prof. Kim Chang-kuk; Rev. Yi Chong-chang, secretary general of the Catholic Conference of Korea; Rev. Ham Se-ung; and Mrs. Kong Tok-kwi, the wife of former President Yun Po-son.

The statement determined that the arson at the U.S. facility is Pusan was a "direct act of antagonism" against the United States and asserted that a correct understanding of present Korea-U.S. relations was necessary to grasp the meaning of the incident.

The Christian group said that the United States had remained the "most gracious friend" of Koreans since the 1945 liberation but "a decisive change" came in the Korean attitude toward the country when the United States "tolerated" the Kwangju incident in May, 1980. They claimed that Koreans were further displeased by "insulting remarks about Koreans made by U.S. officials under the Reagan administration" and their recent economic policies toward Korea.

As an example, the statement quoted Gen. Wickham as having said on Aug. 8, 1980 that "Koreans are like field mice, they just follow whoever becomes their leader. Democracy is not an adequate system for Koreans." An official at the USFK Public Affairs Office told the KOREA TIMES yesterday that Gen. Wickham had never made such a remark. "The reported statement was wrong," he said.

The statement also said that there was a report that Ambassador Walker had described Korean dissident figures and demonstrating students as "spoiled brats" in an interview on Feb. 16 this year. It cited the controversy among U.S. rice exporters dealing with Korea, the attempted export of poisonous Alaska salmon to Korea and a mass layoff of workers by the U.S.-invested Control Data Korea Co. as cases incurring anger among Koreans.

"Anti-American slogans used in student demonstrations since the Kwangju incident, the arson at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju in December, 1980, and recent critical remarks about the United States by people in religious circles were clear expressions of the anti-U.S. feeling rising in this country, which used to be immune to any anti-American movements," it said.

"The arson at the Pusan U.S. Cultural Center should be understood in this connection," the statement added. The group demanded that the trial of the people involved in the Pusan arson be conducted openly and all facts about the incident be made public correctly. It further asked the government to free or restore the rights of all "political prisoners, stop searching for people charged for political reasons and rehabilitate workers, farmers, professors, students and journalists who were sacrificed in the past."

Foreign Minister's Comments

[Text] Seoul, April 20 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Foreign Minister No Sin-yong said Tuesday the anti-American remarks made by some "senseless Christian clergymen are quite regrettable." He added, however, that the remarks would not damage the existing friendly relations between Seoul and Washington.

No was commenting on a public statement made by a Korean Christian organization demanding the recall of American Ambassador Richard L. Walker and Gen. John A. Wickham, commander of the United Nations Command, for their remarks allegedly critical of Koreans.

No said when he met with Ambassador Walker Monday he made it clear to the American envoy that "there is no need to worry about such a statement because the clergymen demanding the recall were extremely few in number while many others were dismayed by such a senseless statement."

No said that "President Chon Tu-hwan's visit last year to the United States has brought Korea-U.S. relations closer than ever before, and that the two countries have been enhancing their solid partnership as manifested by their joint military exercise, Team Spirit." No's comment was the first official reaction to the anti-American statement.

National Assemblymen Comment

[Text] Some lawmakers yesterday expressed concern over the possibility that what they called a scathing statement by a Korean Christian organization might damage the present amicable ties between Seoul and Washington.

Rep. Sim Sang-u of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) said it is undesirable for priests to cause international controversy by their missionary activities to protect only a few persons. Sim said priests should realize the fact that the nation is divided, and take the future of the nation into account in broad perspectives when formulating policy and issuing statement to the press.

Rep. Kim San-sun of the Korea National Party agrees that religious organizations could take part in state affairs. "But, it must be known that involvement in diplomatic issues does not always necessarily contribute to the promotion of national interest," he noted. "I am deeply concerned that the statement (by the Korean Christian Action Organization) may hamper the traditional friendship between the two countries," Kim said. Kim expressed a hope that the taking part in national issues by religious circles should be made if that will serve the national interest.

Rep. Paek Chan-ki of the parliamentary fraternity club said violence such as the act of arson in the American Cultural Center in Pusan should not be tolerated in a democratic society.

Further Report

[Text] The statement by the Korean Churches' Social Missionary Council contending that the Pusan arson incident was an expression of anti-U.S. sentiment has shocked society. Reporter Kim Yong-su reports details:

[Begin recording] The agitation of anti-U.S. sentiment in a statement issued by the Korean Churches' Social Missionary Council on 15 April [as heard], contending that the Pusan arson incident was an expression of anti-U.S. sentiment, has aroused indignation and condemnation among the people, who ask "Why are they agitating anti-U.S. sentiment?"

The statement, issued in the name of 42 Protestant ministers and Catholic priests of the Korean Churches' Social Missionary Council, claims the arson at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan was an expression of anti-U.S. sentiment denouncing U.S. support for the Kwangju incident and demands that the U.S. Government recall the commander of U.S. forces in Korea, Wickham, and the U.S. ambassador to Korea, Walker. The statement patronizes the arson incident at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan and the priest Choe Ki-sik incident. It says these incidents were related actions with an anti-U.S. sentiment. The statement demands the release of all political prisoners and their amnesty.

According to statistics, as of January there are 33,851 Protestant ministers and 4,797 Catholic priests -- 38,748 religionists -- throughout the country. Therefore, such a statement issued by 42 ministers and priests, constituting only one-one thousandth of all the ministers and priests, cannot represent the will of all ministers and priests. It has aroused strong criticism among Protestant and Catholic churches, as well as ordinary citizens. [end recording]

ASSEMBLY TO HOLD SPECIAL SESSION TO HEAR BUSH

[Excerpt] The National Assembly will hold a one-day special session Monday to hear a message from U.S. Vice President George Bush who will come to Seoul Sunday for a three-day visit at the invitation of Prime Minister Yu Chang-son.

It will be the second time for a U.S. vice president to address the assembly. Shortly after the end of the Korean war in 1953, the then U.S. Vice President Richard Nixon visited Korea and made a speech before the assembly.

The floor leaders of three major political parties agreed on the convening of the extraordinary sitting, when they met at the assembly for two and a half hours yesterday to discuss a host of pending issues. Emerging from the meeting, Yi Chong-chan, floor leader of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), said the floor leaders also agreed to hold another special session in late May or early June.

KOREA TIMES VIEWS 'SUCCESSION PROCESS' IN NORTH

SK180744 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 18 Apr 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Aging Red Leaderships"]

[Text] It is something to observe that the three communist states in our neighborhood are all stricken with formidable problems arising from their aging leaderships in one form or another.

Seemingly most imminent is the situation in the Soviet Union which, featuring a bunch of septuagenarians in its top hierarchy, is on the verge -- by many accounts -- of a major leadership realignment. All sorts of wild rumors are afoot about the poor health and governing ability of Leonid Brezhnev, who has reigned over the communist superpower for the past 18 years and is now a feeble old man 75 years of age. Obviously his days, at least in power, are numbered and that prospect is backed up by growing signs of a power struggle in the Kremlin involving the succession issue.

Then there is another giant, Communist China, which has more or less made an early start in a power shakeup -- inevitably so because of the death of Mao Zedong six years ago. After a series of upheavals, men in their sixties were installed in the party chairmanship and premiership last year. Yet, Beijing still engaged in the process of purges or streamlining its top leadership, which is loaded with a number of septuagenarians and even some octogenarians, including strongman Deng Xiaoping himself, who will be 78 years old in a few months.

Of all this, what is of our immediate and vital concern is developments in North Korea, which marked the 70th birthday of its totalitarian ruler Kim Il-song only this past week -- in a manner ridiculously fanatic even by yardsticks of the communist camp at large.

Kim has now been in power for nearly three and a half decades, thus becoming one of the world's longest-surviving dictators. His political survival has cost successive brutal liquidations of his former comrades-in-arm and henchmen, as illustrated by the recent revelation of eight special concentration camps interning political prisoners and so-called ideological offenders, and moreover entailed an awful personality cult idolizing himself, as accentuated by last week's frantic celebration of his birthday.

To the mockery of the world community, Kim has built himself up and behaved as if he were a divine ruler. But then, he must have been aware of his inescapable advance in age and failing health -- he is reportedly afflicted with heart disease, arthritis and chronic kidney trouble, among other ailments. Thus the Pyongyang ruler faces a serious succession problem, which he has maneuvered to solve by grooming his son -- Chong-il -- as heir apparent, an attempt to institute a hereditary dynasty unprecedented in the communist world.

The son't ascent in the hierarchy was noted in 1980 when he was named to senior posts in four powerful apparatus of the ruling Workers (Communist) Party. Though the much-speculated appointment of Chong-il as a vice president ranking next only to the senior Kim's presidency did not come through in the "newly-elected" Supreme People's Assembly earlier this month, the son has apparently been elevated to the third position in North Korea's power lineup as indicated by his reported standing at various functions in recent weeks.

Chong-il's failure to accede formally to the second position, contrary to long-prevailed forecasts, is subject to various interpretations of probable causes, ranging from repercussion in the military and party cadres to a theory that the senior Kim dislikes a lame-duck status. In any case, it is certain the Pyongyang is involved in an on-going succession process which in all likelihood is pointed to the junior Kim's accession to the throne.

What is feared as but a by-product of such maneuvering is the possibility that the process may aggravate North Korea's already militant and provocative stance toward the South, against which all precautionary steps are in order.

POLICE DENY TORTURING PUSAN ARSON SUSPECT

[Text] The National Police Headquarters on 19 April denied allegations that police have tortured a man in the course of an interrogation about the arson incident at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan. The charge was made by the Korean Christian Action Organization.

An official at the headquarters said: "I make it clear that no one was tortured in connection with the arson incident. Rev Kwon Ho-kyong, pastor and manager of the Christian organization, spread the rumor that Yi Chang-pok, 44, the treasurer of the organization, was tortured while in police custody on the charge of having sheltered Kim Chang-hyon. An investigation concluded the rumor is groundless."

Rev Kwon claimed that he heard about the torture from Archbishop Chi Hak-sun. The police headquarters on 14 April confronted Rev Kwon with Yi, who said he had not been tortured and had said nothing about torture to either Archbishop Chi or Rev Kwon.

[Text] The date 17 April 1975 is inscribed in the pages of history as the day when the Kampuchean people, closely uniting and cooperating with the Vietnamese and Lao peoples, seized brilliant victory over the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their lackeys, the reactionary Lon Nol clique collapsed and its ringleaders were compelled to flee in shame from Kampuchean territory. [applause]

After the country was liberated from the U.S. neocolonialist yoke, the Kampuchean people were happy to begin building a new and happy life. However, the people were plunged into the darkest era in history because the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, colluding with the U.S. imperialists, [words indistinct], that is, the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique, to implement a most barbarous and extremely cruel policy of genocide in Kampuchea.

Following the historic victory of 17 April 1975, the Kampuchean people should have been able to live in peace, independence and happiness. But the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique of traitors to the nation and the revolution, henchmen of the Beijing expansionists, usurped leadership of the party, abolished the gains of the revolution and made 17 April the first day of an era of untold suffering and misery for our nation. They turned the Kampuchean people into slaves and plunged them into the abyss of genocide. With great anger, the Kampuchean people under the leadership of the United Front for National Salvation toppled the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime on 7 January 1979. [applause] While we were achieving this great victory, the Beijing expansionists, colluding with the U.S. imperialists and the reactionaries in Thailand, mustered their henchmen -- Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann -- with the aim of once again destroying our country. Due to the great shame they have suffered in the international arena and because they are enraged at the improving livelihood of our people, they use Sihanouk and Son Sann to play the roles of Pol Pot and Ieng Sary in their farce to find a way to sabotage our authentic revolution. But, since it is well known that like Pol Pot, Sihanouk and Son Sann are also ringleaders of the murderers and traitors to the nation and the people, all of their maneuvers have been exposed and frustrated by the Kampuchean people and peace- and justice-loving progressive opinion throughout the world. The situation in Kampuchea is irreversible. [slogan: "Long live the PRK!" and applause]

During the past 3 years the country has changed enormously and has taken on a new, bright face. This new regime is entirely different from those in the eras of Sihanouk and Lon Nol, which oppressed the people like a tiger preying on men, and from the Pol Pot regime, which was a regime that used shackles, fetters and great destruction to exterminate our race. At present, the Kampuchean people have a new life and enjoy full rights and freedoms as masters of their own land, seas and forests. They are struggling courageously to build and defend their country.

The great achievements scored in all fields in the past 3 years were made possible thanks to the correct and wise leadership of the KPRP and the KUFNCD National Council. It is these good and concrete lines which have enabled our country to revive rapidly. These achievements have been made possible because our people and army have adhered firmly to the spirit of patriotism, nurtured great indignation at the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, U.S. imperialists and their lackeys -- the Pol Pot, Sihanouk and Son Sann groups -- and pledged to defend and build Kampuchea, making it advance toward authentic socialism and prosperity in our beautiful Angkor land. [applause]

These achievements are also attributable to the great support and assistance filled with the pure and noble spirit of proletarian internationalism of the Vietnamese and Soviet peoples and all the fraternal socialist countries. At the same time, they are also attributable to the support and assistance of the people in the world and a large number of international organizations.

On this solemn occasion, on behalf of the Kampuchean people, I express profound thanks to all the people in the fraternal socialist countries and all progressive forces throughout the world which have given and are giving support and assistance to our PRK. [Slogan: "Long live the pure spirit of proletarian internationalism!" and applause]

The PRK enters 1982 as a legitimate state because we have established various state organs and organizations according to legal principles. Our revolutionary forces throughout the country have become strong and increasingly developed. With every passing day, the people have become more aware of the perfidious maneuvers of our enemies -- Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk, Son Sann, Lon Nol and other reactionaries. The bonds of solidarity, friendship and cooperation between Kampuchea, Vietnam, Laos and the Soviet Union as well as other fraternal socialist countries have been strengthened and broadened with every passing day.

In the few years ahead, our goal is to restore the economy and develop culture, but we still have to overcome many difficulties. The base of our economy, still fragile now, cannot yet meet the needs of the people, in particular with regard to consumer goods. The administrative capacity of our cadres in running the state and the economy in all domains and levels still falls short of the requirements of their tasks. We must set aside a part of our forces for use in ensuring security and defending the country. This situation faces all of us and all the state authorities of all levels. These heavy tasks require all of us to work and study simultaneously in order to score new achievements. We must also be responsible for the tasks of launching production and defending and building the country. We must strive to produce goods, practice thrift, pay attention to developing the economy and culture, carry out all tasks in each stage of the year and stand ready to carry out all tasks in the years to come.

In order to welcome the overall situation in our country, we must carry out well the following tasks:

1. Carry out the emulation drive for the success of this year's rainy season production by expanding the cropland and increasing the yield. To do so, we must cultivate the fallowed orchards and ricefields and expand the acreage, trying to grow 1.8 million hectares of rice and secondary crops. We must bear in mind that agriculture in our country must proceed along with animal husbandry, such as oxen and buffalo which constitute necessary draft power for peasants. Therefore, we must encourage family-run animal husbandry throughout the country in order to increase the number of oxen, buffalo, hogs and fowls for use in reducing difficulties in food, draft animals and fertilizer. In 1981, the number of oxen and buffalo increased by more than 10 percent and the number of hogs doubled that in 1980. There are many other sectors that we must expand, such as rubber plantations that have just restored almost one-fifth of the former acreage, and fresh water fish, of which we have caught 50 tons so far.

2. Put all-out efforts into restoring industry and trade while expanding the communications and transport routes and market activities, particularly in the countryside. Increase the role of the state's trade sector while implementing the formula of the people's collective selling and buying, increasing the leadership and expanding the good practice of free markets.

3. Heighten the spirit of (?patriotism), soldiarity and constantly enhance revolutionary vigilance in order to frustrate all maneuvers and activities of the enemies. All the cadres, the entire army and all the people must strive to frustrate all perfidious maneuvers of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, U.S. imperialists and their lackeys -- Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann -- who are seeking by all means to destroy the Kampuchean revolution.

4. Cadres at all levels from the central to grassroots levels must remain close to the people. They must understand and abide by all the policies, decrees and laws of the PRK. They must set good examples for the people to follow. They must work actively in service of the people. They must bear in mind and implement the five good actions which are: 1) To disseminate tirelessly the policy of national solidarity and socialist international solidarity; 2) to carry out whatever is in the interest of the revolution and the country; 3) to denounce the enemies in disguise and false informers; 4) to prevent exploitation and corruption; and 5) to respect the ethnic minorities.

The five bad actions to be prevented are: 1) To work in the interest of the enemy; 2) to corrupt cadres; 3) to spread false information; 4) to waste foodstuffs and material; 5) to cause losses of public property, foodstuffs and arms.

5. Strengthen international solidarity. Presently, this is to strengthen the bonds of friendship, solidarity and cooperation with Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries as well as the progressive countries throughout the world. The Beijing expansionists, U.S. imperialists and their lackeys are seeking by all means to divide the three countries in Indochina and to weaken us in order to facilitate their aggression and to expand their influence over the whole of the Southeast Asian region and their neocolonialism. The solidarity of the three Indochinese countries constitutes a sharp and powerful weapon to defend our independence.

The PRK wishes to have relations of peace, friendship and cooperation with the countries in Southeast Asia and with neighboring countries, particularly Thailand. The PRK has stipulated principles for negotiations in order to settle by peaceful means all differences with ASEAN countries without external interference with the aim of turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability and equality in conformity with the interests and aspirations of the peoples of this region.

We vehemently condemn the acts of interference and opposition against our Kampuchean revolution committed by a number of the ASEAN countries, such as Thailand and Singapore, with the support of the Beijing expansionists and the U.S. imperialists.

We strongly condemn the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, U.S. imperialists and the NATO pact, which are interfering in the internal affairs of other countries in all regions, thus causing instability and increasing tension throughout the world.

We strongly condemn the U.S. imperialists for increasing the production of strategic weapons and military equipment and for their new decisions on the production of toxic chemicals. These activities pose a serious threat to peace in the world.

We voice unreserved support for all the proposals made by the Soviet Union at the talks with the U.S. Government concerning the reduction and abolition of all weapons which have been produced and are being produced, and on the end to future arms races. We fully support the Cuban, Nicaraguan, El Salvadoran and all other peoples in Central America and the Caribbean who are victims of the threats, oppression and aggression by the Yankee imperialists. We demand the Reagan Government end this international terrorism.

We fully support the struggle of the Palestinian, Namibian and the native peoples in South Africa to oppose the Zionist and apartheid regimes' oppression and racial discrimination. We demand that fundamental rights, freedom and self-determination be returned to these people.

We fully support the Angolan people who are being invaded and aggressed against by the international bandit troops of the South African racist regime. We strongly condemn this barbarous and cruel aggression and demand the South African regime end this act of international banditry against Angola.

We most strongly condemn another act of international banditry committed by Israel in annexing Syria's Golan Heights. This act of international banditry is another irrefutable proof that Israel does not desire to live in peace, to coexist peacefully nor to settle the problems with the Palestinian and other Arab people in the region. It serves only the aggressive and expansionist policy of the U.S. imperialists.

Dear comrades and friends:

Based on the correct leadership of the KPRP, the Kampuchean revolution always moves forward. Although there are some difficulties, we hope that Kampuchea will certainly advance toward authentic socialism. [Slogan: "Long live the PRK!" and applause]

On behalf of the KPRP and the KUFNCD National Council, I would like to appeal to all cadres, combatants and people to unite as one man, to rejoice over the victories already scored and to be determined to struggle for more victories.

I also would like to appeal to all Kampucheans living abroad to join in contributing to the defense and construction of our beautiful Angkor fatherland.

Long live the 17 April Spirit! [applause]

Long live the PRK! [applause]

Long live the pure spirit of proletarian internationalist solidarity! [applause]

Long live the everlasting bonds of the fraternal solidarity, friendship and cooperation of Kampuchea, Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and all other fraternal socialist countries! [applause]

Heng Samrin Reception Speech

[Text] During the reception hosted at the Chamka Mon Presidential Palace on the evening of 17 April, Comrade General Secretary Heng Samrin told all guests of honor that though the imperialist powers wreaked their wars of aggression against the Kampuchean people, they could not overcome the heroism and spirit of international solidarity of the Kampuchean people with the fraternal peoples of Vietnam and Laos and were instead handed a shameful defeat by the three Indochinese people on 17 April 1975. The reception was organized by the PRK Council of State to mark the 7th anniversary of the victory over the aggressor U.S. imperialists with the participation of diplomatic corps accredited to Kampuchea and many representatives of international organizations, the foreign press and visiting delegations.

Attending in the presidium were Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers; Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee political bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; and a number of other ministers.

Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State, said: While rejoicing over this occasion, we do not forget that the Kampuchean people and Kampuchea still bear scars and consequences up to the present because of the most savage war of aggression of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys, which lasted for 5 years.

The comrade general secretary laid emphasis on the many achievements obtained during the past more than 3 years. In the economic field, agricultural production was developed and made it possible for us to put an end to famine. It became the basis for us to step toward continuing national reconstrucion. The fourth party congress proceeded with success; the people's power has been strengthened and developed from central to grass-roots levels. In 1981 we conducted a democratic general election.

The comrade stressed: The rebirth of the Kampuchean people and all the successes won by my people during these 3 years cannot be separated from the friendship, solidarity, fraternal cooperation and support of fraternal socialist countries, such as Vietnam, Laos and the Soviet Union, and of the international organizations and peace and justice-loving peoples the world over.

Comrade Heng Samrin took the opportunity of this occasion to extend best wishes to all guests of honor and raised a toast to the success of their cooperation with the Kampuchean people.

The reception proceeded in a most cordial and warm atmosphere with all the diplomatic corps and foreign guests expressing their admiration for and elation at the immense successes of the Kampuchean people.

Comrade Khamphan Vilachit, Lao ambassador to the PRK, on behalf of all diplomats accredited to Kampuchea, stated that the PRK is certainly the sole authentic legal and legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people. He said: We sincerely rejoice over the achievements you have made and are confident that you will win more and greater victories. We stand beside you and support the Kampuchean people in defending and building the country in all fields.

On behalf of all international organizations, (Alan Everett), representative of UNICEF in Kampuchea, said that every new year has brought the Kampuchean people away from the dark days which overshadowed your country. The courage and determination of your people from now on may be an example for other people. We will cooperate with you in rehabilitating whatever you have lost and in rebuilding whatever has been destroyed.

He pledged to use more effectively all the funds available for cooperation on our Kampuchean soil.

Editorial Hails Anniversary

BK191321 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 17 Apr 82

[Station editorial: "17 April -- Our Nation's Great Historic Victorious Day"]

[Text] After solemnly observing the traditional new year, today our people throughout the country are celebrating the glorious 17 April victory anniversary.

The date 17 April reminds us of the resounding victory of the force of great militant solidarity by the peoples of our three Indochinese countries who smashed and defeated the neocolonialist yoke of the U.S. imperialists in Kampuchean territory. During the 5 years of their aggressive war in Kampuchea, the U.S. imperialists sowed all kinds of devastation on our innocent people and destroyed all kinds of agricultural and natural resources in order to install their ferocious imperialist regime. In addition to using the Lon Nol gang as lackeys, they fired all types of artillery pieces and sent all kinds of modern aircraft, including giant B-52's, to savagely strafe and bomb our country day and night in a move to crush the raging resistance movement of our people.

In the face of the incessant threats of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys, however, our heroic Kampuchean people were never cowed. Though our country was small with a little population and unsophisticated weapons, our people always upheld the tradition of undaunted struggle and courage to overcome all kinds of hardship in order to finally defeat the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their lackeys, completely liberating the country on 17 April 1975.

This historic event filled the world with consternation and admiration for the Kampuchean people. This historic victory put an end to the yoke of the feudalist, capitalist and reactionary gang and the colonialists and necolonialists who had exploited the Kampuchean people for centuries, and opened a new chapter -- one of independence and freedom -- in our history.

The great victory won by the Kampuchean people over U.S. imperialism was a common victory of the three fraternal peoples of the Indochinese countries who had united and shoulder to shoulder fought in the same trench.

It was most regrettable, however, that the great, brilliant victory -- which was won with the sacrifice of a great deal of flesh and blood by our people -- was usurped by the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan traitors who turned it into a tragedy unprecedented in the history of humankind. They opened the door to the Beijing expansionists to implement their diabolical Maoist scheme and to drown the Kampuchean fatherland in a sea of blood and tears. At the instigation of the Beijing expansionists, the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang unhesitatingly pursued a genocidal policy against its own nation, turning the people into slaves bereft of rights and freedom and living like animals.

Within merely 3 years, the gang massacred 3 million innocent people in our country and abolished virtually all of the national and cultural infrastructures. Moreover, they transformed Kampuchea into a springboard in service of the expansionist ambitions of the Beijing clique and provoked aggressive wars against neighboring countries -- first of all Vietnam -- thus directly threatening peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Faced with such a danger of genocide and national extinction, the Kampuchean people once again rose up to wage a struggle with the sincere assistance and support of the heroic fraternal Vietnamese people. In a resolute joint struggle, they toppled the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime, the out-and-out lackeys of the Beijing expansionists, completely liberating the country on 7 January 1979.

The successive victories we have won are evidence of our nation's precious patriotism in all generations and the effective strength of the strategic solidarity of the peoples of our three counries of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos. These immense victories of our people have certainly made an active contribution to peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world. Therefore, we must continue our efforts to strengthen and develop our tradition of courageous struggle and to enhance it with greater significance for the glorious future of our people and country.

On the occasion of the observance of this year's 17 April anniversary, we are even more confident in and optimistic of the monumental revolutionary gains in all fields obtained in the past more than 3 years under the correct and enlightened leadership of the KPRP. At the same time, we pledge to further enhance the spirit of 17 April and to uphold the banner of patriotism and international solidarity continually in order to build a prosperous Kampuchean fatherland advancing gradually through the transitional period toward pure socialism.

CHEM SNGUON ATTENDS KAMPOT FRONT MEETING

BK190931 Phnom Penh in French 0408 GMT 19 Apr 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 20 Apr (SPK) -- The front organization of Kampot Province, about 100 km southwest of Phnom Penh, recently held a recapitulative meeting in the presence of Chem Snguon, deputy secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council.

The meeting decided to broaden the front committee to 21 members, to implement the Fourth KPRP Congress and third front congress resolutions, to consolidate the internal union of the district, commune and village front committees, to enlarge mass organizations and to intensify international solidarity.

Over the past more than 3 years, the population of Kampot under the leadership of the KPRP and KUFNCD National Council has achieved many successes in the reconstruction and defense of the country, particularly in exhorting the masses to heighten their sense of responsibility as the masters of the collectivity and of the country.

In 1980, the province cultivated 82,000 hectares of rice against 40,000 hectares in (?1979) and the cultivated area was brought, despite drought, to 15,800 hectares in 1981.

The salt mines, seafood production and the forest exploitation have been enlarged.

The provincial hospital and five district dispensaries have given medical care to the people.

In the 1981-82 school year the first-level education schools enrolled 90,000 students and the second-level education school enrolled 2,000 others.

LAOTIANS SAID TO CAPTURE SOVIET CHEMICAL WEAPON

[Text] Laotian resistance troops have captured what they claim is solid proof that the Soviet Union is using poison gas warfare in Southeast Asia -- a rocket, with Soviet markings and a warhead which allegedly contains mycotoxin chemicals.

The Bangkok POST learned yesterday that the Laotians turned the weapon over to officials of the Australian Government, who will see that the rocket and its warhead are scientifically analysed.

A diplomatic source directly involved in the search for information on "yellow rain" called the rocket find "extremely exciting...one of the best possibilities yet to pin down this controversy."

The resistance forces, operating in the Laotian panhandle, also brought other chemical samples out of Laos for chemical analysis, sources said.

Australian Embassy officials yesterday refused to comment on whether they had received the rocket. Just over a week ago, they denied having received any chemical samples from Indochina.

But a number of other sources said the weapon, 120 cm long, was handed over to Ausralians earlier this week after it was brought into Thailand from southern Laos.

"We believe this is 'the smoking gun' which will prove once and for all that the Soviet Union is directly involved in the use of chemical warfare in Laos," said one source familiar with the project.

The rocket itself, said sources who have seen it, is probably American-made and captured by Vietnamese communist forces when they overran South Vietnam in the 1975 Ho Chi Minh campaign.

The warhead, however, has markings in the Russian Cyrillic alphabet. Experts have tentatively identified it as a B-40, which they described as a variant of the standard B-40 and B-41 rocket propelled grenades (RPG's).

A member of the resistance who handled the weapon even before it was disarmed for safety said the warhead "sort of sloshed like a liquid" when it was shaken, and that whatever was inside was definitely not a solid explosive.

From its description, the weapon matched the characteristics of a rocket which a defecting Laotian pilot claimed he had used to spread "yellow rain" on Laotian villages from a small spotter-type airplane.

The pilot said the warheads on the "smoke rockets" he fired were noticeably looser than similar rockets with explosive tips. This was also noted by resistance team members, the sources said.

The circumstances of the capture of the Soviet-marked rocket are not yet known, although resistance sources said the search and capture of the weapon and the subsequent trek to the Thai frontier took well over a month. The capture was made in the general area of Savannakhet, capital of the southern Laotian province of the same name.

A former high-ranking officer of the Royal Thai Army was kept informed on progress of the operation, the sources said.

A diplomatic source said that a few selected officials in Bangkok were informed that the weapon was on its way several weeks beforehand.

The resistance troops involved are followers of former Laotian Deputy Prime Minister Gen Phoumi Vosavan, the sources said. Phoumi himself was reportedly directly involved at one stage of the operation to seize the rocket.

The 60-year-old Phoumi reportedly commands the loyalty of one of the biggest and best military forces in southern Laos. His force includes some ex-Pathet Lao troops who oppose Vietnamese domination of their country.

Phoumi has lived in Thai exile since 1965, when his attempted coup d'etat against Prime Minister Gen Ouan Rattikul failed in bloody fighting in Vientiane and Phoumi was forced to paddle across the Mekong River to sanctuary.

In his heyday, he was known to be close to American officials and is a French-trained military officer. It is not clear, source said, exactly why he chose Australia as a country to analyse this alleged chemical weapon and samples.

LOATIANS TO CONTINUE SEARCH FOR CHEMICAL WEAPONS

[Text] Resistance forces in Laos have been instructed to try to obtain a sample of a new chemical weapons, described as a "torch" which, burned in clusters around a village, spreads deadly chemicals through its smoke, sources said yesterday.

The torch has been used around populated areas, where Laotians were told that it was an antimalarial fumigating device, the sources said.

So far, there has been no confirmation of the reports, but sources with direct ties to the resistance said torches have reportedly killed some villagers and caused illness to other with symptoms identical to that reported in cases of "yellow rain."

"We think that this is another methods of delivery of chemical warfare," said one source with ties to the resistance. "We'd like to bring one back to have a good look at it."

Laotian resistance forces in both northern and southern areas of the country have been told to give priority to recovery of one of the torches if they hear of their use in their operational areas.

In recent weeks, Laotian resistance forces have provided what one Western diplomat called "a basketful" of suspected chemical warfare weaponry and residue for testing in sophisticated laboratories in Thailand and abroad.

Material ranged from scraping from leaves and rocks in areas suspected of being subjected to toxic warfare to a rocket with a warhead which may contain lethal mycotoxins.

Several countries, in addition to the United States, have begun to search actively for information and samples for analysis, diplomatic sources said. Australian and Canadian officials have said publicly they are interested in investigating the growing claims that the Soviet Union is behind chemical warfare in Southeast Asia and Afghanistan.

Sources said that reports of the "torches" had reached outside Laos only in recent weeks, and authorities are eager to hear more about them. One Laotian who claimed to have seen the torches in use said Laotian troops told villagers they were going to burn them around the village perimeter to rid the area of mosquitoes. But after the torches had burned for a while, emitting clouds of variously coloured smoke, villagers began to vomit blood and become unconscious. Another source reporting a similar incident, said several villagers died after falling sick.

SUPREME COMMAND REPORTS ON BORDER SITUATION

BK200757 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 18 Apr 82

[Text] The Supreme Command Information Office has issued a report on the situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border during the week ending 15 April as follows:

The Vietnamese-Heng Samrin side has repaired the roads leading to the Thai-Kampuchean border and accumulated weapons and war materials in preparations for a big suppression drive against the Kampuchean resistance factions.

Meanwhile, the Kampuchean Khieu Samphan forces have deployed heavy weapons to counter a possible attack from the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin side. However, constant heavy fighting between the two warring parties along the Thai-Kampuchean border resulted in the shelling of Thai territory and violations of Thailand's sovereignty which led to several clashes with Thai border security authorities and caused damage to life and property of Thai civilians and authorities.

During the period under review, 48 shells landed at Khao Saraphi, Saphan Khlong Hat villages in Watthananakhon District, Khok Sabaeng village in Aranyaprathet District, Prachin Buri Province, and at Khao Lan village in Muang District, Trat Province.

The Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops fired 20 shells at the border patrol police base at Khao Wong area in Khlong Yai District, Trat Province.

Unknown foreign troops fired 130 shells at the border patrol police base at Khao Lan village in Muang District, Trat Province.

Thai troops engaged in two clashes with armed Khmers in the vicinity of the northeast of Nong Samet village, Ta Phraya District, Prachin Buri, and at Dan Chumphon village, Bo Rai District, Trat Province.

OFFICIAL REPORTS ON BURMESE BORDER INCIDENT

[Text] Tak -- Burmese troops crossed into Thailand last Friday [16 April] and set fire to a worker's hut and destroyed a river embankment, Deputy Governor Wanit Phonphibun reported.

In a report on the incident to the Interior Ministry, Mr Wanit said 12 Burmese troops crossed the Moei River, the natural demarcation line between Thailand and Burman, and entered village no 6 in Ban Huey Muang, Tambon Tha Sai Luat of Mae Sot, at about 3 p.m.

The intruders removed logs from an embankment built to prevent the river from eroding its bank and let them float away. They also burnt down a hut used by workers employed to build the embankment.

The report said Thai military officials in the area later discussed the incident with Burmese officers.

AFP REPORTS THACH PRESS CONFERENCE IN BRUSSELS

NC191936 Paris AFP in English 1900 GMT 19 Apr 82

[Text] Brussels, 19 Apr (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach today said his country was ready to consider membership in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations as soon as what he called "the Chinese threat" is eliminated from that region. Mr Thach was speaking at a press conference here after three hours of talks with Edgar Pisani, a member of the European Economic Community (EEC) Development Commission.

Informed sources said Mr Thach expressed Vietnam's (?interest) in greater cooperation with Europe. But Mr Pisani said the EEC stood firm on its position of 1979, when food aid to Vietnam was suspended after Vietnamese troops intervened in Cambodia, the sources said. Charging that China "intentionally kept up tension" in Southeast Asia, Mr Thach repeated that Vietnamese troops would leave Cambodia "after the end of the war imposed by China".

He praised Soviet aid to Vietnam but made it clear that his country welcomed broader economic cooperation with non-communist countries. Mr Thach insisted that any such aid be "without conditions" and based solely on the "principle of reciprocal interest".

He said Vietnam had rejected a Chinese offer of 1,500 million dollars because "Beijing wanted to attach conditions", adding: "We did the same thing with the United States."

Mr Thach said Vietnam has constantly tried to achieve a better understanding with ASEAN pact countries, so "why not join ASEAN when the Chinese threat is gone?"

On other international issues, he said Vietnam supported Argentina in its dispute with Britain over the south Atlantic Falkland Islands. The crisis, he said, "rested on the right of colonized people to their independence". The minister said Vietnam also supported China's claim to Taiwan.

Mr Thach is to meet tomorrow with Leo Tindemans, the Belgian external relations minister, who is current president of the European Community Council of Ministers to July. He will travel to Bonn after his stay in Brussels.

ANNIVERSARY OF PLAYA GIRON COMMEMORATED

NHAN DAN 19 Apr Comment

OW190725 Hanoi VNA in English 0708 GMT 19 Apr 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 19 -- "The Vietnamese people always stand by the side of socialist Cuba", says NHAN DAN in an article today marking the [Playa] Giron victory anniversary today. It stresses: "Having defeated an aggressive mercenary force of the U.S. within 72 hours and succeeded in maintaining their sovereignty over the past 20 years or so in a country next door to the imperialist ringleader, the Cuban people have testified to the truth that a revolutionary people with a high fighting spirit can overcome all trials and hardships in their advance.

"During its existence and development, the new regime in Cuba has constantly faced a cruel hostile policy of the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen. The Reagan administration, seemingly forgetting a bitter lesson for the U.S. at the Giron Beach, is still nurturing an illusion of wiping out by force the revolution on that heroic island".

NHAN DAN goes on: "The situation in the Central America-Caribbean region now is very serious. Continuing the hostile policy of its predecessor administrations, the Reagan administration is scheming to break down the movement in the region for national independence, democracy and progress. The U.S. has carried out brutal plots, including the use of biological weapons, against the Cuban people.

"In face of the explosive situation in that region, public opinion throughout the world has raised its voice in protest against the U.S. acts of war and its brazen interference in the internal affairs of Central American and Caribbean countries and for an end to U.S. provocations and threats against Cuba, Nicaragua, Grenada and other progressive countries in the region.

"President Fidel Castro has affirmed his people's determination to readily counter any aggression. Should the U.S. imperialists dare to attack Cuba again, they would invite upon themselves a failure even more bitter than the one they suffered at the Giron Beach 21 years ago".

NHAN DAN further says: "Together with the world's progressive people, the Vietnamese people firmly support the Cuban people's just struggle against the U.S. hostile and aggressive moves. We also support the initiative of Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo and the constructive proposals of the Nicaraguan revolutionary government for solving the problems in Central America and the Caribbean through negotiations on the basis of respect for the local peoples' sovereignty and right to self-determination. Those proposals reflect the legitimate aspiration of the Latin American peoples to build their countries into independence, free, peaceful and prosperous ones without U.S. interference."

OW191806 Hanoi VNA in English 1536 GMT 19 Apr 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 19 -- A talk in honour of the 21st anniversary of the Giron Beach victory of Cuba was jointly held here today by the Vietnam Committee for Solidarity and Friendship With Other Peoples and the Vietnam-Cuba Friendship Association. It was attended by Tran Duy Hung and Tran Hoai Nam, Presidium members of the Vietnam Committee for Solidarity and Friendship with Other Peoples, Le Thi Xuyen, vice-president of the Vietnam-Cuba Friendship Association, Cuban Ambassador to Vietnam Faure Chomon Mediavilla, and others.

Speaking on this occasion Ambassador Faure Chomon Mediavilla brought out the historic significance of the Giron Beach victory and stressed: "The Giron Beach victory is a clear manifestation of the revolutionary heroism and indomitable fighting spirit of the Cuban army and people. It was a crushing blow at the U.S. aggressors, completely foiling their dark design."

After praising the close militant solidarity between Cuba and Vietnam, he sincerely thanked the party, the government and people of Vietnam for their vigorous support and precious assistance to the Cuban people's just cause. The Cuban ambassador also expressed his firm belief that with the great assistance of the Soviet Union and other countries in the socialist community and with the sympathy and support of progressive mankind, the Cuban people would certainly smash all dark schemes of U.S. imperialism to defend their homeland.

PAPER WARNS AGAINST PRC EXPANSIONIST AMBITIONS

[Editorial: "Uphold Our Shining Just Cause in National Defense"]

[Text] Since the victory of the struggle filled with sacrifices and dnagers against the United States for national salvation, our people have no other desire than to live in peace, independence and freedom in order to build their country. However, entertaining ambitions of expansionism and big-nation hegimony, the reactionary Chinese rulers have frenziedly implemented a hostile policy toward our country. They used the Pol Pol-Ieng Sary lackey clique to attack our southwestern border and in February 1979 launched a war of aggression against our country's northern border. Since the defeat of this criminal war of aggression, the Beijing rulers have continued their dark scheme by waging a multifaceted war of destruction against us and have made intensive preparations for invading our country again. Militarily they have massed large numbers of troops close to our northern border; conducted frequent spying, provocative, subversive and landgrabbing operations; and encroached into our territorial waters.

It is a sacred duty and a shining just cause of our party, people and troops to defend the country. Our people and troops must be fully aware of the reactionary nature of the enemy by constantly upholding their vigilance, strengthening their national defense force and standing ready to resolutely smash all the plots and tricks of the Beijing expansionists.

Our people nurture no hatred against the Chinese people, and in our struggle to maintain peace and protect national independence, we always desire to restore and develop lasting friendship with the Chinese people.

The Chinese people are diligent. Several times they shared weal and woe with us during the common struggle against imperialism and colonialism. They also hold no grudge against us. Only the reactionaries among the Beijing ruling circles are treacherous and double-dealing. They have driven the Chinese people's children to the battlefront, putting at stake the assets, blood and flesh of the Chinese people in the unjust anti-Vietnam war while jeopardizing the Chinese people's revolutionary gains in the power struggle between various factions. The Chinese people themselves are victims of their own leaders' policy of big-nation hegemony.

Consequently, while resolutely fighting to defend the country, we have always distinguished between the Beijing rulers and the Chinese people, clearly differentiating friend from foe.

The most sacred duty and role of prime importance for our people's armed forces is to constantly increase the level of combat preparedness in order to smash all the enemy's armed provocations and to frustrate all of its other subversive tricks. At the same time, we must strive by all means to make the Chinese people clearly understand and sympathize with our shining just cause so that they are fully aware of the crimes of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists and their chauvinistic great-han acts and ideas.

In addition to their duties of fighting well and maintaining good combat readiness, our people's armed forces, especially the frontline units, should organize our troops and people along the border, having them expound our just cause well.

Moreover, we should attentively and correctly implement the policies toward captured enemy troops and those who have fled to our side. Implementing our party's humanitarian policy, we should investigate and carefully consider the cases of people fleeing to our side due to Chinese oppression in order to treat them well. We are also ready to save even the captured enemy troops and those bad Chinese people mingling among our people. Treating them humanely and leniently will gradually enlighten them and make them conscious of our cause. We should perform the educational and propaganda tasks well so that these people tell the truth about the dark schemes and crimes perpetrated by the expansionists and hegemonists in Vietnam as well as in China when they return home. They will tell of our just cause, helping the Chinese people distinguish friend from foe and understand the truth so that they can spearhead the struggle against the enemy -- their own leaders -- and support our just struggle.

Resolving firmly to defend our country, we should uphold our combat spirit and be prepared to fight well by accelerating the development of all political, economic, cultural and military fields while intensifying our diplomatic activities. At the same time, we should emphasize propaganda to clarify our just cause and to nakedly expose the reactionary character, plots and acts of the enemy. We should expose all the distorted and lying tricks and crimes of the Chinese rulers toward their troops and people, thus frustrating all of their schemes of aggression and contributing effectively to our national defense.

We resolve to defeat the enemy on both fronts by our invincible military force and by our shining just cause.

THACH MESSAGE TO UN ASSAILS SOUTH AFRICAN ACTS

OW191758 Hanoi VNA in English 1510 GMT 19 Apr 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 19 -- Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has sent a message to U.N. Secretary General Perez de Cuellar condemning the South African authorities for sentencing to death three South African patriots of the African National Congress.

The message reads: "The death sentence passed on the three South African patriots is another criminal act committed by the South African authorities against the self-determination, human rights and the patriotic movements of the South African people and grossly violates justice and the elementary principles of international law.

"Proceeding from the principled position of resolutely supporting the South African people's patriotic struggle for self-determination and human rights against the colonial, racist South African administration, the people and Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam demand that the South African administration nullify the death sentence passed on the three South African patriots of the A.N.C. organization and put an end to the repression of all other patriots in South Africa.

"Together with their crimes against the South African people, the racist South African regime, backed by the U.S. and other reactionary forces, is still illegally occupying Namibia, launching repeated aggressions against the frontline states, especially Angola, Mozambique and Zambia, thus violating the fundamental principles of the United Nations Charter and international law.

"The Security Council should take appropriate measures of sanction against the racist South African administration in accordance with Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter with a view to checking its criminal acts."

On behalf of the Standing Committee of the Cat Hai District Party Committee, Comrade (Tran Khoat) briefed Chairman Truong Chinh on the status of production and work in general and on the outstanding recent achievements recorded by the party organization and people of Cat Hai, as well as on their views toward the guidelines and tasks set forth for the implementation of the 1982 State Plan in light of the fifth party congress resolution. He also invited Comrade Truong Chinh to tour a number of establishments on Cat Ba Island.

At a friendly get-together with members of the party committee and people's committee and cadres of various sectors in Cat Hai District, Chairman Truong Chinh pointed to the fine success of the fifth national party congress; the strategic tasks of the Vietnamese revolution in the new stage; the major economic and social guidelines and tasks and targets set forth for the 1981-85 period and the 1980's; and the major policies and measures aimed at developing favorable conditions and overcoming difficulties in support of the struggle to build socialism and defend the socialist fatherland.

On this occasion, Chairman Truong Chinh also commended the party organization and people of Haiphong City for the achievements they have recently scored in the fields of agricultural and industrial production and land reclamation and in developing various professions and occupations and making and exporting handicraft and fine arts items, as well as in national defense and so forth.

He said: These achievements have been scored through the active and creative discussions between the local leadership and the masses. They are, however, initial achievements only. In light of the fifth party congress resolution, the party organization and people of Haiphong will certainly exert still greater efforts and achieve still greater progress.

On this visit Chairman Truong Chinh also conveyed the kind regards and best wishes of the party Central Committee and the Council of State to the elderly people, teenagers, children and families that have performed meritorious deeds for the revolution, as well as to the families of fallen combatants and all wounded and sick soldiers in Cat Hai District.

Chairman Truong Chinh wished the party organization and people of Cat Hai District many new and still greater successes in the emulation movement to fulfill the targets set forth by the fifth party congress and presented the district party committee and people's committee with a portrait of President Ho Chi Minh embroidered on a silk background.

On behalf of the party organization and people of Cat Hai, Comrade (Tran Khoat) expressed joy over Chairman Truong Chinh's visit and considered it as a source of encouragement from the party Central Committee and the Council of State, which has reflected their concern and care for the district. He pledged that he will carry out the instructions given by Chairman Truong Chinh scrupulously and that, in the immeditate future, the party organization and people of Cat Hai will step up the emulation movement to implement all the resolutions adopted by the fifth party congress.

PHAM VAN DONG ADDRESSES FORESTRY CONFERENCE

[From weekly review of domestic and international situation]

[Text] In Hanoi the forestry sector has held a conference to discuss guidelines for its development during the 1981-85 5-year period and the eighties and matters relating to afforestation, management and protection of forests in accordance with the resolutions of the fifth party congress. At this conference, 52 provinces and units in the sector signed emulation pledges to overfulfill the 1982 State Plan.

Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong attended and addressed the conference. He analyzed in detail the special importance, organic relationship and multifaceted effect of forests and forest trees with regard to land, water, weather, flora, fauna, production and environment at present and in the future. He dealt with the unforeseeable disastrous consequences that have occurred and will occur as a result of forest destruction and presently letting millions of hectares of bald hills unattended.

Chairman Pham Van Dong pointed out that forests and land are linked, closely interrelated and mutually related. Only by having forests do we have water. Only by maintaining forests do we preserve water and acquire water conservancy, aquatic products and hydroelectricity to support production and day-to-day life. It is because of this deep significance that our forefathers referred to forests as gold. We must make everyone, old and young, including elementary school students, clearly realize and act upon what our forefathers had said about forests. In effect, forests are even more precious than gold.

DIRECTIVE ON FLOOD-PREVENTION WORK ISSUED

[Text] On 13 April the Council of Ministers chairman issued a directive on the 1982 task of flood prevention and typhoon control. The directive says:

Floods and typhoons occur every year in our country. Although the intensity differs, they all cause damage. All sectors and authorities at all levels must be adequately prepared to cope with floods and typhoons at any time. At the same time, they must remain vigilant against all enemy plots to take advantage of typhoons to destroy dikes, dams and other construction projects.

The Council of Ministers chairman requests the people's committee chairmen at all levels and the leaders of all central level sectors involved to implement urgently the following main duties:

1. All sectors and echelons must review their flood prevention and typhoon control tasks during 1981 and draw upon their good points and shortcomings for practical lessons and on this basis formulate plans for preventing floods and controlling typhoons in 1982.

2. Those provinces having dikes must focus their leadership on mobilizing all local forces to embank dikes, build dike supporting fences and sluices and struggle to fulfill all plans on schedule. They must inspect and reclassify dikes, dike-supporting fences and sluices qualitatively and devise measures to protect them adequately, paying special attention to cracks, including previously repaired ones. Dike control teams must be consolidated and their role must be developed. They must be made the core of the people's forces and organizations which combat floods to protect dikes.

All violations of dike protection regulations must be prevented. Administrative and legal action must be taken to deal with violations that destroy dikes, dike-supporting fences and sluices and with the theft of telephone wire and materials used in flood prevention and typhoon control.

3. The coastal provinces in the country's central part must devise plans to control typhoons and prevent floods, especially in low-lying and estuarine areas. Steps must be taken to prevent water from rising above the levels anticipated in lakes and dams which are being used and constructed. Action to clear roads and clogged culverts to ensure smooth, through traffic in the rainy and flood season must be anticipated.

4. The Mekong River Delta provinces and the former Sixth Region must depend on the characteristics and situation in their localities to organize and mobilize the people to build embankments around rice plots to protect rice against early floods, especially the summer-fall rice, and to organize crop cultivation seasons in line with the local situation in order to reduce damage caused by typhoons and floods. Plans must provide for adequate shelter to protect the people's life and property and state assets.

5. Provinces and districts in the Bac Bo and other mountainous regions -- especially towns, cities, populated areas and river ports -- must take preventive measures against flash floods in order to avoid harm to human life or damage to the assets of the state and people.

6. All economic sectors and local authorities must revamp their flood prevention and typhoon control committees. Members of the committees must be placed in charge of definite areas in addition to their general duties. They must be responsible for supervising and controlling primary installations in implementing flood-prevention and typhoon-control plans and for personally guiding the fighting of typhoons and flash floods.

7. The northern mountainous provinces and the southern provinces of Hau Giang, Tien Giang, Ben Tre, Dong Nai, Tay Ninh, Cuu Long, Song Be, Dac Lac, Gia Lai-Kontum and Lam Dong; the Vung Tau-con Dao Special Zone; and some mountainous districts in other provinces where the flood and typhoon situation is rarely complicated do not need a flood-prevention and typhoon committee. The people's committees in these localities will depend on the situation to organize this task practically.

8. The Ministry of Water Conservancy must control and supervise localities in fulfilling the plan for building dikes, dike-supporting fences and sluices; closely guide all subordinate units and various water conservancy services and bureaus; effectively protect and use lakes, dams and the system of dikes, dike-supporting fences and sluices in fighting flash floods and typhoons; and make all the required facilities available at the projects to divert or slow down flash floods.

9. The Ministry of Defense will help the central flood-prevention and typhoon-control committee by charging engineer units with exploding mines at the projects to divert or slow down flash floods and by directing the armed forces to participate actively in combating floods and typhoons and in preventing the enemy from destroying water conservancy projects in the areas where they are stationed.

10. All sectors involved at the central level, such as the General Department of Hydrometeorology, the General Post and Telegraph Department and the Ministries of Communications and Transportation, Interior and Material Supply, must consider their roles in actively participating in the common task of flood prevention and typhoon control and must provide timely and effective guidance for implementing this task.

11. The agriculture sector is responsible for guiding localities in rationally organizing the crop cultivation patterns, especially for those localities annually affected by waterlogging. At the same time, a reserve of crop seeds must be secured to restore production when so required.

The Council of Ministers chairman requests all sector leaders and the people's committees of all provinces and cities to overcome all difficulties and strive to surge forward in order to defeat natural disasters and enemy threats actively and resolutely.

FRG MAGAZINE CITED ON U.S. TOXIC CHEMICAL USE

OW170220 Hanoi VNA in English 1456 GMT 16 Apr 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, April 16 -- According to approximate estimates, many million Vietnamese are affected by toxic chemicals sprayed by the United States during the war, reports the West German magazine STERN in a recent issue. The magazine says that 60,000 ex-GI's are well aware that the U.S. Government, especially the Pentagon, are responsible for their own harm. The magazine notes that in dozens of cases "Agent Orange" was sprayed even on American positions.

But the effects on American troops are insignificant compared to the tragedy of the Vietnamese people, STERN remarks. It quotes Paul Reutershan who participated in aerial sprays in 1968 as saying that he was beginning to die at that time but knew nothing about it. Reutershan was affected and returned incurably ill, the magazine says.

SUZUKI MEETS TOP SDF OFFICERS, STRESSES DEFENSE

[Text] Tokyo, April 19, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki stressed Monday that a steady improvement in the nation's defense capability of a minimum necessity to protect the country was an obligation that should be fulfilled by Japan as a matter of course. He appealed for defense efforts by Japan and said the government was exerting efforts to fulfill the level set forth in the general outline of the defense buildup plan as soon as possible.

The prime minister made these statements at a meeting of top-ranking uniformed officers of the Self-Defense Forces held at the Defense Agency. The meeting, the 18th of its kind held so far, was attended also by Director General Soichiro Ito of the Defense Agency; Adm Tsugio Yata, chairman of the Joint Staff Council; and some 100 top officers of the Ground, Maritime and Air Self-Defense Forces.

In his address, the prime minister noted the severe global situation, stagnant business conditions and the intensification of trade friction, and said Japan should seriously consider what sort of role it should fulfill and the contributions it should make for the sake of world peace. At the same time, he stressed the need for Japan's maintenance of the war-renouncing Constitution, defense efforts exclusively for defending the country, steps so that Japan will not pose a military threat to neighboring countries, and the three-point nonnuclear policy.

Suzuki commented also on overall security and said that defense capability was the final means of the people to resist aggression, noting that the responsibility of the forces in this regard was important. He declared that the Self-Defense Forces must be strong and that they must strive to secure the trust and cooperation of the people. Ito also spoke at the meeting, and pointed to the severity of the international situation. Commenting on the pending problem of military technology exchanges with the United States, he said he hoped to expand such ties based on the basic principle of mutual exchanges and from the point of view of promoting cooperative relations with the U.S. on equipment and technology.

The meeting of top-ranking uniformed officers of the SDF is being held around once annually in order to exchange views on problems faced by the SDF and brief the uniformed officers on the policies of the Defense Agency.

LDP STUDIES MEASURES ON OPENING MARKET TO IMPORTS

[Text] Tokyo, April 20, KYODO -- The ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's special panel on international trade Tuesday started studying measures to be taken by Japan in response to U.S. and European calls for further opening of the Japanese market to foreign imports.

The LDP special committee on external economic relations, chaired by Masumi Esaki, former minister of international trade and industry, began the study on the basis of a new market-opening package now being drafted by the government. The government's package -- the second in a series -- consists of eight measures, including relaxation of import controls, further reductions in the nation's import tariffs, simplification of import-testing procedures and liberalization of the services sector.

The committee will determine its position on these issues during discussions Wednesday through Friday, in line with a government policy to formally adopt the new package at a meeting of economic ministers on May 7.

Discussions at Tuesday's general meeting of the LDP centered on a new U.S. demand that Japan include some farm and fishery products in the new market-opening package. The demand was conveyed to Japanese Embassy officials in Washington last weekend by an official of the U.S. trade representative's office. This marked a turnaround in the U.S. position that the Washington government would seek Japanese decontrol on farm and fishery product imports through bilateral consultation under provisions of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Committee members expressed strong opposition to the new U.S. demand, asserting that it disrupts a timetable for drawing up the new market-opening package agreed on earlier between the government and the ruling party. They said that the government should not compromise easily with the U.S. Government on this matter.

LDP sources said it may now prove difficult for the government and the ruling party to reach agreement on the contents of the new market-opening package before the May 7 meeting of economic affairs ministers as a result of the new U.S. demand.

Some members of the LDP committee said they cannot understand why the U.S. Government made such a new demand at a time when Japan is trying its best to work out a new package. They said Japan should determine a new strategy after sounding out the real intentions behind the U.S. demand.

In a related development, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa said the government will ask the U.S. Government why it made such a new demand. He told a press conference that the government may have to work out new measures to cope with the latest U.S. demand when it holds a special meeting to hear an interim report on the new market-opening package on April 26.

KYODO: $4 BILLION IN AID TO BE OFFERED TO ROK

[Excerpts] Tokyo, April 20, KYODO -- The government has agreed on extension of dollar 4 billion in loan aid to South Korea in response to its request for dollar 6 billion for the country's 1982-86 economic development plan, government sources said Tuesday. The sources said the dollar 4 billion breaks down into dollar 1.5 billion in government loans and dollar 2.5 billion in Export-Import Bank loans with an interest of "close to but less than 7 percent" per annum. The proposed loans do not include the commodity credit considered initially, the sources said.

The agreement came after months of negotiations among ministry officials concerned to draw up a plan for economic cooperation, which would be acceptable to both Japan and South Korea. The dollar 4 billion figure had been informally mentioned by Foreign Ministry officials but had been rejected by Finance Ministry officials as "too much." Though the officials said that dollar 4 billion is the "maximum possible" they can extend, it remains to be seen whether the Seoul government will accept the offer.

Foreign Minister No Sin-yong recently said the South Korean position (of seeking dollar 6 billion) remains unchanged. Japanese and South Korean Government officials have held several rounds of talks but failed to reach agreement on the extent to which Japan could or should underwrite the five-year economic development plan.

The Japanese officials said whether or not South Korea agrees to the dollar 4 billion figure depends on President Chon Tu-hwan, principal designer of the dollar 6 billion economic assistance request to Japan. The Tokyo government may send Vice Foreign Minister Ryozo Sunobe to Seoul for consultations with Korean Government officials, the sources said. Sunobe was ambassador to South Korea for four years before he was reassigned to Tokyo in April last year. If things go smoothly, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi will visit Seoul next month as earlier planned to break the eight-month old diplomatic deadlock once and for all, the sources said.

DPRK OFFICIAL DISCUSSES FISHERY ACCORD

OW182353 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 1430 GMT 18 Apr 82

[Text] According to correspondent Yokosawa in Pyongyang, Hyon Chun-kuk, deputy director of the Korean Workers Party International Department, met with Japanese journalists in Pyongyang this afternoon.

At the meeting, he said that it is up to Japan whether the Japan-DPRK fishery agreement, which is to expire in June, is renewed or not. The fishery agreement is a private-level accord which is renewable every 2 years. The current accord is set to expire this coming June.

At today's meeting, Deputy Director Hyon said: Last year the Japanese side proposed that the fishery talks be conducted in Tokyo; however, the Japanese authorities have thus far refused to allow our delegation entry into Japan. The DPRK has nothing to lose if the accord is not renewed. The renewal of the accord is up to Japan.

GROUP LEADER ON DPRK VISIT, ROLE OF KIM CHONG-IL

[Text] Tokyo, April 13, KYODO -- Akira Iwai, former secretary-general of the powerful General Council of Trade Unions of Japan (Sohyo), told reporters here Tuesday that after talks with North Korean President Kim Il-song and other Korean officials, he was convinced Kim Chong-il, son of the president, would replace his father.

A delegation led by Iwai and representing a Japanese committee supporting Korea's independent peaceful unification, recently returned home after visiting North Korea to celebrate the birth of Kim Il-song who will become 70 years old Thursday. Iwai had a 90-minute talk with Kim Il-song in Pyongyang on March 31. He also had talks with other government officials and observed various facilities as well as housing for North Korean workers.

He told reporters that during his visit he was impressed with the fact that North Korean people call Kim Chong-il "dear center of the party," the most honorific title. Iwai said that he was also impressed with the campaign to promote the son of the North Korean president, which included the screening of a 90-minute film depicting him.

Contrary to earlier expectations, Kim Chong-il was not elected a vice president or minister at the recent Supreme People's Assembly of North Korea, which ended April 6. Iwai told reporters that he did not know the reason why the younger Kim did not obtain a position, but said that only the president and his son held the three posts of permanent member, secretary and member of the Military Committee in the Political Bureau of the Workers Party. Iwai said that fact suggested Kim Chong-il was virtually No. 2 in the North Korean party.
